

BRAVING A SAVAGE WORLD
Introduction

Warlords of Draenor follows the story of Azeroth's heroes on an unlikely journey to a world thought lost—the savage planet of Draenor, home of both orc and draenei alike. On Draenor, players find themselves pitted against the might of the Iron Horde, a massive, brutal army of orc clans bent on invading and conquering Azeroth. Warlords of Draenor has raised the level cap from 90 to 100, with new dungeons, raids, zones, enemies, and Garrisons, personalized fortresses from which players can command armies of their own!

WORLD OF WARCRAFT

BRAVING A SAVAGE WORLD

New Features

A NEW START

All classic and Burning Crusade races have received updated models in the latest expansion, with fully articulated animation, expression, and emotion. In addition, each Warlords of Draenor license grants one level 90 boost. You can create a new character at level 90, or advance an existing character and immediately play through the most current content with the boost feature. Players that choose to begin at level 90 will play through an exciting new introductory experience that takes place at the heart of the Iron Horde's armies—the Dark Portal. Begin the game with new eyes and a fresh start alongside Azeroth's long standing heroes in a frantic battle to end the Iron Horde's siege of Azeroth before it has a chance to truly begin.

NEW ZONES

Warlords of Draenor features seven new zones to explore. After the introductory experience, Alliance players will make their way to Shadowmoon Valley, home to the draenei temple of Karabor, while Horde players will find themselves in Frostfire Ridge, frozen home to the Frostwolf clan. From these starting zones, players will begin to lay the foundation for an army with the potential of bringing down the Iron Horde.

GROUNDED!

The savage skies of Draenor are no place for the unskilled! They're also incredibly inviting for a fly at the onset of this expansion. However, all flying mounts have been upgraded with the capability to be used as ground mounts as well—no need to leave your favorites behind.

DRAENOR (LEVELS 90-100)

Although Horde and Alliance players will find themselves separated after the initial introductory experience, players of both factions will begin to level through the wilds of Draenor in due time. Each of Draenor's zones has an assigned level range for leveling—but don't be surprised if you are asked to return to these zones at any given point in time.

TANAAN JUNGLE (LEVEL 90)

Your journey in Draenor begins in the jungles of Tanaan, where the Iron Horde has constructed a massive Dark Portal to link Draenor with Azeroth and send their armies to conquer the land. In this exciting, action-packed Introduction to Draenor, you fight your way through the armies of the Iron Horde and attempt the seemingly impossible task of bringing down the Dark Portal and ending the Iron Horde's incursion into Azeroth once and for all.

BOOST OF CONFIDENCE

Players that have used their level 90 boost to begin in Tanaan Jungle receive all class abilities and talents as they level through the zone. By the time your work in Tanaan is complete, you'll be well-equipped to handle whatever challenges Draenor brings!

FROSTFIRE RIDGE (LEVELS 90-92 – HORDE)

Horde players establish their foothold in Draenor in Frostfire Ridge, home to both the Frostwolf and Thunderlord clans. Frostfire is a zone of extremes—a frozen wasteland punctuated by jutting rocks and active volcanoes. In addition to orc clans, the zone is also occupied by the Bloodmaul ogres who run the Bloodmaul Slag Mines, the first of Draenor's dungeons.

SHADOWMOON VALLEY (LEVELS 90-92 – ALLIANCE)

Alliance players begin their adventures on Draenor in Shadowmoon Valley, a lush valley of eternal night. The serene, tranquil forests and plains are also home to the Shadowmoon clan of orcs. Led by Ner'zhul, the Shadowmoon have begun experimenting with powers beyond their control and seek to lead the Iron Horde to the heart of draenei civilization. In addition to inviting, players will find themselves making a return to the valley and the Shadowmoon Burial Grounds, a dungeon for level 100 players.

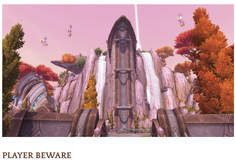

GORGROND (LEVELS 92-94)

The northern reaches of Gorgrond are a barren wasteland, the industrial heart of the Iron Horde and birthplace of the great verdak war machines. Yet Gorgrond has not always been such a cesspool of blackened, rusting metal and instead an overgrown jungle of wild vines and jungle that seems to have a life, and deadly poisons of its own. Gorgrond is home to several dungeons: The Everbloom, Grimrail Depot, and the Iron Docks. It is also home to the Blackrock Foundry, one of Draenor's first raids.

TALADOR (LEVELS 94-96)

Located at the heart of Draenor, Talador's strategic location is of particular interest to the Iron Horde. The northern coasts have already come under attack, leaving the region in a state of shambles. Help the people of Talador in the Alcaidus. But there are other concerns to Talador as well. The alleged Auchindoun is in a barren landscape that is the striking place for all draenei souls. As a source of potential power, it has attracted the attention of forces far more sinister than the Iron Horde.

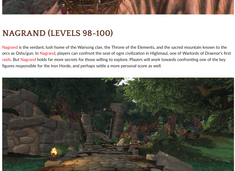

PLAYER BEWARE

Although Shattrath City may be a neutral hub in Outland, Pre'shiv is very different on Draenor. Be wary when approaching the sunken trade capital of the Vekaree, as it has captured the attention of several powerful enemies.

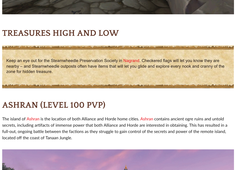

SPIRES OF ARAK (LEVELS 96-98)

The Spires of Arak are home to the arakkoa and the encroaching orc clan of the Shattered Hand. Mysterious and reclusive, the arakkoa and their society are torn in the middle of a conflict between the winged Adherents of Rukhmar and the cursed, flightless Outcasts. The dungeon of Skyreach is located in Spires of Arak, as well as Rukhmar herself, who periodically circles the skies of the zone as a world raid boss.

NAGRAND (LEVELS 98-100)

Nagrand is the verdant, lush home of the Warsong clan, the Throne of the Elements, and the sacred mountain known to the orcs as Oshu'gun. In Nagrand, players can confront the next of epic civilization in Highmaul, one of Warlords of Draenor's first raids. But Nagrand holds far more secrets for those willing to explore. Players will work towards confronting one of the key figures responsible for the Iron Horde, and perhaps settle a more personal score as well.

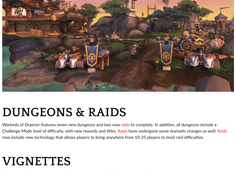

TREASURES HIGH AND LOW

Keep an eye out for the Stormsheede Preservation Society in Nagrand. Checkered flags will let you know they are nearby. The Stormsheede outposts often have items that will let you glide and explore every nook and cranny of the area for hidden treasure.

ASHRAN (LEVEL 100 PVP)

The island of Ashran is the location of both Alliance and Horde home cities. Ashran contains ancient epic ruins and untold secrets, including artifacts of immense power that both Alliance and Horde are interested in obtaining. This has resulted in a full-out, ongoing battle between the factions as they struggle to gain control of the secrets and power of the remote island, located off the coast of Tanaan Jungle.

DUNGEONS & RAIDS

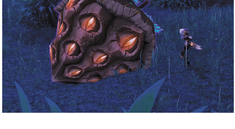

Warlords of Draenor features seven new dungeons and two new raids to complete. In addition, all dungeons include a Challenge Mode level of difficulty, with new rewards and titles. Raids have undergone some dramatic changes as well. Raids now include new technology that allows players to bring anywhere from 10-25 players to most raid difficulties.

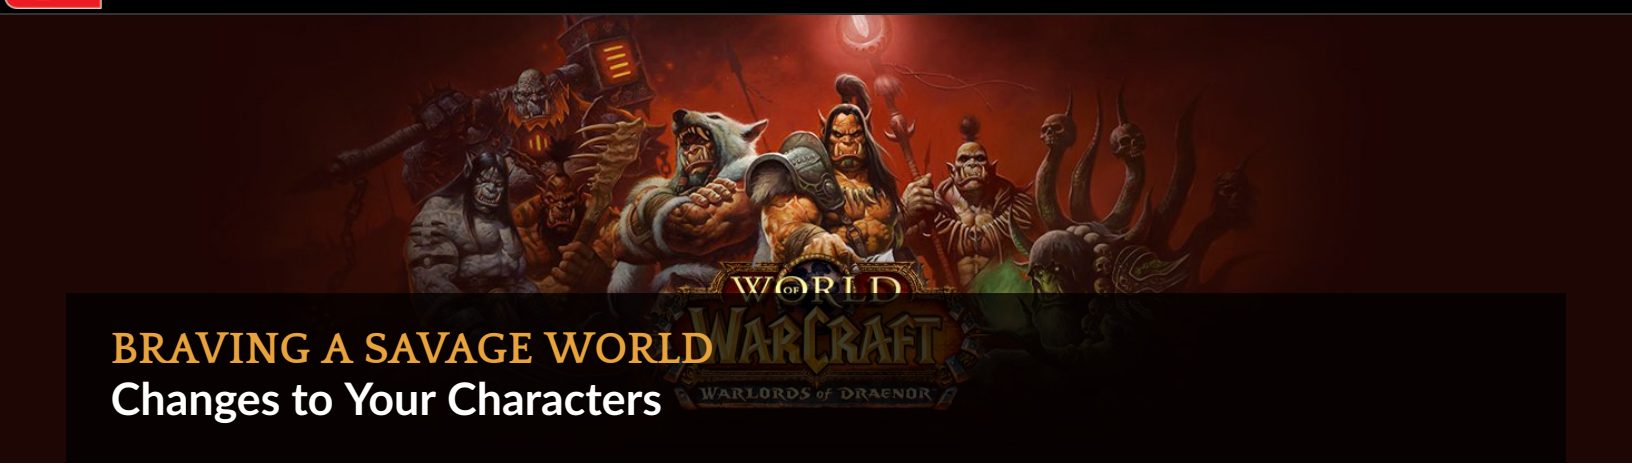

VIGNETTES

Questing in Draenor has also received some updates. In addition to a vast array of quests to complete, vignettes have been added all over the world. There are bonus objectives that can be completed in addition to existing quests for more loot, gold, experience, and more.

HIDDEN TREASURES

Hidden treasure chests have made an abundant return in Warlords of Draenor. While everyone can see these chests and items, each treasure is unique to the client it was looted from and can't be seen again by that player once looted. There are far more of these hidden treasures than ever before—some easy to find, some requiring dedicated exploration to discover. In addition to hidden treasure, Draenor is riddled with hundreds of rare creatures who may prove challenging to fight, but hold a variety of loot, toys, gold, and other unique rewards for those that successfully defeat them.

BRAVING A SAVAGE WORLD
Changes to Your Characters

STAT CHANGES

Hit, Expertise, Dodge, and Parry have all been removed from the game and are instead being replaced with Bonus Armor, a tank-specific stat that is found on rings, necklaces, cloaks, and trinkets. Spirit is now specifically for healing classes, and it can also be found on rings, necklaces, cloaks, and trinkets. All other armor slots feature dynamic stats. For example, a Feral or Guardian Druid that is wearing bracers with agility will find the agility changes automatically to intellect when the Druid switches to Balance or Restoration.

SECONDARY STATS

Two new secondary stats have been introduced to the game. Multistrike grants your spells, abilities, and auto-attacks additional chances to activate. Versatility grants additional increase to your damage, healing, and absorbs, and reduces the damage you take.

In addition, most gear that drops in Warlords of Draenor has a chance for a random bonus in addition to its normal stats. These minor stats provide a small, but useful, bonus to your character.

Movement Speed increases the speed you move by a small amount.

Avoidance reduces the amount of damage you take from AoE attacks.

Indestructible items that have this stat no longer take durability damage.

Leech heals you for a portion of all damage and healing done.

In addition to having a chance to receive one of these four stats, loot and rewards from quests also have a random chance to be automatically upgraded to rare or even epic quality.

GARRISONS

Your Garrison is your stronghold in the wild and savage lands of Draenor, a customizable fortress for you and your recruited followers as you level and play through each of Draenor's zones. Send your followers on missions to bring back rewards; create buildings to unlock special quests and objectives; craft a variety of different materials, gear, potions and more; capture and tame exotic mounts—the possibilities are endless.

NEW LEVEL 100 TALENTS

A new set of talents can now be unlocked once you reach level 100. In addition, some talent trees now change based on what specialization you choose, allowing for more versatility in customizing your character in a way that works best for your playing preferences.

DRAENOR PERKS

Draenor Perks are a new reward for players leveling from 90-100 in Warlords of Draenor. These perks are small bonuses to existing abilities, unique to each class, and they are randomly assigned at level 92, 94, 96, and 98. Perks are determined based on specialization and automatically change if you change your specialization while doing dungeons, raiding, or just leveling out in the world.

BRAVING A SAVAGE WORLD
Interface Changes

QUEST INTERFACE

You can still track your quests via the quest interface, but the quest window has received some updates in Warlords of Draenor. The quest window now includes a small-scale map that allows you to more easily locate and keep track of objectives and quest NPCs. The map dynamically changes as you look through the quests you have yet to complete.

Keep a watchful eye around the world for vignettes. These dynamic scenarios occasionally appear in your quest tracker, offering additional objectives for you to complete while exploring and questing in Draenor. They disappear if you move out of the objective area, but you won't lose your progress if you do—simply travel back to the area later to resume the vignette where you left off.

BAG SPACE

Several new changes have been made to help you keep track of your items and free up additional space for all the new gear, items, and other fun rewards found on Draenor.

Quest items no longer take up valuable space in your bags. Instead, they are simply tracked in your quest tracker, leaving more room for more important things—like loot!

You can now customize your inventory by bag slot. Clicking on a bag icon allows you to choose what types of items you would like to be automatically placed in the bag. In addition, both your inventory and your bank now include a button that automatically sorts your loot based on item type. Vendor trash is now clearly indicated with a gold coin icon, so you know which items are safe to sell and which might warrant a closer look before getting rid of them.

You'll be gathering plenty of materials for professions as you travel Draenor. Reagents like ore and herbs now stack to 200, allowing you to carry more with less bag clutter. In addition, all personal banks now have a 98-slot reagent tab specifically for storing crafting ingredients. This tab includes a Deposit All Reagents button that automatically sorts the crafting materials from your bags and places them in your bank.

If you like to collect armor sets for transmogrification, Warlords of Draenor has introduced a second tab for Void Storage. While it still costs gold to deposit items into Void Storage, the transmogrification feature can now choose items that are in your bank or Void Storage – not just the items in your bags.

TOY BOX

In addition to all the other space savers, Warlords of Draenor introduces the Toy Box, an account-wide tab used to learn and store "toys." Toys are items that aren't necessarily offering improvements to your character's performance, but are in the game just for fun. This includes items that change your appearance, summon temporary illusions, offer cosmetic buffs, and more. Items that have been classified as a toy can be added to the Toy Box by right-clicking the item. Once a toy is learned, it can be used by any character on your account.

MOUNT IMPROVEMENTS

The world of Draenor has many new mounts to obtain and collect, and the Mount tab has been updated with new lore and information about every mount in the game. You can now sort your list to see what mounts you already have, what mounts you have left to collect, and where they can be obtained. Sort even further if you wish to see which mounts are rare drops, vendor purchased, available in the in-game store, and more.

Warlords of Draenor has also added the ability to create a list of favorite mounts. To mark a mount as a favorite, simply right-click the icon for the mount and choose "Set Favorite." This will add a star to the mount icon and move it to the top of your list of collected mounts. To remove the mount from your favorites, right-click the icon again and select "Remove Favorite."

If you have a long list of favorite mounts, a new Summon Random Favorite Mount button has been added to the mount tab—this button can be placed on your action bars as well. Pushing the button summons a random mount from the list of favorites you have marked.

PREMADE GROUPS

The Dungeon Finder isn't just for dungeons anymore! Added to the Dungeon Finder tab is a new Premade Groups feature that allows players to assemble groups for quests, classic raids, dungeons, or anything else they can think of. You can also use the feature to search for groups that are being assembled for things you'd like to do.

BRAVING A SAVAGE WORLD
Profession Changes

All professions now have their maximum skill level raised to 700 (Draenor Master). Professions are now even easier to learn and level than ever before, with no need to backtrack into old content to level up your skill. With the addition of Garrisons, you can now take advantage of far more than just the professions you've learned!

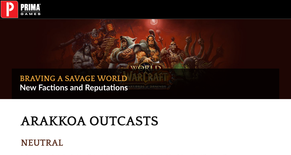

LEARNING & LEVELING

If you are a newly boosted level 90 character, don't worry about heading to trainers to learn each level of a profession before going to Draenor. Unique rare items that drop in Draenor will not only teach you a secondary profession if you haven't learned it, but they will also unlock your skill level all the way to 700, regardless of your current skill in that profession.

PROFESSIONS & GARRISONS

Among the many structure options for your Garrison is an assortment of buildings for each and every profession in the game. A mine, herb garden, and fishing pond are unlocked via Garrison quests, and you can gather herbs and ore even if you don't have the Herbalism or Mining profession. In addition, blueprints are available for every crafting profession in the game. Create a building to enhance production of a profession you've already learned, or choose a building that allows access to crafted materials you can't create yourself—the choice is up to you!

PLAYER VS PLAYER COMBAT

The Warlords of Draenor expansion introduces a new, large-scale world PvP zone off the coast of Tanaan Jungle. The island of Ashran includes two new faction cities: Warspear for the Horde, and Stormshield for the Alliance. These new towns are the centers of trade, commerce, and transportation for both factions on Draenor. But Ashran also holds an ongoing, never-ending battle in the middle of the island. Ashran features dynamic objectives that shift and change depending on the current status of the battle. You may find yourself on the offensive one moment, and then switching to defensive play and gathering supplies the next. The battle on Ashran is ever-evolving, and has no clear beginning, middle, or end—you can join the battle as you see fit, and leave the battle at any time.

PROVING YOURSELF
Proving Yourself

The dungeons of Draenor are a daunting prospect to even the mightiest of Azeroth's heroes. In order to prove yourself worthy of entering Draenor's dungeons on Heroic difficulty, you must complete a series of solo trials that test your ability to handle the toughest of challenges. These trials take place in a solo scenario located in the Temple of the White Tiger in Pandaria, called the Proving Grounds.

CHALLENGING TRIALS

The Proving Grounds test your ability in one of three roles in the game: tanking, healing, or dealing damage. Each trial has its own set of unique challenges designed to test your knowledge and skill. There are three different levels of difficulty for each role challenge: Bronze, Silver, and Gold. To participate in Draenor's dungeons on Heroic difficulty, you need to complete Silver difficulty for your specialization.

To begin, simply speak to your Mission Specialist, Lieutenant Thorn (Alliance) or Warmaster Zog (Horde), in your Garrison to enter the Proving Grounds. Once there, speak to Trial Master Rotun to begin the trial. Don't worry about getting your gear to a particular item level or quality; the Proving Grounds scale to a difficulty that best suits the gear you already have equipped, so no special gear or items are necessary. There are three different types of challenges in the Proving Grounds:

Basic Damage Challenge

The challenge for damage dealing players is fairly straightforward. Various groups of enemies appear in the Temple, and you must defeat them in a set time period. If you do not defeat the enemies before the timer expires, you lose the challenge.

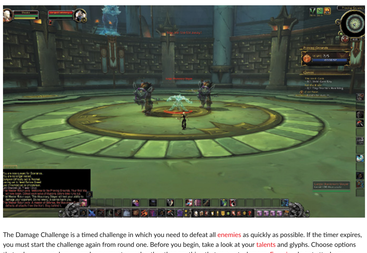

Basic Tank Challenge

For the tank challenge, players must protect an NPC healer and damage dealer, picking up all enemies that spawn and keeping them off of the NPC. If either you or the NPC are damaged down to zero health, you lose the challenge.

Basic Healer Challenge

Healers encounter a group of four NPCs in their challenge. The group will need to be healed through several encounters. If any member of your group is allowed to reach zero health, you lose the challenge.

BASIC DAMAGE CHALLENGE

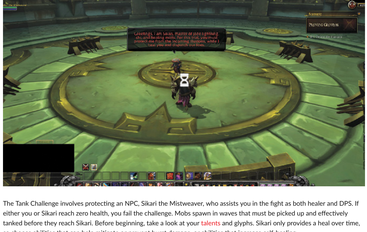

The Damage Challenge is a timed challenge in which you need to defeat all enemies as quickly as possible. If the timer expires, you must start the challenge again from round one. Before you begin, take a look at your talents and glyphs. Choose options that enhance your damage and movement speed, rather than anything that prevents damage. Enemies do not attack you directly, but several types have plenty of health or abilities that can slow you down.

All enemies come in two versions, Small and Large. Larger enemies have more health and take longer to defeat. Some enemies have spells and abilities that might seem counterproductive, but can actually help you kill other enemies faster. There are eight different types of enemies.

Enemy	Description	Note
Illusionary Amber-Weaver	Amber-Weavers create Amber Globules. The Globule explodes when it strikes an enemy, encasing it in amber and increasing damage taken by 50%.	Avoid being hit by the Amber Globule, but use its effect to your advantage by kiting it over your enemies.
Illusionary Banana-Thrower	Banana-Throwers run around the room and cast Fan of Bananas, which will slow down your attacks.	Use your stuns, slows, and crowd-control abilities to halt these enemies in their tracks and prevent them from casting Fan of Bananas.
Illusionary Banshee	Banshees are lethal. After 10 seconds, Banshees detonate the timer and instantly end your challenge. Large Banshees do so after 15 seconds.	Kill these enemies immediately. They should be top priority if they appear.
Illusionary Mystic	Mystics are healers that quickly overcompensate for any damage you put out.	The healing spell that Mystics cast can be interrupted. Most crowd-control and stun abilities also work against these enemies.
Illusionary Guardian	Guardians like to hide behind a projected shield that deflects all damage taken.	You can damage these enemies by standing behind them, negating the effect of their shield.
Illusionary Sha	Sha have two phases: one with a Protection Shield, during which they take 50% less damage; and one in which the shield drops and they take 300% more damage. They also have a considerable amount of health.	Save your big abilities and cooldowns for when the Protection Shield drops and the enemy is vulnerable.
Illusionary Slayer	Slayers do no damage at all; they simply stand in one place with no special attacks.	Slayers are fairly low priority, as they do no damage.
Illusionary Varmint	Varmints have no attacks or special abilities, but they always appear in groups.	These enemies have fairly low health. Use your AoE abilities to quickly take them out.

BASIC TANK CHALLENGE

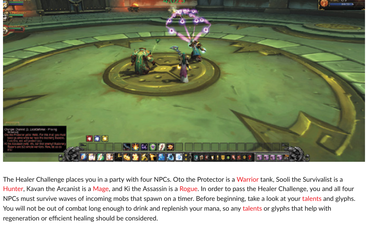

The Tank Challenge involves protecting an NPC, Sikari the Mistweaver, who assists you in the fight as both healer and DPS. If either you or Sikari reach zero health, you fail the challenge. Mobs spawn in waves that must be picked up and effectively tanked before they reach Sikari. Before beginning, take a look at your talents and glyphs. Sikari only provides a heal over time, so choose abilities that can help mitigate or prevent burst damage, or abilities that increase self-healing.

Enemies in the Tank Challenge come in both Large and Small versions. Large enemies have far more health and do more damage. Almost every mob you encounter immediately runs to Sikari, so for the most part, keep close to her. AoE crowd-control abilities, kiting, and abilities that spawn NPCs can all be fairly helpful. There are six different types of enemies to defeat in the Tank Challenge.

Enemy	Description	Note
Illusionary Ripper	Rippers do not have any kind of special attacks.	Rippers are fairly low-priority targets and are only really threatening when they appear in packs.
Illusionary Forager	Foragers like to Chomp their targets. This attack has a stacking debuff that does increasing amounts of damage.	While Foragers can be difficult to defeat in larger packs, they can be crowd-controlled to diminish Chomp's devastating damage.
Illusionary Flamecaller	Flamecallers create Lava Pools. Standing in the Laval Pool burns you, but it also burns enemies. Small Flamecallers also cast Fireball, while Large Flamecallers cast Pyroblast.	Avoid any Lava Pools on the ground. Kite your enemies into the pools to defeat them more efficiently.
Illusionary Wind-Guard	Wind-Guards cast a spell called Wing Blast, which not only knocks you back across the room, it also reduces the threat you have generated by 99%.	A taunt negates Wind Blast's threat-reduction effect. However, you'll want to position yourself so that you are knocked towards Sikari, to taunt the enemies back quickly.
Illusionary Ambusher	Ambushers use Fan of Bananas, which deals a large amount of AoE damage.	You must tank the Ambushers far away from Sikari, so the Fan of Bananas doesn't hit her.
Illusionary Conqueror	Conquerors have two fairly deadly abilities. Powerful Slam deals large amounts of damage and stuns, and Enrage causes the Conqueror to gain 200% increased damage, 50% increased attack speed, 150% increased movement speed, and immunity to crowd-control.	Powerful Slam is a cone effect cast in front of the Conqueror. Move out of the way before it goes off. Save your big defensive cooldowns in order to survive the Conqueror's Enrage damage.

BASIC HEALER CHALLENGE

The Healer Challenge places you in a party with four NPCs. Oto the Protector is a Warrior tank, Sooli the Survivalist is a Hunter, Kavan the Arcanist is a Mage, and Ki the Assassin is a Rogue. In order to pass the Healer Challenge, you and all four NPCs must survive waves of incoming mobs that spawn on a timer. Before beginning, take a look at your talents and glyphs. You will not be out of combat long enough to drink and replenish your mana, so any talents or glyphs that help with regeneration or efficient healing should be considered.

Enemies in the Healer Challenge come in Large and Small versions. Large enemies typically do more damage and have more health. The key to the Healer Challenge lies in choosing the right heals at the right time in order to heal efficiently without draining your mana pool. There are six different types of mobs your group faces during the challenge.

Enemy	Description	Note
Illusionary Ripper	Rippers have no special attacks. They are the only mobs that can be crowd-controlled.	Rippers are the only mobs that can be crowd-controlled by anything other than a stun. If you have any crowd-control abilities, use them freely on the Rippers to help negate any damage being dealt.
Illusionary Hive-Singer	Hive-Singers cast an AoE spell called Sonic Blast that does damage to the entire party.	Sonic Blast requires spells that heal the entire group at once. The spell can be interrupted, however. If your class has a stun or interrupt ability, use it on these mobs to help offset the damage being dealt.
Illusionary Flamecaller	Flamecallers cast a spell that causes Lava Pools to collect on the ground. After casting this, they switch to casting Fireball if they are Small, or Pyroblast if they are Large.	Make sure to stay out of Lava Pools, and watch your party closely to heal anyone that may have taken damage from one. Pyroblast tends to do a lot of damage, so make sure you're watching whom the Flamecallers are targeting, and keep that person healed.
Illusionary Aqualyte	Aqualytes mainly focus on damaging the tank, but they also cast Aqua Bomb on a random party member who then takes damage every second for 6 seconds, until they explode, dealing damage and knocking back anyone nearby.	Dispel Aqua Bomb as quickly as possible to negate any possible explosion damage or knockback effects.
Illusionary Tunneler	Tunnelers tunnel under the ground to a random party member and cast Chomp. This ability leaves a damage over time debuff on the target that will not be removed until the target is healed up to 90% of their health.	Healing the Chomp target as quickly as possible is top priority, especially if the Tunnelers are targeting the tank. Use your fastest heals, and keep people topped off between waves of Tunnelers.
Illusionary Conqueror	Conquerors hit very hard, and also have an Enrage that increases their melee damage for 10 seconds. Usually, Conquerors are only up long enough to cast one Enrage, but sometimes they can get away with two before they are defeated.	Save your biggest healing cooldowns for Oto the Protector, as he will be getting hit very hard during the Conqueror's Enrage. Oto does have a Shield Wall ability, and he uses it if it's available, so watch to make sure you aren't casting any of your important cooldowns while his Shield Wall is up and active.

WORLD DUNGEONS
Introduction

The uncharted, brutal lands of Draenor feature not only new territory to explore, but also new dungeons to conquer on your journey to defeat the Iron Horde. The Warlords of Draenor expansion features seven new dungeons, as well as an updated, reimagined version of one of World of Warcraft's classics. These new dungeons open up as you level, and all dungeons are available to complete on Heroic difficulty at level 100, as well as Challenge Mode difficulty for those who want to test their mettle against the toughest of Draenor's foes.

WORLD DUNGEONS
Dungeon Journal

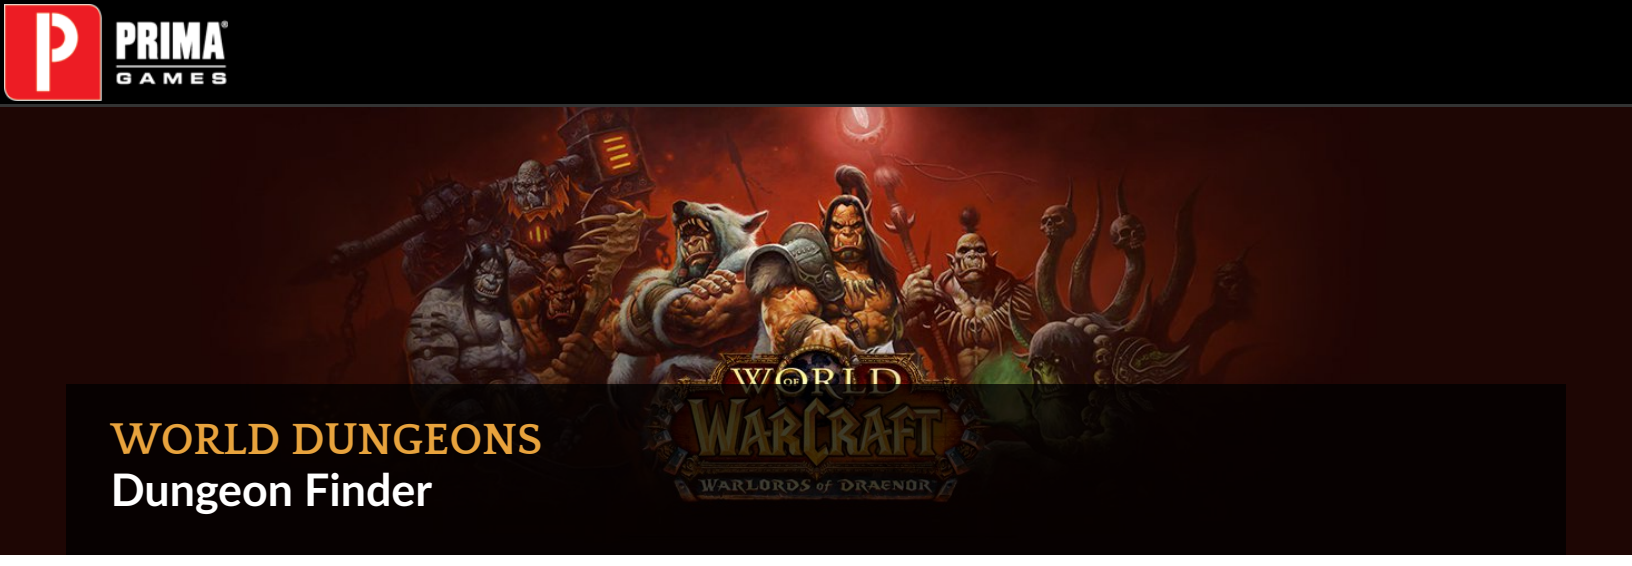

The Dungeon Journal contains a wealth of information about various dungeons, raids, and world boss encounters you'll come across in Draenor. To open the Dungeon Journal, simply click on the book icon in the interface bar, or hold down Shift and press the letter "j." Alternatively, you may also click a boss icon while viewing a dungeon's map to bring up the Dungeon Journal entry for that boss.

Navigate the Dungeon Journal by using the dropdown bar to choose between expansions and dungeons. To learn more about a particular boss, choose the dungeon in which the boss is located, and click on the boss icon. You can then view abilities and what to pay attention to during the encounter, along with a loot list with drops that are relevant to you. The Dungeon Journal also includes a list of helpful icons to denote which abilities require close attention.

Icons In The Dungeon Journal

	Heroic Ability Only

WORLD DUNGEONS
Dungeon Finder

The Dungeon Finder tool now makes it even easier to locate a group for a dungeon. Click the green Dungeon Finder icon or press the letter “i” to open the interface and begin. Through the Dungeon Finder, you may queue for any of Draenor’s dungeons and raids. Choose your preferred role or roles (Tank, Healer, Damage) by clicking on the appropriate icon.

If you are choosing more than one role, make sure to note which role you have been chosen to fill upon entering a dungeon. If you are comfortable with dungeons and don’t mind giving other players guidance on encounters, you may also check the green flag icon to indicate you are willing to be a dungeon guide.

You may choose between queueing for specific Draenor dungeons, or random dungeons. If you would like a specific dungeon, check the desired dungeon from the full list. Choosing a random dungeon only queues you for dungeons for which you meet the minimum requirements, so no need to worry about being too low-level or under-geared to successfully complete a dungeon.

PREMADE GROUPS

In addition to dungeons and raids, the Dungeon Finder now features a Premade Groups option. The Premade Groups feature allows you to put together a group for virtually anything you can do in World of Warcraft: questing, classic dungeons and raids, current dungeons and raids, or any other content that you’d like to complete. With the Premade Groups feature, you can either search for a group already in progress or create your own customized listing for other interested players to find.

To create a Premade Group, select the type of content you wish to create a group for: Questing, Dungeons, Scenarios, Legacy Raids, or Custom. Click Start a Group, and fill in the blanks to let players know where you are going, what you are hoping to accomplish there, any additional details they might need to know, and the minimum item level you’d like to see for players to participate. Once you’re finished, click List Group and wait for others to join.

If you don’t want to put together your own group listing, search to see if anyone is currently looking for more players to do the content you’d like to complete. When you find an appropriate group, ask to join.

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR

Bloodmaul Slag Mines

The Bloodmaul ogres of Frostfire Ridge have enslaved countless creatures from all across Draenor, forcing them to toil away the remainder of their lives in harsh conditions and sweltering heat. Freeing the slaves is of utmost importance, yet the Slag Mines hold secrets yet to be discovered, and the Bloodmaul ogres may be after more than just gemstones and ore...

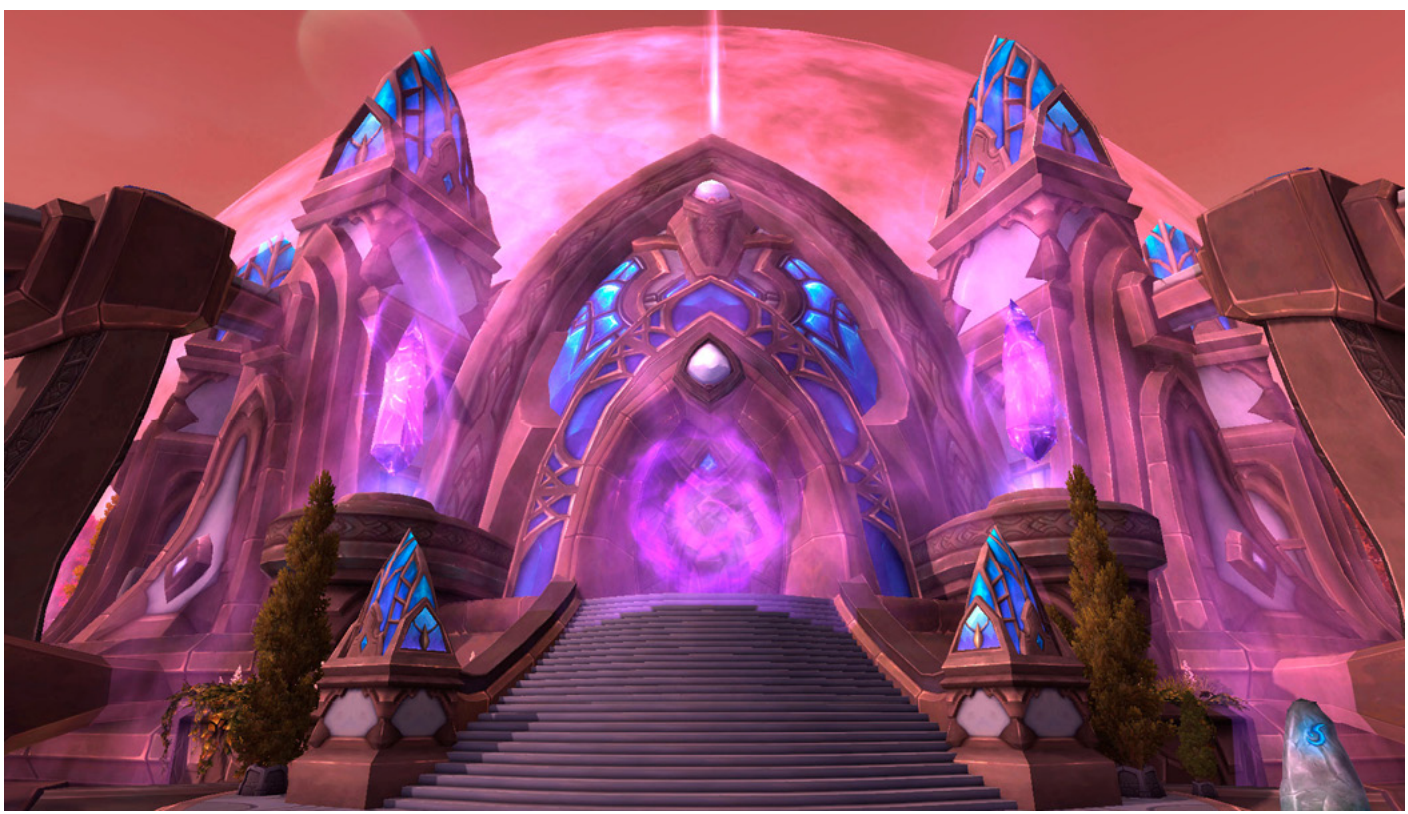

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR
Grimrail Depot

The Grimrail Depot is a transportation hub for the Iron Horde, moving troops and resources from the Blackrock Foundry to the front lines. The Grimrail, a massive train that is the namesake of the Depot, has been outfitted with a weapon capable of shattering the shield that protects the draenei city of Shattrath. Players must fight onto the Grimrail and find a way to bring the Iron Horde's plans to a halt.

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR
Auchindoun

Auchindoun is a sanctum of the Light and the home of those draenei who have lost their lives; a holy mausoleum meant to protect the spirits of the dead from the hungering grasp of the Burning Legion. But the powers of the fallen dead have attracted the attention of Gul'dan and his Shadow Council, and it is up to players to prevent Auchindoun's fall.

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR

Skyreach

High atop the highest peak of the Spires of Arak is Skyreach, the seat of power of the Adherents of Rukhmar. Here, the arakkoa have gathered and harnessed Apexis technology and now stand ready to unleash the very wrath of the sun itself upon any who may stand in their way.

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR

The Everbloom

The Kirin Tor have created outposts across Draenor with magical links back to Azeroth in order to open supply lines for reinforcements. But a strategic location near the Blackrock Foundry turned out to be a sacred place to the native botani of Draenor. The twisting vines and vicious plant life of the Everbloom has quickly taken over, yet the outpost still contains a link to the outskirts of Stormwind…

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR
Shadowmoon Burial Grounds

In Shadowmoon Valley, Ner'zhul, fallen chieftain of the Shadowmoon Clan has sacrificed his very soul in a desperate bid for power. Within the Shadowmoon Burial Grounds, the tormented ancestral spirits of his people are now fuel for dark rituals that may pull all of Draenor into the void if he cannot be stopped.

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR

Iron Docks

The Iron Docks are the heart of the Iron Horde's naval might, holding massive warships and artillery, as well as the great beasts of Draenor that serve alongside the Iron Horde's ground troops. As an influential cog in the Iron Horde's relentless war machine, the Iron Docks and the infantry that trains upon it must be taken out.

NEW DUNGEONS FOR WARLORDS OF DRAENOR

Upper Blackrock Spire (Updated)

Once home to the black dragon Nefarian and his brood, the upper halls of Blackrock Spire now host the Ironmarch vanguard as a staging ground for the Iron Horde's invasion of Azeroth. But the heart of Blackrock Mountain contains another, far more terrifying secret: a doomsday weapon waiting to be unleashed.

RAIDS

Raiding in Draenor

Raids have received some exciting new updates in Warlords of Draenor. Raiding difficulty levels have been reworked to allow players to choose exactly how challenging they want their content to be. In addition, a new mechanic for building raid groups was introduced in Mists of Pandaria that continues to be influential in Warlords.

FLEXIBLE RAIDING

Mists of Pandaria introduced Flexible Raiding to the raiding system. With Flexible Raiding, players could invite anywhere from 10-25 players to a raid group, and the difficulty of the raid and its mobs would scale to match however many players were included. Flexible Raiding was introduced as its own level of difficulty that ranked just above Raid Finder, and below Normal Difficulty. As its own level of difficulty, it had its own distinct tier of rewards.

In Warlords of Draenor, this Flexible mode of raiding is no longer its own difficulty. Instead, the ability to bring however many players you have on hand is being applied to all but the highest difficulty level of content. Because of this, raid difficulty levels have been re-named to reflect the change. In addition, while Raid Finder, Normal, and Heroic difficulties allow you to bring anywhere from 10-25 players, the new Mythic difficulty is set to a limit of 20 players.

New Raid Structure

Mists of Pandaria	Warlords of Draenor
Raid Finder (25 players)	Raid Finder (10-25 players)
Flexible (10-25 players)	Normal (10-25 players)
Normal (10 players)Normal (25 players)	Heroic (10-25 players)
Heroic (10 players)Heroic (25 players)	Mythic (20 players)

Because of these changes to how raids are put together, players can now create both Normal and Heroic raids with their Real ID and BattleTag cross-realm friends. In addition, all raids are now on separate lockouts. If you feel up to the challenge, you can complete each raid in each difficulty once per week.

RAIDS

New Raids in Draenor

Highmaul

Located in Nagrand, Highmaul is the seat of power for the Gorian Empire, the ogre civilization that ruled Draenor for generations until the arrival of the draenei. In the wake of Grommash Hellscream's rise to power and the unification of the orc clans, the ogres have reluctantly allied with the Iron Horde.

Blackrock Foundry

The Blackrock Foundry is the ancestral home of the Blackrock clan, and now the center of the Iron Horde's military might. The Blackrock no longer work alone, aided by monstrous giants caught and broken by the Thunderlord clan, and the flamebenders of the Burning Blade. In the heart of the Foundry, massive forges churn out the weaponry that strengthens the Iron Horde.

RAIDS

World Bosses

The citadels of the Iron Horde and its allies are not the only creatures players have to contend with on Draenor. Throughout the world, monstrous creatures await those with the bravery and courage to defeat them.

Drov The Ruiner

Few understand the true purpose of the magnaron, or their ultimate purpose in the frozen wastes of Draenor. Thought to be descended from the immense colossals that once freely roamed the surface of the world, Drov was dubbed Ruiner by the Blackrock clans of old. Travelers in northern Gorgrond may find themselves face to face with this giant of molten stone.

Tarlna The Ageless

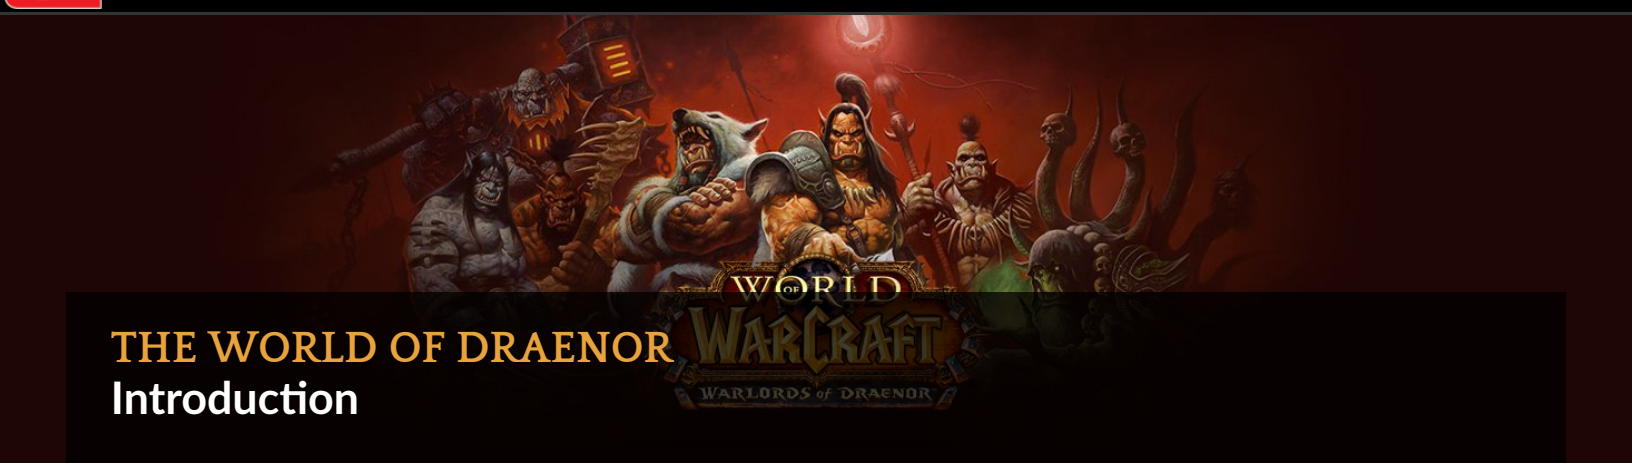

It is rumored that before the ancient genesaur called Tarlna arrived in Gorgrond, the ground was a barren wasteland. Though little is known of the genesaur, some say the creatures are immortal. The lesser Primals view the beasts as demigods. Perhaps those that discover Tarlna the Ageless in Gorgrond can seek the truths of these claims, and whatever rewards await those that can slay the beast.

Rukhmar

Rukhmar, bright deity of the arakkoa, is viewed by some as the embodiment of the sun itself. The blazing firehawk can occasionally be glimpsed soaring through the skies of the Spires of Arak. Although her exact origins are unknown, wayward adventurers in the Spires of Arak might find themselves confronting her face to face.

THE WORLD OF DRAENOR
Introduction

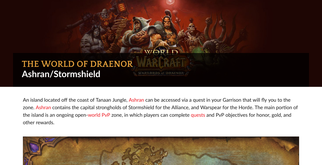

The following pages include the maps for the regions of Draenor in alphabetical order. Each region includes information on fishing, resources, and quests, as well as reputation information.

HERBS AND ORE

Resources in Draenor work differently than any prior expansion. While fish are generally either coastal or inland and found in certain zones, all ore and herbs can be found all over the continent. In addition, your Garrison Mine and Herb Garden will produce a variety of herbs commonly found all over Draenor.

THE WORLD OF DRAENOR
Gorgrond

Gorgrond is a zone of both harsh wastelands and overgrown jungle. The Iron Horde's center of production lies to the far north, where the Iron Docks dungeon, Grimrail Depot dungeon, and Blackrock Foundry raid can all be found. To the east, the lush overgrowth of Highpass hides the entrance to the Everbloom Dungeon. While Horde players will begin questing on the western half of the zone, where Gorgrond connects to Frostfire Ridge, Alliance players will fly in from Shadowmoon Valley and begin their quests on the east coast.

ADVENTURER BEWARE

Gorgrond is a zone of dangerous extremes, and explorers should be on the lookout for not one but two world raid bosses in the area. Drov the Ruiner is tucked away near Blackrock Foundry in the north, and Tarlna the Ageless is in the southern overgrowth.

WORLD OF WARCRAFT

Nagrand

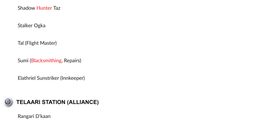

Located to the west of Talador, Nagrand can be accessed through a narrow valley on its eastern border. One of the largest landmarks in Nagrand is Oshu'gun, a mountain seemingly made out of crystal – but the interior of Oshu'gun tells a very different story of the mountain's true origins. The ogre capital of Highmaul takes up a vast chunk of Nagrand's western coast, and is one of Draenor's raids.

THE WORLD OF DRAENOR
Shadowmoon Valley

Alliance players begin their journey in Shadowmoon Valley, land of eternal night. The eastern coast of the zone is the location of Karabor, sacred temple of the draenei and target of the Iron Horde. Although draenei structures and towns make up much of the zone, Shadowmoon Valley is also home to the Shadowmoon clan of orcs. While some exiles have taken refuge in the north, most of the Shadowmoon are in Anguish Fortress, which is also the location of the Shadowmoon Burial Grounds dungeon.

THE WORLD OF DRAENOR
Talador

Talador is the heart of Draenor, the center of the continent. It borders Gorgrond to the north, Shadowmoon Valley to the east, the Spires of Arak to the south, and Nagrand to the west. Nestled along the north coast is Shattrath, trade capital of the draenei and prime target for the Iron Horde. Centrally located in the zone is Auchindoun, the sacred resting place for the souls of lost draenei, and one of Draenor's dungeons.

PLAYER VS. PLAYER COMBAT
World PvP

PvP Combat involves engaging in battle with other players, rather than creatures roaming the world. There are several different ways that players can engage in PvP. Battlegrounds are large-scale instances where groups of players work towards a common objective, usually involving capturing and defending points on a map, or gathering resources. World PvP is simply when two or more players clash out in the world while doing quests or simply exploring. Arenas and Rated Battlegrounds are available for players who want to focus on PvP as a method of earning ranks, titles, and prestige. Skirmishes are small-scale battles like Arenas, but have no ranking at all—they're just for fun!

DUELING

Dueling another player is a good way to practice your PvP skills. You can duel on any kind of server, and you can duel players from either faction.

To start a duel, right-click on a player's portrait and click "Duel." A duel flag appears, and your opponent can choose to accept or decline. If they accept, a countdown begins, indicating when the duel will start. A duel ends when one player's health is reduced to 1, if one of the dueling players runs too far from the duel flag, or if a player simply forfeits the match.

Outside of an achievement, there are no tangible rewards to dueling other players. You cannot gain Honor in this way, nor can you loot anything from your opponents. The person who loses the duel doesn't actually die, so they won't have to deal with durability loss or reclaiming their body.

WORLD PVP: PVP SERVERS

On PvP servers, Horde and Alliance players are actively at war. Anytime you enter neutral, contested, or enemy territory, you can be attacked by players of the opposite faction. This completely changes the nature of the game; while you are completing quests, you must also look for and defend against the enemy. Many players on PvP servers game with regular groups for protection.

PvP kills of the opposite faction yield Honor. But you never know what's ahead. Even if you find a solo character and kill them, they could have friends waiting in the wings to swoop down and take you out!

PvP deaths that don't involve damage from monsters or falling won't cost you money. There isn't a durability loss as a result of these fights. You must still run back and claim your body or resurrect at a graveyard, though.

WORLD PVP: PVE SERVERS

If you are on a PvE server, you must actively choose to engage in PvP combat. Right-click your own character portrait and click PvP-Enable. You can now engage in PvP with other players who have turned on their PvP flags. Alternatively, you can simply type /PvP in your chat window. Whether you click Disable, or type /PvP, your PvP flag will remain active for another 5 minutes before dropping. If you hop on a flight path after disabling, you will automatically drop your PvP flag without the timer.

You can tell that another player is flagged for PvP because their colors change. If you are not yourself flagged, PvP flagged players will look like a neutral target when you target them. As soon as you flag, they become red, signaling that combat can initiate at any time. Honor rewards and combat dynamics are exactly the same on PvE and PvP servers. The only difference between the servers is that you must flag before you engage in PvP on PvE servers.

If you get in over your head, enemies might kill you and corpse camp your character. That means that they wait for you to resurrect near your body, hoping to kill you again. Disable your flag and wait for 5 minutes, if necessary, to let your PvP flag fall. Doing so allows you to come back to life safely.

As an alternative, you can also call for help from buddies or from people in the region. Use /general chat to let other players know that flagged targets are in a certain area. Someone might show up for a free fight!

REWARDS

PvP rewards are typically purchased with either Honor or Conquest points, or earned by ranking. PvP specific armor is available to purchase or craft, from beginner sets all the way to the best sets available. Honor points are typically used to purchase lower-tier PvP gear, and Conquest points are used to purchase the highest tier of PvP gear available. Each season, a new tier of PvP specific armor sets and weapons is released, similar to tiers of armor released with different raids. PvP armor and weapons can be purchased from Quartermasters located in capital cities.

In addition to armor and weapons, players that actively participate in ranked PvP can work towards gaining the best ranking possible. Players in the top percentile of rankings in each Battlegroup at the end of a season will typically earn special rewards like titles or even mounts.

Some Battlegrounds have their own reputations associated with them. Gaining exalted reputation with these factions will grant you additional titles for your character.

PVP CURRENCY

You earn Honor Points by killing players from the opposing faction, or from Strongboxes earned by participating in Battlegrounds. If you accumulate enough points, you can use them to purchase items like PvP armor and weapons. Honor Points are listed in the Currency tab of your Character window. While there's no limit on how many Honor Points you earn each week, there is a limit on how many you can store at any given time. If you hit the cap, you must spend some Honor Points and you can start earning additional points immediately.

Conquest Points work similarly to Honor Points, but are a bit harder to obtain. Conquest Points come from participating in Arenas, Rated Battlegrounds, or taking part in Random Battlegrounds. There is a weekly cap on how many Conquest Points you can earn, and how many you can store at any given time.

When each new Arena season begins, all your Conquest Points are converted to Honor Points, and some of the Conquest Rewards from the previous season are made available for purchase with Honor Points.

PLAYER VS. PLAYER COMBAT
Battlegrounds

Battlegrounds are instanced PvP combat areas for players above level 10. Players fight Horde versus Alliance in a structured game setting. You can enter a battleground alone or with a group of comrades. For the best rewards, try queuing for Random Battlegrounds. You'll be pitted against players in a randomly determined Battleground, and whether you win or lose, you'll receive a Strongbox, which contains Honor, as well as many other potential valuable rewards. There are 11 total battlegrounds available to play, and they typically involve three different types of combat.

CAPTURE THE FLAG

Capture the Flag style battlegrounds involve capturing a flag and returning it to a certain objective point on the map. While this may sound easy enough, the opposing faction will also be trying to capture and return flags at the same time, resulting in a clash of PvP combat. If a player is killed while carrying a flag, that flag can either be picked up by another player, or returned to its base.

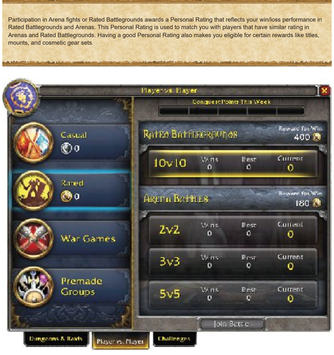

RESOURCE RACE

Resource Race Battlegrounds are a race between both sides that involves collecting a certain number of resources. These resources slowly count up over the course of the Battleground. To speed up the rate that resources are collected, players must complete certain objectives within the Battleground. This can include capturing and holding a point on the map, or even escorting carts of resources from one point on the map to another. The first team to reach the predetermined number of resources needed wins.

SIEGE AND VEHICULAR COMBAT

Siege Battlegrounds are usually won in one of two different ways, either by defeating a boss or capturing an objective in a fortified base; or by whittling down the enemy's reinforcements before they can defeat your boss or capture the objective for themselves. Some Siege Battlegrounds also include Vehicular Combat mechanics. Vehicles are scattered across the map for players to control. Each vehicle has a special set of abilities, and vehicles are typically used to break walls or barriers within the Battleground in order to advance. Vehicles are not, however, immune to taking damage, and can be destroyed by player attacks.

Battleground	Battleground Type	Description
Warsong Gulch	Capture the Flag	A valley bordering Ashenvale Forest and the Barrens. Warsong Gulch hosts a constant battle between the Horde and Alliance. As a 10 vs 10 capture-the-flag battleground, the first faction to capture three flags is victorious. Eager to aid their allies, members of every race in Azeroth rush to the Gulch to lend sword, or spell, to the conflict.
Arathi Basin	Resource Race	The Arathi Basin is one of the main staging points of war between the humans and the Forsaken in Azeroth. Arathi Basin is a 15 vs 15 domination battleground, where each side attempts to control the Stables, Blacksmith, Mine, Lumbermill and Farm for as long as possible. The Stables, Blacksmith, Lumbermill and Farm provide vital connection between the humans and their dwarven allies to the south. Meanwhile, the League of Arathor seek to reclaim lost lands for their benefactors in Stormwind.
Eye of the Storm	Resource Race/Capture the Flag	Hovering high above the ravaged landscape of Netherstorm is the island known as the Eye of the Storm. Eye of the Storm is a 15 vs 15 domination battleground, where each side attempts to control the Mage Tower, Fel Reaver Ruins, Blood Elf Tower, and Draenei Ruins for as long as possible. The draenei seek to claim it due to its proximity to the naaru's mysterious vessel, Tempest Keep. This battlefield is coveted by the blood elves for its rich energy deposits.
Alterac Valley	Siege	Hidden within the Alterac Mountains, Alterac Valley is the home of the Frostwolf clan. The Stormpike dwarves have established a foothold in the valley and seek to plunge its depths for valuable ore. Alterac Valley is a massive 40 vs 40 battleground, each side attempts to destroy each other's tower fortifications and slay the enemy General (Vanndar Stormpike or Drek'Thar).
Strand of the Ancients	Vehicular Combat/Timed Siege	To the south of Dragonblight lies the resting place of a legendary Titan artifact known by the Alliance and Horde to possess critical information regarding the Titans and their methods. Strand of the Ancients is a 15 vs 15 battleground, where each side takes a turn attacking and defending the Titan artifact at the southern tip of the island. Prepare yourself for battle, for fate cannot determine success upon this Strand of the Ancients.
Isle of Conquest	Vehicular Combat/Siege	The Isle of Conquest is a point of strategic importance for the Alliance and Horde factions. Battlemasters, Isle of Conquest is a 40 vs 40 battleground, each side attempts to secure control of the Workshop, Docks, Hangar, Quarry, and Refinery in order to secure access to the enemy stronghold and defeat its general (Halford Wyrmbane or Overlord Agmar).
Twin Peaks	Capture the Flag	Nestled in the Twilight Highlands, Twin Peaks has flared as a point of contention between the Alliance and Horde. As a 10 vs 10 capture-the-flag battleground, the first faction to capture three flags is victorious. Lend your strength as both factions struggle to take control of this critical high ground!
Battle for Gilneas	Resource Race	As the Greymane wall collapses, the inevitable conflict between the Forsaken and Worgen reaches a new climax. The Battle for Gilneas is a 10 vs 10 domination battleground, where each side attempts to control the Mine, Lighthouse, and Waterworks for as long as possible.
Temple of Kotmogu	Resource Race	The Horde and Alliance wage battle for the ancient Mogu artifact that is foretold to hold great powers. Temple of Kotmogu is a 10 vs 10 powerball battleground where each side attempts to control the 4 Mogu artifacts for as long as possible in different scoring zones.
Silvershard Mines	Resource Race	This battleground takes place underneath Stranglethorn Vale in a Venture Co. goblin mine. Silvershard Mines is a 10 vs 10 escort battleground, in which each side attempts to control diamond carts until they reach the mine depot.
Deepwind Gorge	Resource Race	Situated in the Valley of the Four Winds, Deepwind Gorge is where the Alliance and Horde continue their war for Pandaria's precious resources. While the two factions battle for control over mines, they must also protect their own resources from being stolen and turned against them!

ARENA

Arena combat offers unstructured, highly competitive PvP. Teams of 2, 3, or 5 compete against each other in a ranked series of tournaments. There are seasons for this, and the rewards that come from Arena are on par with what you can get from Ranked Battleground matches.

There is no forum more competitive than the Arena. Players must take special care to choose the best talents and abilities to handle other classes. To be competitive, you must know all the ins and outs of your class and be able to use them at just the right moment. Arenas are also about finding the right partners who complement your playstyle and skill as well as possible. Tactics and strategies for the Arena change constantly. One of the best ways to stay on top of it all is to read forums and visit websites dedicated to Arena tactics.

Players that participate in Arena battles will be pitted against each other in one of seven unique maps. The Ring of Trials, the Circle of Blood, the Ruins of Lordaeron, the Dalaran Arena, the Ring of Valor, the Tol'Viron Arena, or the Tiger's Peak. Each map has its own unique structures that can be used to help sway the tide of battle from one team to the other—pillars, bridges, rising platforms, and even pipes of water can be used to strategic advantage.

Arenas are generally more restricted in terms of what you can and cannot do during the match. In general, abilities with cooldowns of 10 minutes and longer cannot be used, along with certain items, flasks, and other consumables.

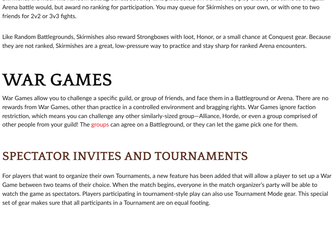

Before entering the battle, players have 60 seconds to buff themselves, inspect the other team, and prepare to play. Once the match commences, players battle until all members of one team are defeated, or until 20 minutes have passed. If neither team wins in 20 minutes, the match will end in a draw.

To help prevent games from dragging on too long, however, a stacking debuff called Dampening will be applied after 5 minutes in a 2v2 battle, or 10 minutes for 3v3 and 5v5 battles. This debuff will stack once every 10 seconds, reducing healing and absorption by 1% with every stack.

Arenas are fairly high-pressure battles and require extremely quick thinking and even quicker reaction time. They're one of the most challenging PvP activities in the game, but the rewards are well worth the challenge.

PERSONAL RATING

Participation in Arena fights or Rated Battlegrounds awards a Personal Rating that reflects your winloss performance in Rated Battlegrounds and Arenas. This Personal Rating is used to match you with players that have similar rating in Arenas and Rated Battlegrounds. Having a good Personal Rating also makes you eligible for certain rewards like titles, mounts, and cosmetic gear sets.

RATED BATTLEGROUNDS

Rated Battlegrounds offer a way for players who enjoy PvP, but not necessarily the high-stress environment of Arena matches, to obtain the best gear possible. Rated Battlegrounds are 10 vs. 10 and use the following maps: Warsong Gulch, Arathi Basin, Eye of the Storm, Silvershard Mines, Temple of Kotmogu, Deepwind Gorge, Battle for Gilneas, and Twin Peaks.

Only fully premade groups can take part in Rated Battlegrounds. Just as with Arenas, your group will be matched up with teams of similar ranking, and level of gear. Good Premade groups aren't just going to know each other. They're going to use voice chat extensively, tactics that they've played before, and use every trick in the book. They're almost undefeatable if your team isn't similarly prepared.

Rated Battlegrounds share the same spell and item restrictions as Arenas. Unlike Arenas, Rated Battlegrounds aren't a matter of simply killing the opposing team. You must complete the Battleground objectives just as you would in a traditional Battleground. Knowing the maps, objectives, and strategy of each of the playable Rated Battlegrounds is crucial to your team's success.

Other than improved equipment, rewards from participation in Rated Battlegrounds include mounts, titles for your character, and Achievements.

SKIRMISHES

Skirmishes are much like Random Battlegrounds, but they take place solely in Arenas. They play exactly the same as a regular Arena battle would, but award no ranking for participation. You may queue for Skirmishes on your own, or with one to two friends for 2v2 or 3v3 fights.

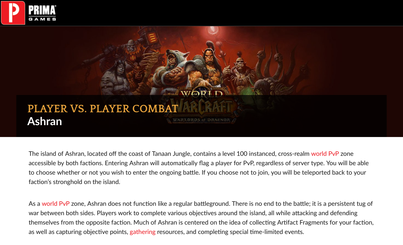

Like Random Battlegrounds, Skirmishes also reward Strongboxes with loot, Honor, or a small chance at Conquest gear. Because they are not ranked, Skirmishes are a great, low-pressure way to practice and stay sharp for ranked Arena encounters.

WAR GAMES

War Games allow you to challenge a specific guild, or group of friends, and face them in a Battleground or Arena. There are no rewards from War Games, other than practice in a controlled environment and bragging rights. War Games ignore faction restriction, which means you can challenge any other similarly-sized group—Alliance, Horde, or even a group comprised of other people from your guild! The groups can agree on a Battleground, or they can let the game pick one for them.

SPECTATOR INVITES AND TOURNAMENTS

For players that want to organize their own Tournaments, a new feature has been added that will allow a player to set up a War Game between two teams of their choice. When the match begins, everyone in the match organizer's party will be able to watch the game as spectators. Players participating in tournament-style play can also use Tournament Mode gear. This special set of gear makes sure that all participants in a Tournament are on equal footing.

PLAYER VS. PLAYER COMBAT
Ashran

The island of Ashran, located off the coast of Tanaan Jungle, contains a level 100 instanced, cross-realm world PvP zone accessible by both factions. Entering Ashran will automatically flag a player for PvP, regardless of server type. You will be able to choose whether or not you wish to enter the ongoing battle. If you choose not to join, you will be teleported back to your faction's stronghold on the island.

As a world PvP zone, Ashran does not function like a regular battleground. There is no end to the battle; it is a persistent tug of war between both sides. Players work to complete various objectives around the island, all while attacking and defending themselves from the opposite faction. Much of Ashran is centered on the idea of collecting Artifact Fragments for your faction, as well as capturing objective points, gathering resources, and completing special time-limited events.

STORMSHIELD AND WARSPEAR

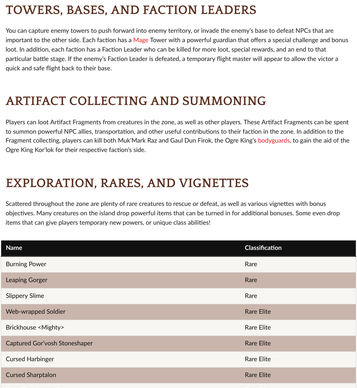

Upon arriving in Draenor and establishing your Garrison, you will eventually be directed to ask your Garrison's flight master to send you to Ashran. There are two faction strongholds located on opposite sides of the island. Alliance players will fly to Stormshield, and Horde players will fly to Warspear. Both Stormshield and Warspear feature all the amenities players might need as they are travelling in Draenor, including portals to all major capital cities on Azeroth. These two faction strongholds are not PvP-designated areas. However, taking the path from either city into the main island will result in a prompt asking if you wish to join the battle.

GAMEPLAY

Battles and objectives in Ashran take place in stages. Once a stage is completed, and a faction chosen as the victor, another stage will shortly begin. Any points on the map that have been captured by either faction are automatically reset for the next stage.

Although Ashran is primarily centered on the idea of PvP combat, there are many PvE objectives to complete that will help turn the tide of battle. In addition to fighting players, you will also find yourself engaging in battle with a variety of different creatures and NPCs that also populate the island. The island also contains rare elites and raid boss-level NPCs to defeat.

Because Ashran features such a wide array of potential activities, you can pick and choose how you want to contribute. There are a variety of objectives, both PvP and PvE based, that players can complete. It's up to you to decide how to help your faction come out on top!

OBJECTIVES

The main objective that most players will be working towards is simply reducing the enemy's reinforcements. One of the ways to win a battle stage is by simply reducing the opposing faction's reinforcements to zero. There are plenty of other objectives you can work towards as well, while you're whittling down reinforcements.

TOWERS, BASES, AND FACTION LEADERS

You can capture enemy towers to push forward into enemy territory, or invade the enemy's base to defeat NPCs that are important to the other side. Each faction has a Mage Tower with a powerful guardian that offers a special challenge and bonus loot. In addition, each faction has a Faction Leader who can be killed for more loot, special rewards, and an end to that particular battle stage. If the enemy's Faction Leader is defeated, a temporary flight master will appear to allow the victor a quick and safe flight back to their base.

ARTIFACT COLLECTING AND SUMMONING

Players can loot Artifact Fragments from creatures in the zone, as well as other players. These Artifact Fragments can be spent to summon powerful NPC allies, transportation, and other useful contributions to their faction in the zone. In addition to the Fragment collecting, players can kill both Muk'Mark Raz and Gaul Dun Firok, the Ogre King's bodyguards, to gain the aid of the Ogre King Kor'lok for their respective faction's side.

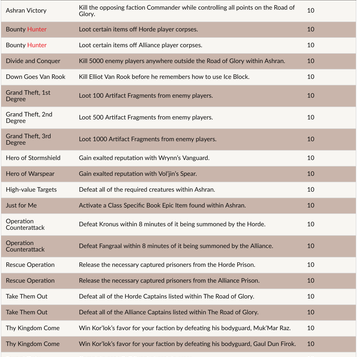

EXPLORATION, RARES, AND VIGNETTES

Scattered throughout the zone are plenty of rare creatures to rescue or defeat, as well as various vignettes with bonus objectives. Many creatures on the island drop powerful items that can be turned in for additional bonuses. Some even drop items that can give players temporary new powers, or unique class abilities!

QUESTS

Both Alliance and Horde have a variety of quests that offer rewards for completing various objectives around Ashran. Before you dive into the middle of battle, make sure you check around your base and pick up any quests offered that can be completed while you're out there in the thick of the fighting.

REPUTATION

Reputation in Ashran can be earned by participating in battle and completing quests. Alliance players will earn reputation towards Wrynn's Vanguard, and Horde players will earn reputation towards Vol'jin's Spear. Gaining exalted reputation with either faction will grant you a special title. Both factions also offer rewards designed to help you in future battles on Ashran.

BRAWLER'S GUILD
Introduction

Introduced in Mists of Pandaria, the Brawler's Guild is a group that organizes single-player gladiator matches between you and a series of progressively more difficult mini-bosses. The Alliance can find the Brawler's Guild hidden away in the depth of the Deeprun Tram in Bizmo's Brawlpub, while the Horde merely needs to make a trip to the Valley of Honor to find the Brawl'gar Arena. All encounters have been updated with Warlords of Draenor, and you must now be level 100 to fight.

A BLOOD-SOAKED INVITATION

To join the Brawler's Guild, you must first acquire a Blood-Soaked Invitation. Right-click the invitation to use it. Using the Blood-Soaked Invitation flags your entire account for access to the Brawler's Guild, so any additional characters you have of either faction can simply head to the Brawlpub or Brawl'gar and begin.

BRAWLER'S GUILD
Brawling

Speak to any bouncer to sign up for a brawl. You will enter a queue of players. Speak to the bouncer again to see how many people are ahead of you in line. You will be notified when you are next in line to fight. Once you have teleported into the arena, you have two minutes to complete your fight. If you do not defeat the encounter before your two minutes expire, you'll soon find yourself dancing on a fiery and unforgiving floor.

Winning the battle will net you a Brawler's Purse with gold and other useful rewards inside, as well as 250 reputation with the Brawler's Guild. If you lose the battle, you will need to make a run back from the nearest graveyard, unless you have a friend nearby who can resurrect you.

There are 8 ranks in the Brawler's Guild. Each rank has four gladiators you must defeat in order to progress to the next rank. Upon achieving rank 8, you are eligible for one of four rare gladiators. Rising through the ranks opens access to useful and valuable items from the Brawler's Guild vendor.

Rank	Item	Cost
Rank 1	Brawler's Healing Tonic	1g42s50c
	Brawler's Draenic Agility Potion	1g42s50c
	Brawler's Draenic Intellect Potion	1g42s50c

Rank 8	Brawler's Burly Mushan Beast	1425g

RARE CHALLENGE CARDS

Challenge Cards are items that allow challengers the opportunity to relive earlier fights. For ranked fights, defeating a gladiator will unlock that gladiator's challenge card. There are also rare challenge cards, unlocked upon completing quests that are started by items found in the world. These encounters do nothing for your ranking in the Brawler's Guild, but they all have unique rewards when defeated.

GARRISONS
Building Your Garrison

Your Garrison on Draenor is your own personal fortress, a stake of land in the savage wilds of this unfamiliar world. Garrisons can be customized to suit your needs with specialized buildings that offer useful buffs, resources, and more. In addition, as you travel throughout Draenor, you can obtain followers to populate your Garrison and complete missions for resources, XP, gold, and other valuable rewards.

Your Garrison's location is easy. Upon arriving in either Shadowmoon Valley (for Alliance) or Frostfire Ridge (for Horde), players will be led through a brief series of quests to collect building materials for their Garrison, and claim their plot of land. Once unlocked, you will organically continue to build and expand your Garrison as you quest through Draenor. Quests can reward you with followers, resources, or even additional quests/ items to unlock special buildings in your Garrison. In addition, various Garrison rewards and tasks can be found hidden away all over Draenor. Don't be afraid to explore!

In order to perform any tasks with your Garrison, you need Garrison Resources, which will be gathered throughout your journey on Draenor. Although small at first, your Garrison will expand as you complete quests to move the fortress to its size by upgrading your Town Hall, growing larger and more populated with every expansion. Each upgrade opens up new plots in which to place additional buildings, collect followers, create useful items, and more.

BUILDINGS

Once your Garrison has been established, you may begin to place buildings in it. To create a building, you'll first need a blueprint. Right-click the blueprint to add it to your list of learned blueprints. After you have learned the blueprint, visit the Architect's table within your Garrison to choose your building, and drag it on the map to where you would like that building placed. Garrison buildings take one hour to complete, at which point you may open up your city building to complete its construction. There are three different sizes of buildings available to choose from, and as with your Town Hall, each building can be upgraded a maximum of two times as well.

While level 1 and level 2 blueprints are fairly easy to obtain, level 3 blueprints are more difficult, and are rewarded from completing certain Garrison-related Achievements. Once you have learned a level 3 blueprint, all of your characters will have it learned. You won't have to complete the associated Achievements more than once.

SMALL BUILDINGS

Small buildings primarily involve professions and the creation of work orders to provide you with items and materials. These buildings may be upgraded up to three times with Garrison resources and gold, and each tier of upgrades offers more bonuses. Note that although these buildings deal with the same professions you can train and learn, you are not required to learn the profession that the building promotes.

This means that your Garrison can be effectively used to perform profession tasks and crafting that you yourself cannot perform. Although you are limited in how many professions you can personally learn, small buildings allow you to craft helpful items that you ordinarily would not have access to.

However, there's a catch. You will not be able to craft the best possible items from a Garrison building. The absolute best crafted items will always come from learned professions, as opposed to items offered by buildings.

If you choose to create a building that works with a profession you have already learned, you'll be able to choose from two different options when you to craft gear twice as fast as someone who has created that building, but hasn't learned the associated profession. You'll also gain access to the highest level of crafted recipes you can learn.

FISHING SHACK, HERB GARDEN, MENAGERIE AND MINE

There are four unique Garrison structures that are unlocked as you level your Garrison. The Fishing Shack, Herb Garden, Menagerie, and Mine are all in stationary locations. You don't get to choose where they are placed, but they don't require blueprints to initially build. Instead, you will have to complete a quest to unlock the structure. Once unlocked, each of these buildings can be leveled up, just like all the other buildings in your Garrison.

Both the Mine and the Herb Garden will allow players to gather and produce herbs and ore, even if they do not have a gathering profession learned. However, players that have the appropriate gathering profession learned will be able to obtain these materials at a much faster rate.

The Fishing Shack allows players to fish for Draenor fish from the privacy of their own Garrison, without having to travel around the world. Unlocking the level 3 blueprint for the Fishing Shack is a fairly lengthy process, but once you have done so, you'll be able to recruit a very famous fisherman as your follower.

The Menagerie is an area specifically for your pets, and for Pet Battles. Once you have unlocked the Menagerie, you'll begin attracting elite pets to defeat for special rewards. Unlocking the level 3 blueprint for the Menagerie also unlocks a daily Pet Battle quest, which has the chance to drop even more unusual pets for your collection!

Level 1	Allows players to mine Draenor Stone from mined nodes in Draenor. Draenor Stone can be converted to work orders for Draenor resources.
Level 2	Increases the chance of receiving Draenor Stone from mined nodes in Draenor. Also allows a new mined node: gathering miners to additional mining nodes and allows up to 2 work orders at one time.
Level 3	A fresh mined node allows access to rich mining nodes. In addition, garrison guards will patrol your mines, keeping it clear of hostile goons. Also allows up to 3 work orders at one time.

MENAGERIE

Level 1	Attracts elite pets you can battle for rewards. Also lets 1 of your battle pets keep out in your garrison.
Level 2	Increases your daily Pet Battle quest to 2 and allows 2 of your battle pets to be out in your garrison at one time.
Level 3	Unlocks a pet battle daily with unique pet rewards.

A Work Order is essentially an assigned job given to a building, which returns valuable materials to you. Each building asks for its own unique requirement for placing a Work Order. For example, the Herb Garden requires Draenic Seeds to place a Work Order, while the Lumber Mill requires Timber. What materials you get back from individual buildings also varies; the Herb Garden will give you various herbs commonly found in Draenor in exchange for your Draenic Seeds, while the Lumber Mill will give you Garrison Resources in exchange for all that Timber.

What you do with all those materials you receive from Work Orders is entirely up to you. You can use the materials to craft items for yourself; you can sell those materials on the Auction House if you'd like. Either way, you're generating useful items that will benefit the way you play, whether it be armor, potions, herbs, ore, or simply gold in exchange for it all.

PRODUCTION INCREASE

The Storehouse will increase the number of Work Orders all of your buildings can create!

To create a Work Order, simply speak to the appropriate NPC in your Garrison Building, and hand over the materials they require. Once your Work Order is filled, it will appear as a crate you can loot. The amount of Work Orders you can place at a time depends on the level of your buildings. The higher the level, the more Work Orders you can process!

GARRISONS
Followers

Followers are NPCs that you may recruit to join your Garrison. Once recruited, you can send them on missions, which will help improve your Garrison, or even valuable loot for your character. In addition, they can be assigned to certain rooms, like crafting or gathering, equipped or upgraded, and even fight alongside you in combat.

Followers have a character level just like you. Sending followers on missions will reward them with XP, and they'll continue to level up to 100 (or 90, if you're playing Legion). Followers also have item levels, which will grow with answer, to better prepare them for more difficult missions against tough, elite enemies, or even raid missions.

Followers come in three different qualities.

Uncommon followers have a green border around their portrait in the followers menu, and have one ability and trait.

Rare followers have a blue portrait, and gain one additional trait and two additional abilities, and three random traits.

Epic followers have a purple portrait and gain two additional abilities and three random traits.

You can have up to 20 followers total in and also performing various tasks. You can continue to recruit followers over the 20 follower limit, but you can only store 20 on active duty at a time. Any followers over the limit will need to be dismissed before you can recruit any more. Dismissing a follower will remove them from your garrison forever, so be sure you're sure you want to do so before you do it. If you're not sure but have a active duty, you may do so once per day, at a cost of 10g.

BEYOND LEVEL 100

Along with additional art, build, gear, quests level of your Garrison is currently determined which they begin to follow are. 810 Garrison Resources, and you can upgrade your Garrison to level 2 and 3 and that you're going to help to level 3. Once you've reached level 3, you can upgrade your Garrison to level 3 and 3 and that you're going to help to level 3. Once you've reached level 3, you can upgrade your Garrison to level 3 and 3 and that you're going to help to level 3.

GAINING FOLLOWERS

You can gain followers for your Garrison in a variety of different ways:

Questing Followers can be found in Garrisons by ... around the world and reward you with a loyal follower. Garrison Resources, and you can upgrade your Garrison to level 2 and 3 and that you're going to help to level 3. Once you've reached level 3, you can upgrade your Garrison to level 3 and 3 and that you're going to help to level 3.

Exploration. Some followers can only be found or acquired through special circumstances. Keep your eyes peeled while you're out and about for ... Sometimes when random events happen, you may run across one, or a wild creep that will ultimately result in another follower for your Garrison.

Recruitment. Several followers can be recruited by completing a mission located at appropriate reputation level with certain Draenor factions. Keep in mind that certain reputations take certain Garrison buildings to unlock.

Trade. You can also trade in Apexis Crystals for a chance at recruiting a number of rare and powerful followers. Unlike other recruitment methods, with the fun you will be able to choose which follower Artifact or Trade you are looking for. You can find more information on this in the Apexis Crystals section of the Garrison Resources chapter of this guide.

ABILITIES AND TRAITS

Each follower class has a unique set of characteristics. Abilities are combat-based abilities that counter specific threats from enemies found on missions. Matching up your follower's abilities to powerful counter threats will greatly increase the chance of success. Traits are passive abilities that affect your follower's overall performance. Traits can be anything from a bonus to a specific type of combat, or even a boost to a certain type of mission. Traits are randomly assigned to rare and epic followers, which is another type of dice roll. Make, or even something within a specific Item Name.

Many followers with Traits are usually considered more valuable than those with followers in recruited. However, the trait/ability will allow you to recruit a new follower once a week that has no Abilities or Traits of your choosing, allowing you to reset out your Garrison's roster. Keep in mind that you can only recruit a certain number of rare and epic followers at a time, as determined in follower's Abilities and Traits. These items are very rare, however.

GARRISONS
Missions

Missions are the main way your followers will gain XP and level. But Missions aren't just for the benefit of your followers. When followers successfully complete Missions, you are rewarded as well, with gold, special items, armor, and more. To begin a Mission, click on the table in your character's Town Hall. This will open the Mission interface, which will not only show you the Missions you have available, but also a full list of your followers as well, on the left-hand side.

Missions vary in complexity. Some Missions will require multiple followers to complete, or have multiple enemies that your followers will face. Missions take time to complete—some as short as 15-30 minutes, and some that take hours to complete. Generally speaking, the longer a Mission takes, the higher its difficulty. There are a few key points you want to pay attention to with Missions.

• Time: The length of time a mission takes can affect your followers, and can also be affected by your followers. Some followers have Traits that will shorten a Mission's time to completion. Some followers work better under certain time constraints.

• Mission Type: Missions are assigned various types. These types could be based around what kind of enemies your followers will be fighting, or what kind of terrain your followers will encounter on their journey. Some followers have Traits that increase their chances of success against different types of Missions.

• Enemies: Each Mission has its own unique enemy, or sets of enemies. These enemies may have certain abilities that your follower will need to counter. These abilities are clearly indicated by the icon below the enemy's portrait.

• Companions: Some followers work better with certain types of followers. For example, a draenei follower might work much better if he is in the company of another draenei. There are even followers who work best when completing a mission on their own, without any companions at all!

To complete your Missions with the best possible chances of success, you'll want to carefully choose who to assign based on these key points. When you open a Mission, you'll see that your follower list automatically has icons next to followers that are suitable for countering specific enemy abilities and mission types.

IN DUE TIME

Missions don't have to be completed immediately. If you don't have enough people to complete a particular Mission, it will simply sit in your list of available Missions. Don't wait forever, though—most Missions clear out of your log approximately once a week if they have not been completed.

To assign a follower to a Mission, simply click and drag the follower's icon to the blank portrait on the map. Pay attention to the success percentage chance—it should go up when you assign a follower. If the percentage chance isn't raised, you might want to find a follower that is better suited for that particular Mission. Once you've filled out your roster, click Start Mission to send your followers on their way.

At that point, you simply go about your day doing your own quests, crafting, dungeons, or whatever it is you need to do. Your followers will go and complete their Mission on their own, with no help required. To check on a Mission's status, click on the icon on your minimap to open the Garrison UI. From that pane, you can easily see who is still out on Missions, and who has successfully returned.

Once a Mission has been completed, return to your Town Hall to see if it was successfully completed, what your followers earned, and to claim any rewards they might have brought back with them.

GARRISONS
Assignments

Your followers can do much more than just completing Missions. Followers can be assigned to perform various tasks either at your side, or in your Garrison. These tasks can unlock special rewards and additional abilities for both you and your followers to take advantage of.

BUILDINGS

Some followers are capable of working in various buildings in your Garrison. If you assign a follower to work in a building, they are still considered active in your roster of 20 followers, but they cannot be sent on missions. Note that followers cannot be assigned to buildings until you have upgraded your buildings to level 2. Assigning followers to buildings unlocks additional perks and bonuses for your character.

Alchemy Lab

Followers working in the Alchemy Lab hand out daily quests for extra potions.

Enchanter's Study

Followers working in the Enchanter's Study will let you change the appearance of glows on your weapons. This appearance change is strictly cosmetic; it will not affect your weapon's performance.

Engineering Works

Followers working in the Engineering Works will sell special gadgets and items for your use. You may only carry one of these unique items at a time.

Gem Boutique

Followers working in the gem boutique will offer daily quests that can be completed for additional gold.

Scribe's Quarters

Followers working in the Scribe's Quarters will create forged documents which can be used to gain additional gold.

Tailoring Emporium

Followers working in the Tailoring Emporium will create special Battle Standards you can use while out in the world.

The Forge

Followers working in The Forge will help reduce the durability damage you take when fighting enemies.

The Tannery

Followers working in The Tannery can craft special tents that provide a bonus to stats when used.

Other buildings in your Garrison can also recruit followers, but only special followers that are extremely difficult to obtain. Work on upgrading your buildings and completing Work Orders to discover them!

FOLLOWER UPGRADES

Although you cannot assign a follower to the building, the Salvage Yard offers some interesting perks specifically for your followers. Building the Salvage Yard will allow your followers to occasionally bring back salvage crates from Missions, which contain gold, vendor trash, and even supplies like herbs, ore, or leather.

Once your Salvage Yard is upgraded to level 2, these salvage crates also have a chance to hold armor and weapon enhancements for your followers, allowing you to increase your followers' item level and in turn increase their success rate in certain Missions.

GARRISONS
Bodyguards

Some followers have a special Bodyguard Trait. This Trait indicates that this follower can be assigned to work at the level 2 Barracks. Once they are assigned to the Barracks, you may recruit them to follow you and assist you as you travel around Draenor. Note that while these Bodyguards will be happy to assist you out in the world, they will not follow you into dungeons or raids.

Bodyguards have three individual, unique levels of friendship, similar to the NPCs from Mists of Pandaria's farm system. You can increase your reputation with your Bodyguard simply by killing creatures in your level range. Each of the three levels of reputation offer unique perks specialized to each Bodyguard. There are 7 total Bodyguards you can recruit for your Garrison, but four of these Bodyguards are faction-specific.

Leorajh

A Shaman Healer, Leorajh makes a useful Bodyguard for his healing abilities. At level 2, Leorajh unlocks a buff that will increase your Haste. At level 3, he will allow you to gain access to the Garrison Missions interface from anywhere in the field of battle.

Tormmok

A Warrior, Tormmok starts out with basic abilities, including one that greatly increases burst damage. At level 2, Tormmok will transform into a colossus for 30 seconds, increasing his damage by 50%. At level 3, he will repair your armor and weapons anywhere in the field.

Talonpriest Ishaal

A Shadow Priest, Ishaal will start out with normal ranged casting damage abilities. At level 2, Ishaal will gain an ability that stuns his target and increases the damage it takes. At level 3, Ishaal gains a perk that will grant you access to your mail from anywhere in the field.

HORDE BODYGUARDS

Vivianne

A Mage, Vivianne will start out casting basic Mage abilities. At level 2, she gains an ability that calls down a meteor to burn her enemies. At level 3, Vivianne will create a portal to your Garrison from anywhere in the world.

Aeda Brightdawn

A Warlock, Aeda starts out with Demonology Warlock abilities. At level 2, Aeda learns to summon an infernal, stunning all targets in the area. At level 3, she will summon a party or raid member to your location anywhere in the field.

ALLIANCE BODYGUARDS

Delvar

A Death Knight, Delvar starts out with basic Death Knight abilities like Death and Decay. At Level 2, he gains an ability that deals damage to enemies in front of him. At Level 3, Delvar will create a portal to your Garrison from anywhere in the world.

Defender Illona

A Paladin, Illona will start out with Protection Paladin abilities. At level 2, she will summon a Guardian of Ancient Kings to reduce the damage you take. At Level 3, she will summon a party or raid member to your location anywhere in the field.

While level 2 abilities are automatically unlocked when you increase your reputation with your Bodyguard, level 3 abilities are a little different. When you reach level 3 reputation, your Bodyguard will give you a quest to complete. Successfully completing the quest unlocks the ability.

Bodyguards cannot be randomly obtained. All Bodyguards are found either through quests, or from exploring and discovery. As with any other assigned follower, Bodyguards cannot be sent on Missions while they are working in the Barracks. But the perks they offer make them far more valuable fighting at your side than out in the field with other followers.

GARRISONS
Quests and Content

In addition to constructing buildings, collecting followers, placing Work Orders, and collecting materials, your Garrison is also an ever-evolving hub of quests and content for you to complete. As you level, your Garrison levels and changes right alongside you. If you are ever stuck on where to go, you can usually find a quest or two in your Garrison pointing out some places to go next on your journey in Draenor.

Each Garrison building has its own set of quests as well, and the quests can change depending on how many Work Orders you've completed, whether or not you have a follower assigned to the building, or even what level the building happens to be. Some buildings even have visitors that show up to offer random quests for dungeons, or other areas around the world.

GARRISONS
Invasions

Your Garrison is your stronghold in Draenor, and powerful enemies have officially taken notice. As you level your Garrison, your followers, your buildings, and yourself, the rest of Draenor is watching and waiting for a moment of opportunity. Invasions are exactly what you'd assume—enemy forces attacking your Garrison in an attempt to tear it down. An Invasion plays out sort of like a scenario, in that you have several phases to complete, usually with a fairly tough boss encounter if you successfully complete all the phases.

You won't be alone while you're fighting off enemies. Your followers and Garrison guards will leap to defend your Garrison with you. After all, the Garrison is their home too! Successfully completing an Invasion offers special rewards. Failing to fend off an Invasion may end up in damaged buildings or injured followers and guards. Before accepting an Invasion event, you'll want to make sure all your followers are present and accounted for, and leveled up appropriately.

Invasions also include bonus objectives, usually involving saving NPCs in your Garrison by escorting them to a point of safety. Completing an Invasion results in a rating being assigned based on your level of success. The three ratings are Bronze, Silver, and Gold. You can earn special Achievements depending on how well you do.

PLAYING WITH FRIENDS

Your Garrison may be a stronghold that you've personally tailored for your own use, but it doesn't mean that you have to be alone. Any friends you invite to a group can visit your Garrison, talk to your followers, use any vendors or portals you have created, and even help you fend off Invasions. You, in turn, can visit their Garrison and do the same, earning cool Achievements in the process!

RACE AVAILABILITY

DRUID

Druids are shapeshifters who can take on the forms of animals to augment their abilities. They are capable of healing themselves and others, dealing massive damage, and soaking up punishment. Druids are also capable of resurrecting fallen allies, and can even travel long distances instantly when in animal form.

Druids are versatile characters who can perform any role in a group, and are welcome in any group composition. Their ability to shapeshift into different forms allows them to adapt to any situation, and their wide range of abilities makes them valuable in any encounter.

PLAYING STYLES

Druids can play as Balance, Feral, Guardian, or Restoration specialization. Each specialization has its own unique playstyle and abilities.

- Balance - Ranged DPS specialization that uses Astral Power to cast powerful spells.
- Feral - Melee DPS specialization that uses Energy and Combo Points to deal damage.
- Guardian - Tank specialization that uses Rage to mitigate damage and protect allies.
- Restoration - Healing specialization that uses Mana to heal allies and themselves.

CLASS ABILITIES AND RESOURCES

MANA, RAGE, ENERGY, AND COMBO POINTS

Druids can use Mana, Rage, Energy, and Combo Points as resources for their abilities. Mana is used by Balance and Restoration specializations, Rage is used by Guardian specialization, Energy is used by Feral specialization, and Combo Points are used by Feral specialization.

Mana is a resource that regenerates over time and is used to cast spells. Rage is a resource that is generated by dealing and taking damage and is used to cast abilities. Energy is a resource that regenerates over time and is used to cast abilities. Combo Points are a resource that is generated by using certain abilities and is used to cast finishing moves.

RACE AVAILABILITY

MAGE

Mage is the most ranged class that specializes in manipulation of the elements of Fire, Frost and Arcane energy. They are known for their powerful spells and ability to control the battlefield with crowd control.

Mages have a high damage output, but are very fragile and have low health. Mages are also known for their ability to create food and water for themselves and others, as well as their ability to teleport themselves and others to different locations.

Mages can be found in the Alliance and Horde factions, and can be played by any race that is available to their faction. Mages can be found in cities, towns, and dungeons around the world.

ROLE

Mage (Ranged DPS)

Mages are the masters of elemental magic, specializing in powerful spells that deal damage over time or in a single burst. They can also control the battlefield with crowd control spells, such as freezing enemies in place or polymorphing them into harmless creatures.

Mages are versatile characters that can be played in a variety of ways. They can be focused on dealing damage, controlling the battlefield, or providing support to their allies. Mages can also be used to create portals to different locations, which can be very useful for getting around quickly.

Mages are a popular choice for players who enjoy being in the thick of the action, but they can also be played from a safe distance. They are a good choice for players who like to think strategically and control the flow of battle.

CLASS ABILITIES AND RESOURCES

Mages use mana. Mage has the Arcane Intellect passive ability. This ability can be cast on friends or themselves to increase their Intellect by 5%. This ability is available to all Mages at level 1.

Mages have a unique ability called Arcane Charges. Arcane Charges are a resource that is generated by casting Arcane spells. Arcane Charges can be used to cast powerful Arcane spells, such as Arcane Blast and Arcane Barrage.

Mages can also use the Evocation ability to restore their mana. This ability can be used every 2 minutes.

Mages can teleport themselves and others to different locations. This is a very useful ability for getting around quickly. Mages can also create portals to different locations, which can be used by anyone.

AMPLIFY MAGIC

Mages can use Arcane Intellect to increase the Intellect of themselves or another party or raid member by 10% (5% in battlegrounds) for 1 hour. This is a very useful ability for increasing the damage output of your party or raid.

Mages can also use Arcane Brilliance to increase the Intellect of all party and raid members by 10% (5% in battlegrounds) for 1 hour. This is a very useful ability for increasing the damage output of your entire group.

There is a new ability called Arcane Familiar that summons a magical companion that follows you around and can attack enemies. This ability is still in development and may not be available in all areas.

ROGUE

The Rogue class is a class available in the Cata, Mists, WoD, Legion, and BfA expansions. The Rogue class is a melee class that specializes in dealing damage from stealth, avoiding damage through the use of speed and agility, and using poisons and trickery to defeat their enemies.

Rogues are masters of subterfuge, stealth, and agility. They are deadly combatants, capable of dealing large amounts of damage quickly, and can defeat opponents much stronger than themselves if they can catch them unaware. Rogues are also capable of avoiding damage with ease, and can quickly escape from combat.

Rogues have a wide variety of tools and abilities at their disposal, allowing them to adapt to nearly any situation. They can pick locks, disarm traps, and hide in shadows. They can also use poisons to weaken their foes, and a number of deadly melee attacks to finish them off.

CLASS ABILITIES AND RESOURCES

COMBO POINTS AND ENERGY

Rogues use energy to perform their abilities, and they can store up to five combo points at a time.

Combo points are a resource that is generated by certain abilities, such as Sinister Strike and Backstab. They can be spent on powerful finishing moves, such as Eviscerate and Envenom. The more combo points you have, the more powerful your finishing moves will be.

Energy is a resource that regenerates over time. It is used to power most of your abilities, and you will need to manage it carefully in order to avoid running out in the middle of combat.

STEALTH

Stealth is a key ability for Rogues. It allows you to move undetected by enemies, and it can be used to initiate combat from a position of advantage. There are a number of different stealth abilities available to Rogues, each with its own unique properties.

POISONS

Rogues can apply poisons to their weapons. These poisons can deal damage over time, slow their enemies, or even put them to sleep. There are a number of different poisons available to Rogues, each with its own unique effects.

The cost of poisons can be a consideration for some players. Some poisons are more expensive than others, and you may need to save up gold in order to afford the poisons that you want to use.

WARRIOR

Warriors are masters of weapons and combat, capable of using all weapons and armor types. Warriors are the most versatile melee combatants in the game, able to specialize in dealing damage, tanking enemies, or supporting allies in battle. Warriors are also unique in that they do not require any external resources to perform their abilities, instead generating rage in combat by attacking or being attacked.

Warriors have a wide variety of weapons and armor to choose from, and can specialize in dual-wielding two one-handed weapons, using a one-handed weapon and a shield, or using a two-handed weapon.

CLASS ABILITIES AND RESOURCES

STANCES

Warriors can switch between three stances: Battle Stance, Defensive Stance, and Berserker Stance. Each of the stances has different effects and abilities. Warriors can only use abilities that are available in their current stance.

RAGE

Warriors use rage as a resource to perform their abilities. Rage is generated by attacking or being attacked. Rage is lost when out of combat. Warriors can also use abilities that generate rage without dealing damage, such as Shield Slam and Revenge.

SHOUTS

Warriors can use shouts to buff themselves and their allies. Shouts have a cooldown of 1 minute and last for 10 seconds. Warriors can only have one shout active at a time.

Introduction
An Introduction to World of Warcraft

World of Warcraft is a massively multiplayer online game in which you assume control of a character who is part of the worlds of Azeroth and Outland. These worlds are filled with magic and fantastical creatures, but you will also catch glimpses of advanced technology.

MASSIVELY MULTIPLAYER? ONLINE?

Massively multiplayer online games, or MMOs, are games played simultaneously by hundreds or thousands of players. Many of the characters you see in the game world are controlled by other players.

MMOs also do not have an offline component to the gaming experience. Where many games (such as first-person shooters or real-time strategy games) typically have a single player campaign in addition to multiplayer options, all gameplay in MMOs is done online. You must be connected to a server in order to play the game.

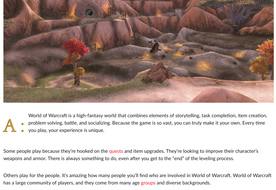

Upon entering the game, you become part of a story which is set in a time of increased friction between long-time enemies, the Alliance and Horde. The Horde consists of Blood Elves, Orcs, Goblins, Taurens, Trolls, and Undead. The races of the Alliance include Draenei, Dwarves, Gnomes, Humans, Night Elves, and Worgen. The recently rediscovered Pandaren may choose which side of the conflict they join.

In addition to selecting one of the races of Azeroth, you must assign a class to your character. There are 11 classes available, and your class selection has the greatest impact on your experience while playing the game.

WHO THIS IS FOR

New players should use this section of the guide to learn about the game's background, how to manage your account, and all of the game's basics. Players new to WoW and especially to online games in general will get the most from these materials.

Returning players who have been away for a year or more may also want to peruse this section. Changes are a matter of course in online games, and Blizzard has not been resting on its laurels. Even beyond the expansion itself there have been countless improvements to the general game system. If you're coming back but want a reminder or two, this is a good place to get yourself started once again.

GENERAL QUESTIONS ANSWERED

If you are new to online games, you likely have a few questions about what to expect. Continue reading for answers to common questions about World of Warcraft.

Q: WHY SHOULD I PLAY WORLD OF WARCRAFT?

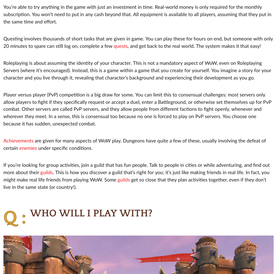

A: World of Warcraft is a high-fantasy world that combines elements of storytelling, task completion, item creation, problem solving, battle, and socializing. Because the game is so vast, you can truly make it your own. Every time you play, your experience is unique.

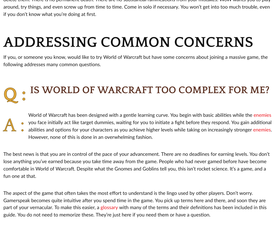

Some people play because they're hooked on the quests and item upgrades. They're looking to improve their character's weapons and armor. There is always something to do, even after you get to the "end" of the leveling process.

Others play for the people. It's amazing how many people you'll find who are involved in World of Warcraft. World of Warcraft has a large community of players, and they come from many age groups and diverse backgrounds.

Why you should play is actually a trick question (sorry!). The answer is your own, and the fact that you're reading this is all that you need to know. You suspect that there's something fun waiting for you online—and you're right. Don't be nervous. World of Warcraft introduces new players to the game at a comfortable pace, and despite online gaming's reputation, you'll find that a surprising number of players are polite and helpful when someone's learning the game and needs to ask questions.

Q: WHAT DOES WORLD OF WARCRAFT HAVE FOR ME?

A: Major features of World of Warcraft include roleplaying, improving your characters, competing against other people in player versus player combat, upgrading gear, exploring the world, crafting items for yourself and others, and unlocking special achievements.

You're able to try anything in the game with just an investment in time. Real-world money is only required for the monthly subscription. You won't need to put in any cash beyond that. All equipment is available to all players, assuming that they put in the same time and effort.

Questing involves thousands of short tasks that are given in game. You can play these for hours on end, but someone with only 20 minutes to spare can still log on, complete a few quests, and get back to the real world. The system makes it that easy!

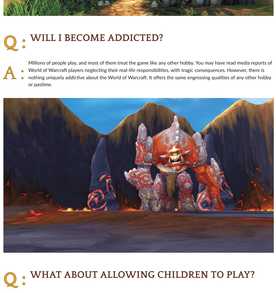

Roleplaying is about assuming the identity of your character. This is not a mandatory aspect of WoW, even on Roleplaying Servers (where it's encouraged). Instead, this is a game within a game that you create for yourself. You imagine a story for your character and you live through it, revealing that character's background and experiencing their development as you go.

Player versus player (PvP) competition is a big draw for some. You can limit this to consensual challenges: most servers only allow players to fight if they specifically request or accept a duel, enter a Battleground, or otherwise set themselves up for PvP combat. Other servers are called PvP servers, and they allow people from different factions to fight openly, whenever and wherever they meet. In a sense, this is consensual too because no one is forced to play on PvP servers. You choose one because it has sudden, unexpected combat.

Achievements are given for many aspects of WWW play. Dungeons have quite a few of these, usually involving the defeat of certain enemies under specific conditions.

If you're looking for group activities, join a guild that has fun people. Talk to people in cities or while adventuring, and find out more about their guilds. This is how you discover a guild that's right for you: it's just like making friends in real life. In fact, you might make real life friends from playing WoW. Some guilds get so close that they plan activities together, even if they don't live in the same state (or country!).

Q: WHO WILL I PLAY WITH?

A: WoW enables people from all over the world to play with each other in real time. So the simple answer is that you can play with anyone you wish. You can log in and play on your own (called playing solo), you can play with your friends, or you can play with strangers. It's all up to you.

If you're just getting started, ask friends, family members, and coworkers if they play. It's entirely possible that you have experienced WoW players in your circle already. Then ask what server they play on, and consider joining them on that server. This ensures that you're playing in the same "world" as your friends. They'll be able to walk you through the early steps and possibly help you out with starting money, items, or joining a guild.

Coming in alone is harder, but it's still entirely doable. Read through the following pages, and then start the game. Click on buttons. Play around. And remember that you cannot be destroyed in WoW. Characters can only be deleted if you choose to delete them. There is no permanent death. There are no substantial ramifications from your mistakes. WoW wants you to play around, try things, and even screw up from time to time. Come in solo if necessary. You won't get into too much trouble, even if you don't know what you're doing at first.

ADDRESSING COMMON CONCERNS

If you, or someone you know, would like to try World of Warcraft but have some concerns about joining a massive game, the following addresses many common questions.

Q: IS WORLD OF WARCRAFT TOO COMPLEX FOR ME?

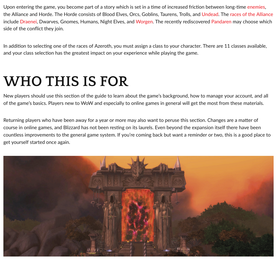

A: World of Warcraft has been designed with a gentle learning curve. You begin with basic abilities while the enemies you face initially act like target dummies, waiting for you to initiate a fight before they respond. You gain additional abilities and options for your characters as you achieve higher levels while taking on increasingly stronger enemies. However, none of this is done in an overwhelming fashion.

The best news is that you are in control of the pace of your advancement. There are no deadlines for earning levels. You don't lose anything you've earned because you take time away from the game. People who had never gamed before have become comfortable in World of Warcraft. Despite what the Gnomes and Goblins tell you, this isn't rocket science. It's a game, and a fun one at that.

The aspect of the game that often takes the most effort to understand is the lingo used by other players. Don't worry. Gamerspeak becomes quite intuitive after you spend time in the game. You pick up terms here and there, and soon they are part of your vernacular. To make this easier, a glossary with many of the terms and their definitions has been included in this guide. You do not need to memorize these. They're just here if you need them or have a question.

Ultimately, World of Warcraft is as complex as you wish to make it. Many players enjoy exploring the vast worlds of Azeroth and Outland on their own, performing quests as they travel. A large percentage of players join with others to form guilds for their social aspects. They also join forces for Player-versus-Player combat, or to take on the challenges designed around 5, 10, or 25 characters working together.

The key to enjoying your time in World of Warcraft is to find what you like to do and do it! Don't be afraid to dabble in other activities and test the waters, but you aren't required to do anything with your time. You control the amount of time you spend in the game, so spend it doing the things you enjoy most.

Q: WILL I BECOME ADDICTED?

A: Millions of people play, and most of them treat the game like any other hobby. You may have read media reports of World of Warcraft players neglecting their real-life responsibilities, with tragic consequences. However, there is nothing uniquely addictive about the World of Warcraft. It offers the same engrossing qualities of any other hobby or pastime.

Q: WHAT ABOUT ALLOWING CHILDREN TO PLAY?

A: World of Warcraft offers Parental Controls that enable you to restrict your child's playing schedule, even when you're not around. You can also control whether your child can use the in-game voice chat to speak to other players. There are filters to ensure that obscenities aren't shown in the chat windows, and you can avoid the vast majority of goofy or immature players by turning off general chat. These chat channels allow players to communicate with a larger number of players in the game, but you can limit a child's access to random people by cutting off these channels.

With a bit of setup time, you can make it so that kids are playing with you or with people that you've checked out. There are family-oriented guilds that keep the chat clean and have a family-friendly good time.

Introduction
Picking the Right Realm

Millions of people can't all play in the same place at the same time, so it makes sense that World of Warcraft isn't hosted from a single computer. Instead, servers around the world host the many realms where World of Warcraft is played. Each realm is a separate copy of the game where several thousand people play.

Your first act, after you register, patch, and load the game, is to select a realm. If you have friends already playing, contact them and ask which realm to join. Otherwise, you are strongly encouraged to try out one of the realms marked for NEW PLAYERS.

TUESDAY DOWNTIME

Blizzard typically uses Tuesdays to perform server maintenance or apply the latest updates (known as patches) to World of Warcraft. The game is often unavailable from early morning until early afternoon, depending on your time zone. Downtimes are often given in Pacific Time since that is the time zone where Blizzard's offices are located.

THE REALM SELECTION SCREEN

TYPES OF REALMS

The list of available realms may be daunting the first time you scroll through it. Use the following information to find the right realm for you.

Normal	Normal realms are also known as PvE (Player-versus Environment) realms. If you're new to the game, strongly consider a Normal server before trying any other type.
PvP	Player-versus-Player servers. In addition to all the standard aspects of the game, players from opposite factions are free to attack each other in most areas. If you don't know what PvP is, don't choose it.
RP	Roleplaying servers. Environments that encourage players to stay "in character" while playing the game. There are additional rules in place that govern player names and behavior in public areas. There aren't any mechanical processes that force you to roleplay your character well (or at all), but it is encouraged in these realms.
RPPVP	These servers combine the RP crowd with a PvP rule set.

POPULATION

The last variable to consider is the player population of a server.

Full	New accounts are unable to create characters on Full servers.
High	A large number of players. There's always someone around who might help, but you may be waiting in a queue to log in some nights.
Medium	A robust player base but not too crowded.
Low	Sparse player base. You will always be able to do your tasks, but there may not be many people around to help you.
New Players	Newer servers with a lower overall population.
Offline	Grayed out servers are briefly unavailable, but will likely be online again soon—save for Tuesday downtimes.

TO MAKE YOUR SELECTION

Click on the realm to highlight it, and click Okay. You are now logged into that server. Since you have no characters, this screen is currently empty. Press Create New Character in the lower-right corner, and read the next section for help in creating your character.

THE CHARACTER CREATION SCREENS

The character creation screen is divided into two screens. You begin with a random character (which appears in the center) that you can customize in multiple ways. The first screen lets you pick your race, class, and gender.

Class

The icons for classes appear here; no race can play every class, so some of these icons will be unavailable.

Gender

Choosing to play a male character or female character provides different options for the character's physical appearance.

Race

Click on these icons to change the race of your character. Choosing a race impacts which classes are available for you to play.

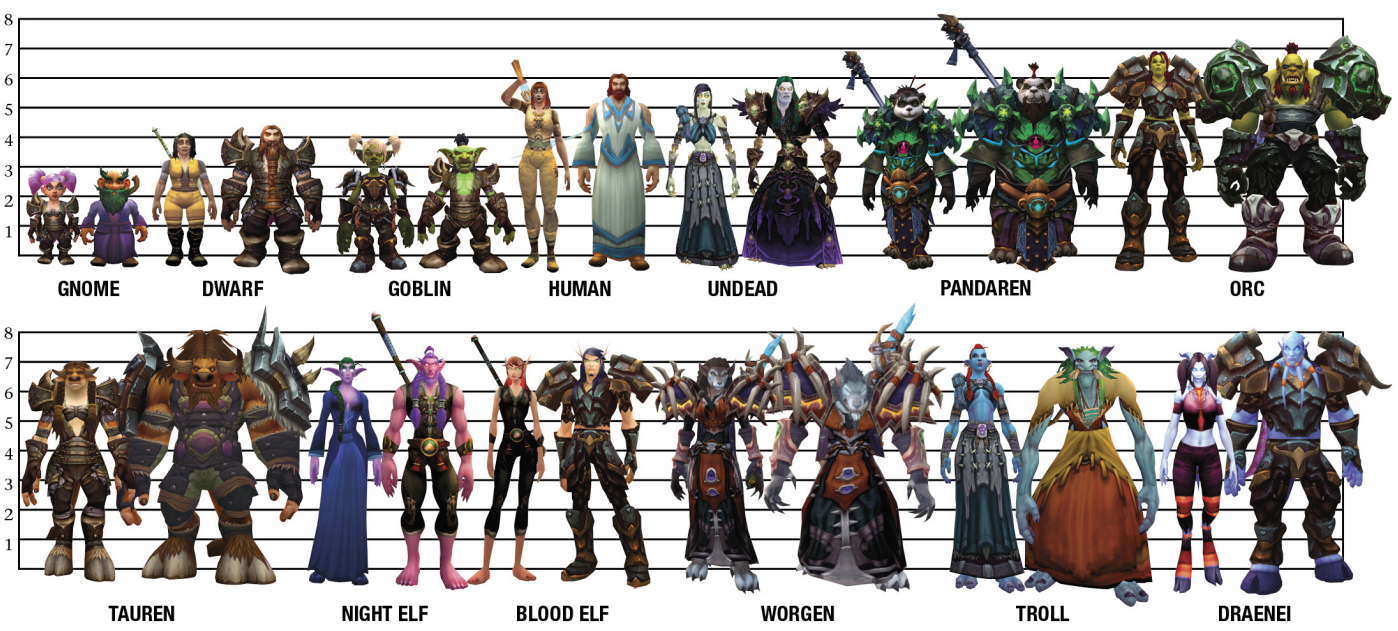

More Info

Clicking this button brings up two information boxes; one provides Race History, while the other is a Class Description. The information provided in these boxes updates as you click on different icons for races and classes. Each race has advantages and extra abilities which are listed at the top of the Race History box. The Class Description box displays a few brief lines that serve as an overview of the class, and then provides additional details to give you a better feel for the class.

FOR MORE INFORMATION

If you are most interested in playing a specific faction or race, turn to the Races section of the guide. If you are most interested in playing a specific class, turn to the Character Classes section to read about the available classes and their significant characteristics.

CHARACTER APPEARANCE AND NAME

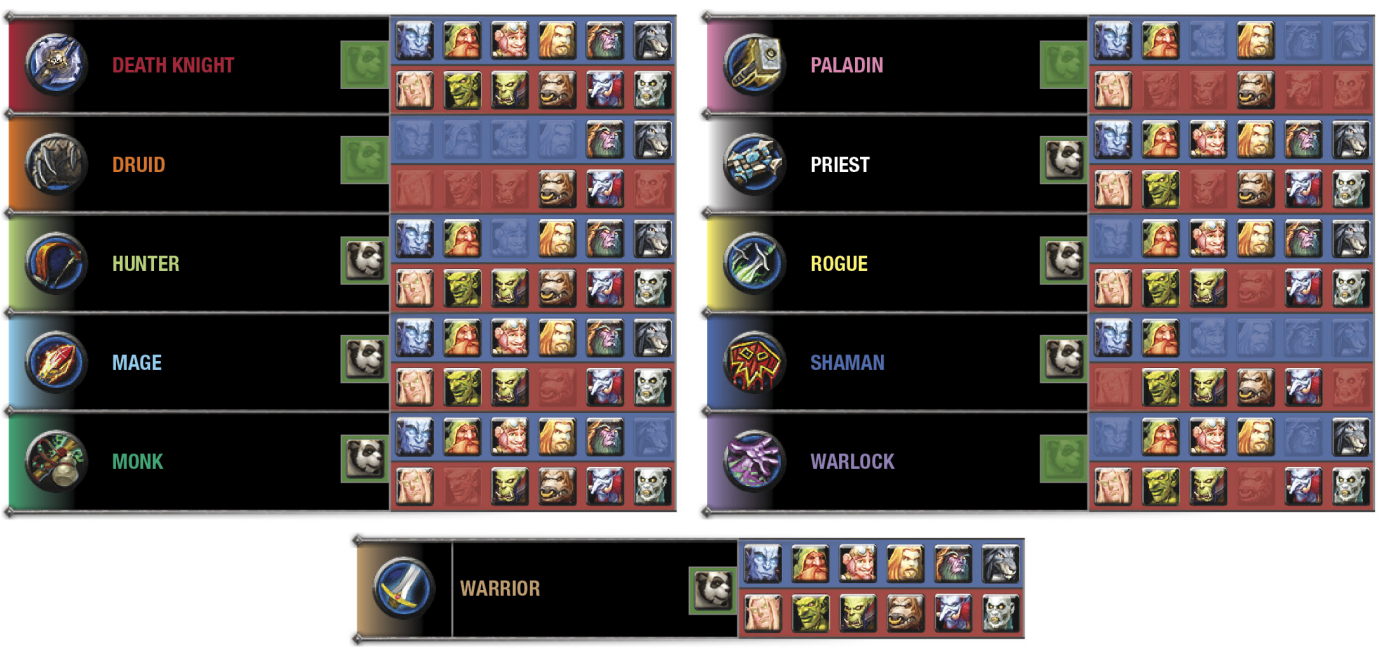

When you are comfortable with your character's class and race, click Next to bring up the second character creation screen. This screen allows you to change your character's gender and appearance. When you click an option on the left side of the screen (under the Gender window), the available options for that category appear on the right. The number of options available varies by race.

CURRENT CHARACTER

Each time you click on a new option for race, gender, class, or physical appearance, the character displayed here is updated. The gender and the physical appearance choices you make for your character are purely cosmetic—they have no impact on how your character performs in the game. Have fun choosing your hair color and markings. After all, this is your in-game persona—you want to like what you see! You can press Randomize to let the game show you some options.

When you're satisfied with your character's class, race, and appearance, it's time to select a name. When choosing a name, consider that your character's name is the first impression others have of you in the game. Blizzard has a "Naming Policy" that is designed to discourage players from using character names that are inappropriate to the game. In general, you want to avoid real-world names (like celebrities), offensive names, names from other fictional words, or trademarked names. If you really can't think of a name that you want, or if all of your good ones are already taken, try the Randomize button under the bar. It might give you a few suitable suggestions that are available.

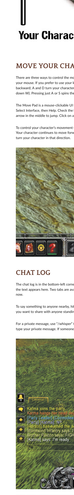

Introduction
Talking, Your First Steps

With your character created, it's time to get into the real game. It seems pretty complex when you first log in, however, you're not alone. Your character is already equipped with a few abilities and items to help you get started. Let's take a look at the more aspects of gameplay experienced during your first time in World of Warcraft. Each of the topics is covered in more detail later in this guide, but what you learn in this chapter will get you started.

After the opening movie ends, you are given control of your character. The first things to do are skim the Beginner Tooltips that appear and take a look at the minimap in the top-right corner of your screen.

Your character is indicated by an arrow. It points in the same direction that your character faces. For now, look for the nearby quest giver (marked with a yellow exclamation point). That's your first destination.

MOVE YOUR CHARACTER

There are three ways to control the movement of your character with your keyboard: with the on-screen Move Pad, or with your mouse. If you prefer to use your keyboard, use the W, A, S, and D keys. W and S move your character forward and backward. A and D turn your character left and right. To turn, press W to move forward, then press A/S (while still holding down W). Pressing just A or S spins the character in place.

The Move Pad is a mouse-clickable UI frame. To display it, click on the red question mark near the bottom-right of the screen. Select Interface, then Help. Check the box next to Show Move Pad. Click on the arrows to move in a direction, or the larger arrow in the middle to jump. Click on a different arrow to change directions, or the same arrow to stop.

To control your character's movement with the mouse, press the left and right mouse buttons simultaneously to move forward. Your character continues to move forward as long as you hold down both mouse buttons. Slide the mouse to the left or right to turn your character in that direction.

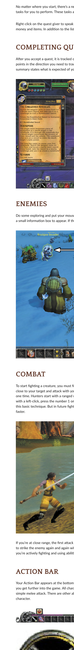

CHAT LOG

The chat log is in the bottom-left corner of your screen. Whenever the game or other players want to communicate with you, the text appears here. Text tabs are available (General and Combat Log), but the General tab is all you need to focus on for now.

To say something to anyone nearby, hit Enter. If the screen doesn't read "Say", then hit enter and type "/say". Type the message you want to share with anyone standing nearby, then press Enter.

For a private message, use "/whisper" to talk with a specific person. Just type in "/1" along with the name of the person. Then type your private message. If someone whispered you first, press "r" to respond to that whisper.

INTERACT WITH A QUEST GIVER

No matter where you start, there's a nearby character with a yellow exclamation point over his head. These characters have tasks for you to perform. These tasks are called quests, and they are an integral part of your gaming experience.

Right-click on the quest giver to speak with him. The quest giver describes a task and offers compensation in the form of money and items. In addition to the listed rewards, you earn Experience Points for completing quests.

COMPLETING QUESTS

After you accept a quest, it is tracked on the screen under your minimap. The minimap is updated as well. A thick, golden arrow points to the direction you need to travel to complete the quest. Also, a question mark appears over a quest giver's head. Click on the quest's title. The quest summary states what is expected of you to complete a given quest.

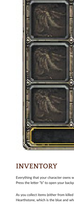

ENEMIES

Do some exploring and put your mouse cursor over the different creatures. Look near the bottom-right corner of the screen for a small information box to appear. If the enemy is one you need for a quest, target it and start attacking!

COMBAT

To start fighting a creature, you must first select it by left-clicking while your mouse pointer is on it. For your first fight, move close to your target and attack with your melee weapon by placing your pointer over the enemy and right-clicking your mouse one time. Hunters start with a ranged weapon, so they should attack from a few yards away. If you already selected the enemy with a left-click, press the number 0 on your keyboard to start attacking. In the starting area, you can defeat any enemy with the basic technique. But in future fights, you should start to use your character's class abilities to make things go much faster.

If you're at close range, the first attack triggers what is known as your auto attack. This means that your character will continue to strike the enemy again and again with no further action on your part. Every character can do much more than this when you're actively fighting and using abilities but auto-attacks are good enough to bring down early enemies.

ACTION BAR

Your Action Bar appears at the bottom of the screen. At low levels, you won't have many abilities here, but that will change as you get further into the game. All characters begin with the number 1 initially either the starting attack for your class or a simple melee attack. There are other abilities on your Action Bar, but they are different depending on the class and race of your character.

LOOT

Almost all enemies offer some kind of loot. When you have loot waiting, your dead enemy sparkles. Right-click to open the enemy loot box, then click on each item to put it into your inventory. If you press Shift and right-click at the same time, each item is sent directly to your backpack.

Some coins are award items when you complete them. These items go directly to your backpack. Any money you collect (just coppers at this point) are also stored in your backpack.

INVENTORY

Everything that your character owns will either be equipped, which means wearing it, or it will be stored in your backpack. Press the letter "B" to open your backpack and see what's inside.

As you collect items (either from kills of enemies or quests) they go to your backpack. Every character starts the game with a Hearthstone, which is the blue and white item in the first slot.

Introduction

The User Interface

USING YOUR MOUSE

The mouse cursor is a very precise tool for moving around the game world. Take a moment to learn your mouse pointer options and how to use them. Your mouse pointer will change depending on what you are doing and what you are pointing at. Here are the most common mouse pointers you will see:

CURSOR SYMBOLS

	Move to this location.
	Examine what you point at (Alt).
	Interact with what you've set your sights on.
	Attack what you've set your sights on.
	Pickpocket your victim.
	Unable to move to location.
	Unable to use your skill on that object.
	Move to take the item you want to examine/interact/pickpocket.
	Item will fall on a tile that has a wall and is thus a useless tile.

THE GAME INTERFACE

The game interface is the collection of windows, bars, and buttons that you see on the screen. Here is a quick overview of the most important elements of the interface:

The most important parts of the interface are the bars, located in the upper left corner of the screen. These are, from top to bottom:

- Health (red) shows your current health. If you run out of health, you die.
- Mana (blue) shows your current mana. Mana is used to cast spells.
- Stamina (green) shows your current stamina. Stamina is used to perform physical actions.

BUFFS AND DEBUFFS

Buffs and debuffs are temporary effects that can be cast on you by yourself or others. Buffs affect you in a positive way (like Agility which increases your dexterity), while debuffs affect you in a negative way (like Poison which causes you to lose health over time). Buffs and debuffs are displayed in the upper right corner of the screen.

The most important buffs and debuffs that you need to recognize in the early game sessions are Mentor, Disease, Regen, and Poison. Here's what they look like:

CHARACTER PORTRAIT

Life Bar

Below your character portrait is a green/red bar. If you have been hurt, you can see how much health you have left by looking at this bar. If you have been poisoned, you can see how much health you will lose by looking at the red part of the bar. If you have been healed, you can see how much health you have gained by looking at the green part of the bar.

Second Bar

The color of the second bar changes depending on what you are doing. The bar can be used to show the amount of Stamina, Mana, Experience, Weight, Hunger, or Thirst.

BUTTONS

Below the second bar are the buttons that open your Backpack, Character Sheet, Skill Window, Spellbook, Journal, Options, Help, and Logout windows.

MINIMAP BUTTONS

Tracking

The tracker icon on the right is used to track a specific type of object on the minimap. When the tracker is active (blue), you can click on the minimap to see where the nearest object of the selected type is located. The tracker will point in the direction of the object.

Toggle Map

The toggle map button is used to show and hide the minimap. When the minimap is hidden, it will be replaced by a compass. The compass will point in the direction of the nearest Waypoint. This is useful when you are trying to find your way around.

UNDER ATTACK?

When you are under attack, a red border will appear around the edges of the screen. This is a warning that you are currently being attacked by another player or by a monster.

MORE ON MAPS

Maps are a very important part of the game. Learn how to use them well. Controlling Mentor/Regen buttons is also extremely important. Mentor is a buff that will increase the skill of the person you cast it on. Regen is a buff that will heal the person you cast it on.

CHAT LOGS

If you have ever been in the game, then you have seen the chat logs. We discuss the importance of skills. The character screen provides information about your character's skills and abilities.

INTERFACE BAR

OPENING AND CLOSING WINDOWS

To open a window, click the button on the interface bar. To close a window, click the button again or click the X in the window's upper right corner.

RESIZE

You can resize the size of the chat log. To do this, click and drag the bottom right corner of the chat log. The chat log will resize to the new size you have chosen.

SPELLBOOK & ABILITIES

The Spellbook button will open the Spellbook window. The Spellbook window shows the character's abilities and spells. Abilities are listed on the left side of the window. Spells are listed on the right side of the window. Click on an ability or spell to see more information about it.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT THE GAME MONEY

CHARACTER INFORMATION

The Character Information can be seen after pressing the Character Sheet button. It shows the character's appearance, their current Reputation, Experience, Weight, Hunger, Thirst, Stamina, Mana, Health, and Skills. Here you can also see your character's Backpack and Equipment.

Click the skills button to see the character's skills and abilities. Skills are listed on the left side of the window. Abilities are listed on the right side of the window. Click on a skill or ability to see more information about it. Skills and abilities are explained in more detail in the Skills section.

Reputation, current weight and current skill will be the 3 most used and important items. Each of these will be explained in more detail in the Character Information section.

Reputation

The Character window shows a summary of the stats for your character. Reputation is the first stat listed. It shows what the character and monsters think about you. Reputation can have a positive or negative influence on your character's Karma.

Experience

The Character window shows all the stats for your character. Experience is the second stat listed. It shows how much experience your character has gained. Experience can be gained by Training or by Questing.

Weight

The Character window shows all the stats for your character. Weight is the third stat listed. It shows how much weight your character is carrying. Weight can be reduced by Eating or by Drinking.

Current Skill

The Character window shows all the stats for your character. Current Skill is the fourth stat listed. It shows what skill your character is currently Training or Questing.

In this section, you learn more about controlling your field of vision in the game and moving your character around the environment.

BASIC MOVEMENT

There are three ways to control the movement of your character: your keyboard, the on-screen move pad, or your mouse. By default, your character moves at a run. To switch between running speed and walking speed, press the forward slash key, which is found on the number pad.

JUMP TO IT!

To start out, hit your space bar; it's a big target, so it's a natural place to begin. The space bar causes your character to jump. Jumping is often the quickest way to avoid low obstacles, and it won't slow you down if you're running somewhere.

KEYBOARD COMMANDS

If you prefer using your keyboard to move your character, try to use the W, A, S, and D keys. The arrow keys move your character as well, but using WASD leaves your fingers closer to the number keys used to activate your character's abilities. Of course, there's nothing wrong with using the arrow keys. If you're more comfortable with those keys, use them while you're playing.

MOUSE CONTROL

To control your character's movement with the mouse, press both mouse buttons simultaneously to move forward. Your character continues to move forward as long as you hold down both mouse buttons. Slide the mouse to the left or right to turn your character in that direction.

The move pad also relies on your mouse to move your character. Click on the arrows to move in a direction, or the larger arrow in the middle of the controls to jump. Click on a different arrow to change directions, or the same arrow to stop.

STRAFING

Strafing is a way to move left or right while barely changing what you see on screen. If you're not familiar with strafing, take some time now to try it out. Press the Q key to strafe to the left, and press the E key to strafe to the right. Strafing does not cancel Auto-Run.

AUTO-RUN

If you press the Num Lock key, your character starts to run and continues to run until you cancel it. The following are the quickest ways to cancel Auto-Run:

- Press Num Lock again
- Press any of the keyboard keys or move pad arrows that cause your character to move forward or backward
- Press both mouse buttons at the same time

You retain control of your character when Auto-Run is active. Pressing the keys to turn your character left or right still turns your character and does not cancel Auto-Run. If you want to use your mouse to turn your character, press the right mouse button and slide the mouse left or right.

THE CAMERA

In most games, "camera" refers to your field of view of the gaming world. In World of Warcraft, the default camera view shows a small area, with your character in the middle of the screen. The smoothest way to change what you see is to press the left button on your mouse, and hold it down while you move the mouse. Your character stays in place, but what you see changes. Be careful when moving your mouse forward or back. You may end up staring at the ground or straight upward!

After you get comfortable looking around, do it while your character is in motion. It may be disorienting at first, but try to get the hang of it. It's a big help when you're on the lookout for enemies.

You can also change how far the camera is from your character. Some players like to zoom in tight on their characters; others like to zoom out for a broader view of the game.

To zoom in, press the Home key multiple times or roll your mouse wheel forward. Once you are in first-person perspective (meaning you are looking through the eyes of your character), you can't zoom in anymore.

To zoom out, press the End key multiple times or roll your mouse wheel backward. There is a limit to how far you can pull back the view, and it always centers on your character.

Beyond the vistas, views of the Mists of Mark VII installations and sometimes around in-game secrets. Questing is an efficient way to increase your character levels and currency and acquire important gear.

WHAT'S WITH ALL THE PUNCTUATION?

Not sure what the exclamation point means? Here's a quick guide to the various symbols you'll see above quests in the game world.

- ! Available quest

FINDING QUESTS

For most quests, right-click on the person or item, read the quest, and if you don't automatically accept the quest click Accept. Some quests require you to find a person or item in the world, and you'll see a quest marker on the map to help you find the objective. You can set your current area by entering a new zone! Read it for a sample when your mmorpg when traveling to new zones.

QUEST GIVERS

Quest givers are identified by the exclamation point floating over their heads. Many quest givers offer more than one quest. Some quests even start from items.

Items As Quest Givers

You must complete one of your quests in a Blessed Tome. Blessed Tome of Ancient Legends once. Frequently offering rewards for local villains who need tracking and killing. There are also items found in the open, or in caches of enhancers that you can access. All these items have golden enchantment particles that appear over them.

Dropped Items

Quests that require you to loot a body or a chest. Key Item that begins a quest has a gold enchantment point integrated into its icon. Read over the item to see the quest it offers.

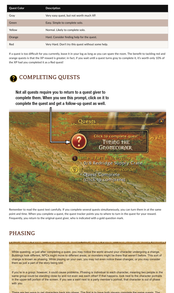

TYPES OF QUESTS

Most quests are assigned to you as you complete them on your own and do them only once. There are other types of quests. Understanding your Quests log's interface corner quests is one of the following.

Dungeon

Quests that must be completed inside an instanced dungeon (the earliest you'll see a dungeon is level 10) can matches with the dungeon finder. You must have the dungeon and complete these quests as part of a group.

Raid

Quests that must be completed with a raid group are marked with a different icon. Raid groups are essentially multiple groups dungeon. You won't need to worry about raid quests until you reach a much higher level.

Daily

Quests marked with blue exclamation points in your Quest Log can be completed once each day. These quests come from the Quartermaster in each major city.

Class

Some quests are available solely to a specific class. These quests often lead to learning a new class skill or acquiring a new piece of gear.

Seasonal

Quests that are available during certain events during the year. Check the in-game calendar for information about events.

MORE QUEST TYPES

While the game doesn't categorize quests in the following ways, most quests fall into one of the following types.

Breadcrumb quests require you to speak with another character, or take an item to another character. They are called breadcrumb quests because they are designed to lead you to a new area or a different area with more quests in the area.

There are two types of collection quests. The first type does not require you to fight. When accepting the quest look for objects that sparkle. Put your mouse pointer over the object and right-click to use it in your backpack. The second type of collection quest requires you to kill a number of creatures to collect an item. Not every creature you kill will drop the item you need, but the more you kill the creatures, the more likely you are to collect the item. Some of these quests require you to kill a specific creature, while others require you to kill any creature that fits a description.

The object of kill quests is to eliminate a number of a specific kind of enemy. These quests are simple and straightforward. Once you start the right type of enemy, it's a matter of seeing them down in combat.

In escort quests, you find an ally in your vicinity and lead the character to safety. These quests are usually encountered in out-of-the-way locations while completing other quests.

A defend a series of quests that must be completed in a certain order. Chained quests aren't marked out in your Quest Log, but it's easy to tell when you're in the midst of a quest chain when you speak with the same quest giver many times. Completing a long quest chain can be one of the most satisfying aspects of the game.

QUEST LEVELS

Your Quest Log also indicates the level of difficulty of your quest using corresponding colors. The level of difficulty is in relation to your character's level. If the quest and your current level. As you gain levels, the quest becomes relatively easier, as the color changes.

Quest Color	Description
Red	Very tough quest, but not worth much XP.
Orange	Quite difficult to complete solo.
Yellow	Normal. Likely to complete solo.
Green	Quite simple, including for your level.
Red	Very hard. Don't try this quest without some help.

If a quest is too difficult for your character's level, you may be trying at one you can open the icon. The benefit to sorting red and orange quests is that the XP reward is greater. In fact, if you wish until a quest turns grey to complete it. It's worth only 10% of the XP that you completed it at the level.

COMPLETING QUESTS

Not all quests require you to return to a quest giver to complete them. When you see this prompt, click on it to complete the quest and get a follow-up quest as well.

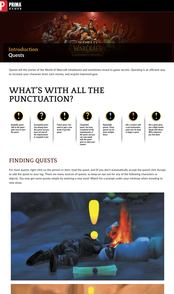

Remember to read the quest text carefully. If you complete several quests simultaneously, you can turn them in at the same quest and time. When you complete a quest, the quest tracker points you to turn in the quest for your reward. Frequently, you return to the original quest giver, who is indicated with a gold question mark.

PHASING

TRACKING YOUR QUEST PROGRESS

When you accept most quests, look to see a new tracking window to appear under your minimap. The text here summarizes the objectives needed to complete the quest in one by. Some quests have more than one objective, such as the bracket, so in all quests appear here, every write down sequence in your Quest Log.

If you must more information about a specific quest, click on the text (not the numbered circle) to open a new window with additional details. Clicking the numbered circle to open a quest's objective window gives you an entirely tracking, so you may want to click the text instead. You can also open the quest log by clicking a certain quest, right-click on the quest and select Abandon Quest from the drop-down menu.

USING THE MAP TO FIND QUEST OBJECTIVES

After accepting a quest, a yellow arrow often appears on your minimap. The arrow indicates the direction to travel to complete the quest. The region on the map shows more information in the form of other a yellow question mark or a numbered circle.

The numbered icons on the regions may not tied to the quests which are being tracked. Hovering over one of the numbered circles brings up the objectives for that quest. The yellow arrows on the minimap points you in the direction of the currently selected quest you are actively tracking. If you want to track a different quest, click on that quest's numbered circle (either on the map or in the Quest Log). The yellow arrow will change to point in the direction of the newly selected quest. You can also click on the word Track Quest in a tracked item on your map and minimap.

The yellow question marks on locations to turn in completed quests. The circle question mark indicates the turn-in for the quest you're actively tracking. If you want quest-finishing locations, do you approach the indicated zone, the yellow question mark appears on your minimap, providing the exact location for you to complete your quest.

Click on any quest name in the Map & Quest Log to bring up more information about that quest while leaving the map view the same. Click on the numbered circle next to the quest name to open the quest's objective window. You can open both the quest log and the map at the same time.

DARK YELLOW DOTS ON THE MINIMAP

When the objective of a quest is to find a specific enemy (often referred to as a "named"), the enemy appears on a minimap as a dark yellow dot. Named enemies are usually tougher than the enemies around them, but they also drop better rewards when you defeat them. The target symbol of these named enemies helps you differentiate them from the rest of the scrum.

Quest Rewards

Sky sometimes have a choice of the rewards you can take, but not all rewards are available to all classes. When you mouse over the available quest rewards, you can see which ones you can use.

If you mouse over the item that interests you, the game compares that item with your currently equipped item, so you can see the difference in characteristics.

If an item is shared in its stat, your character/class can't use it. Try to find items that are ideal for your character. For instance, a Warrior wouldn't want to wear a piece of armor that increases the power of spells. Instead, look for armor that increases the power of your sword. Warriors. Don't be fooled when picking a quest reward. Just if there is something awesome before making a final decision.

When there aren't any perfect rewards, think about sell values. It's often to select the most expensive quest reward if you aren't going to use it.

Faction Rewards

After completing some quests, you receive access to your General Chat Log, indicating that your reputation with certain factions has increased or decreased. This is a way of quantifying which groups in the game have been helpful or hindered by your work in the area.

Failed Quests

It's possible not to be able to meet the goals outlined in a quest. The quest icon is now by card is marked as Failed. Don't despair! Just abandon the quest (right-click on it), and you can pick it up again from the quest giver.

A Final Word On Quests

There are thousands of fun-to-interact Mark VII quests. You don't have to do them all in fact, you cannot do them all. Some quests are designed for certain classes, and some are faction specific, so you can't do them without leveling a character that plays the other side.

Do what sounds and the sounds you are used to rewarded, and which you don't. The game leads you through many adventures, but there's nothing stopping you from wandering off and doing something of your own. Explore the world. Have fun. No-one knows when you might have a message in a bottle that leads to a new quest!

Introduction
Communicating With Other Players

Like everything else in the game, you can communicate with many people at once and with coordinating you want to do with other players. This chapter covers how to talk to other players, how to ask for help, and how to make in-game friends.

The most basic way to communicate in the game is to press the Enter key, which opens the chat prompt. You can type in your comment and press Enter. The message is sent to everyone in your general vicinity.

STARTER EDITION ACCOUNTS

If you're still playing the Starter Edition, there are a few communication limits:

- You cannot trade items with anyone else.
- You cannot send mail to other players that have not yet ever been Friends List.
- You cannot whisper to players who are not in your party, even if their names are shown above their heads.

These limitations end as soon as you pay for the account and wait for the game to register the change. A Starter Edition account has the functionality of a paid account, so there is no long-term problem or concern if you don't.

WHO CAN HEAR ME?

The different speech commands are in place to let you communicate selectively. You wouldn't want to shout something to the entire world, right?

Say

Say goes to anyone nearby. Speech is open to chaos. By default, you are in a speech bubble over your head. As long as people nearby are in the same faction as your character, they can see what you type (unless their file opposite faction can take appears to be gibberish). Because Say is audible, avoid saying anything awkward or inappropriate.

Whisper

Whisper (/tell works as well) is a private message for one other player. You must include the character's name after the whisper. There is no limit to the distance Whisper can travel.

Try to set for yourself! Hit Enter, then type "/whisper" followed by your character's name. When you hit space, the prompt will change and whatever you type next becomes the message you send to yourself after you hit Enter again.

Yell/Y

Yell is a broadcast message to all players in your region. This is the most awkward communication method in World of Warcraft. It's similar to Say in that you don't have to anyone within its radius; however, the distance covered is much better than Say.

Party Chat

/p/ts is a private message that lets you communicate with everyone in your current group at the same time. No one outside of your group can hear this chat even if they're standing in the middle of your party.

Guild Chat

/g/uild sends a message to anyone in the same guild as you. No one can see this chat, and only your members see what you're typing even if they're half a world away from you.

The Chat Menu

All of these same commands are available from the Chat menu. Click on the desired option from the Chat menu (it looks like a speech bubble) and start composing the message.

All of the text and minimal messages appear in your General chat log. To see older messages, use the up and down arrows. To scroll through the chat log more quickly, use Page Up and Page Down. You can also scroll by moving the mouse wheel over the chat window. Any of the commands mentioned in General is valid here and from Everything text and voice.

USING VOICE EMOTES

Voice emotes are in-game expressions that your character's lord and can say. Most emotes have nonverbal benefits or group benefits. Some of the most useful ones are listed in the table below. Type /emote to see a complete list and then mousing over Voice Emote. Click one of the voice emotes to make your character perform it.

USING THE CHANNELS

Each item you buy for the game or make is a valuable commodity. Auctioneers in your General chat log about what channels are available. A list of the various common chat channels is included on this page.

Channels are used to communicate with all players in a certain area of character. By default, you join the General Chat and LocalDefense channels, you also join the Trade channel, but that only becomes active when you enter one of the city cities. Press Navigation Menu or Menu/Esc.

You can have each of these channels at any time by typing /leave #, where # is the number of the channel.

CHANNEL COMMANDS

To see which channels are available, press the letter "C" for the Social menu and click the Chat tab. In this page, you can see all of the channels you're currently in and which ones are available to join. Click the name of a channel to join it. Click on it a second time and the name of the channel will be removed from the Channels list.

For all the / shortcuts, press the space bar after the command name! Then type in your message.

Command	Example
/join [channel password]	/join goldenchannel
/leave [channel] or /part [channel]	/leave 3
/list [channel]	/list 2
/password [channel] [password]	/password 3 mypassword
/invite [player]	/invite Thrall
/kick [player]	/kick Garrosh
/moderator [player]	/moderator Jaina
/unmoderator [player]	/unmoderator Jaina
/voice [player]	/voice Sylvanas
/unvoice [player]	/unvoice Sylvanas
/owner [channel] [player]	/owner 3 Thrall
/ban [player]	/ban Garrosh
/unban [player]	/unban Garrosh
/setmotd [channel] [message]	/setmotd 3 Welcome to the channel!
/mute [player]	/mute Garrosh
/unmute [player]	/unmute Garrosh
/hide [channel]	/hide 3
/show [channel]	/show 3
/color [channel] [color]	/color 3 ff0000
/setlevel [channel] [level]	/setlevel 3 50
/setlevel [channel] [level]	/setlevel 3 50

CUSTOM CHANNELS

Example
Join Orgrimmar

Did you know that you can create your own chat channels? This is a powerful ability for people just starting out or veterans. There are many reasons to create a channel. You can create one for others to be able to speak to you or ask a few online, let them know to Join Custom Channel Name, or ask them to join a channel.

The pros are to the Friendliest channel, even if there wasn't one already open. Other people who hear that command can choose to join the channel or not. It's another way to meet new buddies. You can even have a guild within a guild this way, or even a group within a group, and therefore the communication stays within the current task is completed.

ASKING FOR HELP

There are a lot of ways to ask questions. The most effective way to get a real answer to a specific question is to find another player in your current area who is likely to know the answer and ask them to current task. You can then say, Can it work in the same area as I'm doing? Where do I find the Ancient Mana? Can you help me?

A broader way to go about asking for help is sending your query out on the General channel. There are more people on the General channel than on any other. You're willing to find a response to nonetheless very helpful, at best. Also, it's not a pleasant thing to do.

Here's the command for asking a question on the General channel:

/1 Your question or comment goes here!
```

By either method, the best way to answer a helpful response is to ask a specific question, and avoid being vague or demanding.

Bad Example: "I can't find the karma tea!!"

Good Example: "Is anyone else looking for the Gamma tea?"

Better Example: "I'm having trouble finding the Gamma tea; they keep out there!"

An Internet search can be surprisingly powerful for getting a fast response as well. Odds are that if you're having a problem, there are others who have run into the same issue. Try searching with "WoW" where is the Gamma tea" search there get an answer if people in-game are just as stumped as you are.

SENDING & RECEIVING MAIL

Use the mail system to send messages, items, or in-game currency to other players. Mailboxes are found in all big cities and most towns and villages. They take on various appearances, depending upon their locale.

Any guard in a major area will point out mailboxes if you ask them about it.

Receiving Mail

Anytime you have mail waiting, the game shows a letter envelope icon near your minimap.

To get your mail, right-click when your character approaches a mailbox. The first tab that opens is your Inbox. Left-click to open the message and read it. Some messages are just that—messages. Others have items or in-game currency attached. Click on the mail shown there to receive the stuff and gold it sent.

If you mail a piece of mail but leave it in your Inbox, the letter turns gray and can remain in your Inbox for 30 days. When mail Inbox is automatically deleted, including any attachments.

If someone sends you an item by mistake, you can click on Return to immediately send it back. You can also Reply to the sender.

BUYER BEWARE

People sometimes try to scam players through the mail system. They seem there through the mail something normal and then send you a message asking for the stuff. Nothing in the mail goes back to you automatically.

World of Warcraft now has a system in place to help prevent mail scams. The first time that seems to your Inbox, left-click to open the message and read it. Some messages are just that—messages. Others have items or in-game currency attached. Click on the mail shown there to receive the stuff and gold it sent.

If you mail a piece of mail but leave it in your Inbox, the letter turns gray and can remain in your Inbox for 30 days. When mail Inbox is automatically deleted, including any attachments.

If someone sends you an item by mistake, you can click on Return to immediately send it back. You can also Reply to the sender.

Sending Mail

The second tab in the mail system is the Send box to send mail. Type in the recipient's name very carefully. Any given character's name is unique, so you don't have to worry about sending mail to the wrong person. Type in the subject of the mail and a message if you want to send one. Any attachments you have, such as in-game currency, are added to the mail when you send it. Click on the Send button. The only mail you can mail directly to your character's Inbox of Reforged Items are Blue Account Bucks, sent by Reforged customers.

You decide whether to write a message, send an item, or send money. To attach an item, right-click on anything in your Backpack or Reforged Bank. Then click on the Attach Item button. To send money, type the amount of gold, silver, or copper you want to send. Then click Send Money. The gold is sent to your account.

Each mail message costs 30 copper plus 60 copper per stack of items you send. For example, it costs 90 (30+60) 1.5 (for 3 stacks) selling and buying. Also, you can't send mail to characters who have not yet reached level 5 on the Starter Edition. Mail has the recipient agree to pay. This cost always gets money and the other gets your 0.15 G. Some copies other only 0.1 G.

Some characters, mainly auctioneers, have a special mail system that allows you to send many items and money messages bundled at no added gold. Use the point of these guilds to find out how to send through the mail at lightning speed.

USING THE SOCIAL WINDOW

You can use the Social Window to track your friends and find other players in your current region.

Using The Friends List

The first tab of the social window is your Friends List. If you've enjoyed chatting or questing with someone, add them to your Friends List so you can find them again. To add a new name, click Add Friends type in the name, and click Accept. The player is now added to your Friends list. Anytime you open the window, you immediately see whether they are online, as well as their current location and what they're doing (questing, fishing, in battle, and so on). Click Remove Friend to delete a friend.

Pair Private Time

World of Warcraft is a social game, but there are times when you may not want to be disturbed, such as during a tricky fight or while in a battleground that demands concentration. There are both tools in the game to cover these instances.

If you have a friend online in the Shroud, you can pair with them to form a /whisper to contact you get a message saying that you're busy. Typing /afk again turns off the Do Not Disturb notice and people can contact you normally.

You can't be removed at the time. If you want to customize that someone doesn't send, click the ignore tab on the Friends list. Click Ignore Player, type their name, and click Accept. You can always go back and remove players from the list at a later time.

Battle.Net and Real ID

Blizzard has been expanding the things you can do between accounts. You can now share your Real ID with another player, giving them the ability to contact you over multiple games. This is a nice feature, but you can contact any character on your account without sharing your Real ID with anyone.

To start a Real ID friend request, type in a person's account name to the friend section and wait for them to accept. Your friend can then see what you're playing and when you're online, and you can see the same information about them.

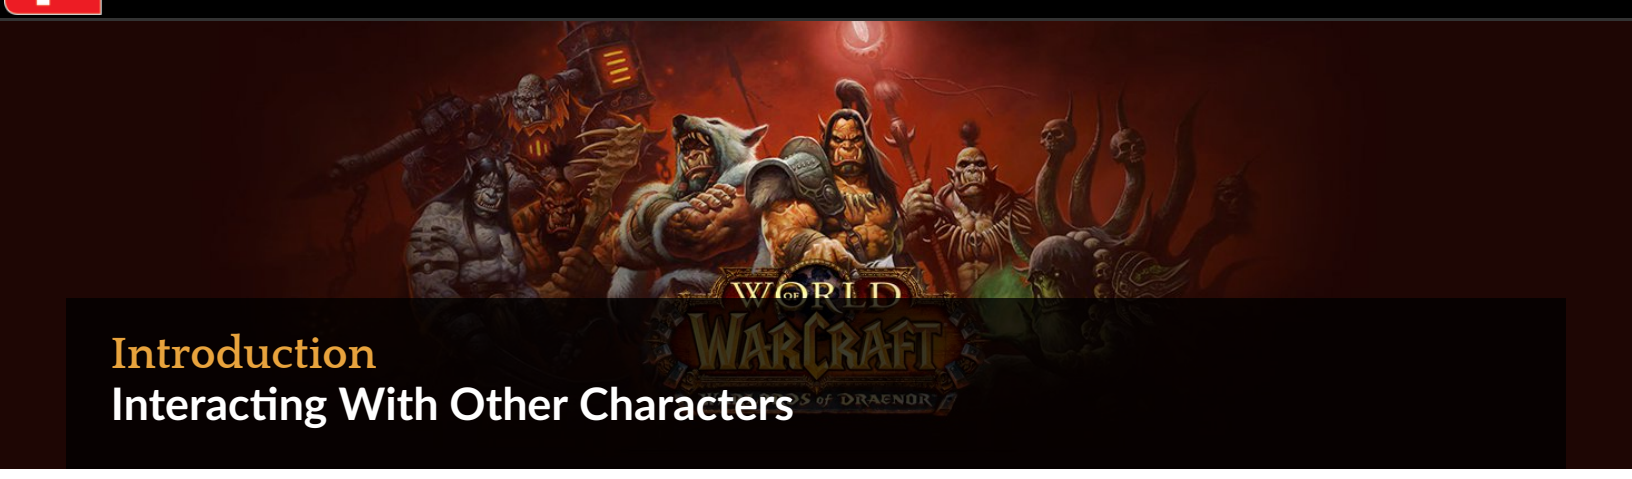

Please consider inviting the person to your guild after you both. Just because someone is in your guild doesn't mean they're your friend in real life. Real ID is intended for people that you trust.

REAL ID FEATURES

- Send and receive game invites and messages to and from friends
- Real names and characters are displayed
- See what your friends are doing, or just where they are located
- Invite friends to join your party or battleground
- Send and accept friend requests

Scroll Of Resurrection is a tool that can be used to resurrect a dead character. Click the scroll icon in the top right corner of your friends list to get the process started.

Scrolls of Resurrection are used to bring a friend back to World of Warcraft. If you know someone who hit their account lapse for any reason, you can use this function to give them a bit of free play. Should that friend purchase additional game time, you'll receive a bonus reward for bringing them back to the game. Click the scroll icon in the top right corner of your friends list.

Introduction
Interacting With Other Characters

If you're in the same place as another player (meaning a character with a blue target portrait), there are several ways to directly interact with them. Target them and then right-click on their player portrait. You get a short list of ways to communicate. You also see the name of the player's guild in their tooltip. Underneath their name, you also see a guild identifier.

Interaction Method	Result
Target Marker Icon	Set an icon for your party or raid group above this player.
Set Focus	Sets a player portrait in your interface, so you can keep tabs on their status.
Add Friend	Adds the character, or the player's BattleTag, to your Friends List.
Invite	Invite the player to join a group.
Whisper	Another way to whisper to a player.
Inspect	Opens the player's Character window, so you can see their armor, PvP status, and Talents.
Compare Achievements	Used to see who has done more in-game activities.
Trade	Opens the Trade window, so two players can buy, sell, trade, enchant, or unlock items for each other.
Follow	Causes your character to follow behind the other person, as long as you can keep up.
Duel	Invite another player to fight to the almost-death (no permanent damage is incurred by either party).
Pet Battle Duel	If both characters have trained Pet Battles, you can challenge that character to a Pet Battle Duel.
Move Frame	With this option, you can move their portrait and raid frame to a position you prefer.
Report Player for	If the player has an offensive name or is violating the terms of service to cheat, you can report them to Blizzard. Check Blizzard's Harassment Policy before you use this.

TRADING WITH OTHER PLAYERS

Before initiating a trade, you and another player should agree on the item to be sold and the price to be paid. To trade with another player, you must be in the same room. Either party can initiate the trade by right-clicking on the other player's portrait and clicking on Trade. You can also drag an item over a person to open this window.

The left window shows what you wish to trade; the right window shows what your comrade wishes to trade. There are three different areas for money, items, and items that you do not actually wish to trade. To make a trade, type in the amount of money you want to pay or you can right-click on any item in your backpack to send it to the Trade window. When your side of the transaction is accurate, press Trade; your window turns green. When your comrade does the same, the trade completes.

The "Will not be traded" section is for items that will be modified by another player. This includes equipment that someone will enhance or locked boxes that will be opened. To complete this transaction, place your item in the bottom box, and your comrade goes to work. It is customary to "tip" a player that performs this service for you.

Be careful about making trades of large sums of money or valuable materials if you don't know the other person. Most players are honest, but you should always be wise about who you do business with.

MORE INFORMATION ABOUT PLAYERS

If you are chatting with someone from afar, or if you see them chatting on a channel, you can find out more about them or initiate a conversation by clicking on their name when you see it in the General chat log.

Click on the player name to whisper to them. Shift+click on the player name, and the game tells you their level, race, class, guild, and current location.

If you're trying to find someone, use the /who command to search for players that match a name, level range, location, or class description. /who is quite useful in this way, but you can only search with it every few seconds. Type too quickly and the server will ignore some of your requests.

GROUP RULES

A group consists of two to five players, with one of them being a leader. When in a group, use the /p command to chat only with players in your group.

THESE ARE THE AUTOMATIC GROUP RULES IN THE GAME:

- Groups divide experience for kills. There is a bonus to the total XP gained, so groups that kill quickly can make more than soloing players. However, this requires an aggressive pace.
- If multiple people are on the same collection quest, each player waits his turn to get a dropped quest item.
- If multiple people are on the same quest to kill a single enemy, all players are able to loot the associated head, insignia, or other item the quest has requested.
- All members are awarded kill credit for targets as long as they are close enough to the fighting.

To create a group, there are two sets of commands: those used if you are in the same room, and those used if the player is in another location.

Group Command Summary

Command	Effect
Join	If you are asked to join a group, choose Accept or Decline.
Create/Invite	If you are creating a group, type: /invite <playername>: You can also right-click on the player portrait, and click Invite. You are now the Leader. Only the Leader can Invite.
Uninvite	To remove a player from your group, type: /kick <playername>. You can also right-click on the player portrait, and click Uninvite. Only the Leader can Uninvite.
Promote to Leader	If you are the Leader, you can designate someone else the Leader. Right-click the player portrait, and click Promote.
Leave	To leave your party, right-click your own portrait, and click Leave Party.
Party Chat	/p <Anything you want to say>
F1	Target yourself.
F2, F3, F4, F5	Target other party members.
F-key	Assist target; this targets anything that the currently selected person is targeting.

FOCUSING FIRE

One of the most fundamental group strengths is the ability to kill targets quickly by focusing all attacks on a single target. Five characters simultaneously attacking five monsters are effectively soloing. What's the point? Why would that even help? A few shared buffs would be the only major difference. However, five people that attack one monster kill it almost immediately. That takes 20% of the damage out of the fight. Always try to /assist the leaders of your group. They should let you know who to /assist. If they don't, actively state that you're going to /assist one of the damage dealers. This encourages others to do the same.

Looting Options

When playing in a group, there are several options for sharing the loot found on corpses. The default option is Group Loot, which is the most practical choice at beginning levels and for players who don't know each other. Here is the full list.

Free-For-All	Any player can loot any corpse. This is useful if one player is seeking a specific drop. However, this isn't a good option for strangers on collection quests. Friends get the most out of this because it's fast and easy.
Round Robin	Every player takes his turn in a specified order, just like a hand of cards. You know when it's your turn to loot because the corpse "sparkles" for you.
Master Looter	The Leader takes all the loot and doles it out at the end. This is primarily used in specific guilds, where point systems are in place to figure out loot distribution.
Group Loot	Has the same rules as Round Robin, with an additional option. When an Uncommon (Green) or better item appears, the game offers an option for players to roll, as in rolling dice, for the item. This is a good default when dealing with strangers.
Need Before Greed	Similar to Group Loot except that players who cannot equip the valuable items automatically cannot roll for them. This is the automatic setting for groups created in the Dungeon Finder. While this option is engineered to be the most fair, not everyone who can equip an item needs it. And sometimes, people who can't equip an item can use it for an alt, or a disenchant. Think carefully when choosing this option.
Personal	The Personal Loot option is for raids and won't be a concern until you are higher level.

MORE ABOUT GROUP LOOT AND NEED BEFORE GREED

Most parties tend to be in one of these two looting formats, so it's important to be able to quickly decide which is the best option to choose. When an item of high enough quality appears in the loot pool (and the loot is set to Group Loot or Need Before Greed), every eligible player is prompted to roll on the item.

Need

If the item description shows that you can use the item, and it's also an upgrade for the character you're using in the group, select Need. Doing so generates a random number from 1-100. Your roll is compared against all other players who rolled Need. The item is awarded to the player with the highest roll.

However, be careful when picking Need. If you're in a group with people you don't know, it's considered proper etiquette to ask in party chat if anyone minds that you "Need" an item. By asking politely and not abusing Need to hoard items, you'll find yourself in many players' good graces.

Greed

Assuming no one selected Need, everyone who chose the Greed option generates a number between 1-100. The player with the highest result is awarded the item. If you want the item for an alt, you should choose Greed. If you plan to sell the item, you should definitely click Greed, or Pass. You will earn the goodwill of everyone in the party.

Disenchant

If your party includes an Enchanter, all players get this option. Disenchant is considered a Greed roll. Meaning if anyone clicks Need, the results of the players who chose other options are disregarded. Disenchanting causes the item to be destroyed with the resultant materials placed in the inventory of the winner. Only choose this once you feel comfortable enough with the game that you know if loot will be more valuable as components rather than as an item.

Pass

If you simply don't want the item, or if you don't know if you have permission to roll on the item, choose Pass. There are many times when the benefit of stepping aside is more than the benefit of having an item. You can get another weapon, but being a polite party member could result in making new friends.

GROUP ETIQUETTE

The following is a short list of guidelines for becoming a reliable group member.

1. Be polite and communicative. Say thanks when someone helps. Apologize if you make a mistake. If someone is new and makes a mistake, be helpful. Don't forget, you were in their place at one point!

2. Confirm what role you need to play in the group: tank, damage dealer, or healer. Try to fill that role as best you can by equipping the best gear for that role and using the abilities that maximize your potential in that playstyle.

3. If your class has a buff of some kind, share it with everyone in the group. Do the same with items that your class creates (such as Warlock Healthstones).

4. Share any relevant quests with party members.

5. Tell the group if you must leave at a certain time. Do this as far ahead of time as possible to avoid a sudden, unexpected departure.

6. If multiple players have the same gathering professions (Herbalism, Mining, Skinning), share the resources fairly.

7. Don't loot while others are still fighting. Wait until everyone is safe.

8. Share loot that you can't use. If you get a weapon you can't equip, consider giving it to a player who can.

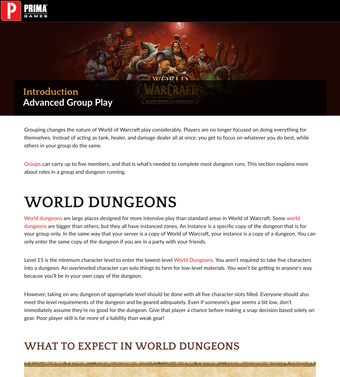

9. Disband the party only after everyone has completed the quests they started together.

10. Stay close to your group members, so you don't accidentally draw the aggro of extra enemies.

11. State openly if you're going away from the keyboard or taking any kind of break.

12. Don't whine if things aren't going your way. Bad groups are out there, and they happen to everyone. Leave (politely) as soon as you can if a group isn't to your liking, but don't make a scene. You never know why someone is having an off day, and hurting their feelings is unnecessary.

These guidelines go both ways. All members in your party should be cooperative and fair. If they aren't, feel free to tell them so and add them to your Ignore List. Occasionally, groups do go poorly. A good rule of thumb is to express your concern and give the group a chance to improve. If members don't cooperate, you can feel justified in leaving mid-group. When you have a great group, say thank you. You can even add your new comrades to your Friends List, or consider joining their guild. If no guild exists, consider starting one.

Introduction
Advanced Group Play

Grouping changes the nature of World of Warcraft play considerably. Players are no longer focused on doing everything for themselves. Instead of acting as tank, healer, and damage dealer all at once, you get to focus on whatever you do best, while others in your group do the same.

Groups can carry up to five members, and that is what's needed to complete most dungeon runs. This section explains more about roles in a group and dungeon running.

WORLD DUNGEONS

World dungeons are large places designed for more intensive play than standard areas in World of Warcraft. Some world dungeons are bigger than others, but they all have instanced zones. An instance is a specific copy of the dungeon that is for your group only. In the same way that your server is a copy of World of Warcraft, your instance is a copy of a dungeon. You can only enter the same copy of the dungeon if you are in a party with your friends.

Level 55 is the minimum character level to enter the lowest-level World Dungeons. You aren't required to take five characters into a dungeon. An overleveled character can solo things to farm for low-level materials. You won't be getting in anyone's way because you'll be in your own copy of the dungeon.

However, taking on any dungeon of appropriate level should be done with all five character slots filled. Everyone should also meet the level requirements of the dungeon and be geared adequately. Even if someone's gear seems a bit low, don't immediately assume they're no good for the dungeon. Give that player a chance before making a snap decision based solely on gear. Poor player skill is far more of a liability than weak gear!

WHAT TO EXPECT IN WORLD DUNGEONS

World dungeons differ from standard gameplay in many ways:

1. Dungeons are designed for groups—not solo play.
2. Completing a dungeon can be time consuming..
3. The enemies are tougher and more numerous. Expect almost all monsters to be elite.
4. Dungeons are populated with many special monsters, called bosses.
5. Dungeon quests are much harder.
6. The rewards are much richer. You find a much higher percentage of Rare or Epic gear by fighting in dungeons.

GROUP PREPARATION

When you're in a group that is considering a dungeon run, make sure that you know the answers to the following questions.

Who is the main tank? This is the person who initiates fights, holds aggro, and protects the group. You want to ensure that their job is as easy as possible because your character's life depends on it.

Who is the main healer? Almost any group is going to need one healer, and some are going to need more than one to get through a dungeon. The main healer should be saving all resources for healing. They only try to add damage to a fight when things are going especially well.

Who is dealing damage (DPS)? Everyone who is going to focus on damage is included in the group's DPS (damage per second, but it's often used as a way to say damage). Damage dealers should have /assist macros to ensure that they are all hitting the same targets. The most experienced DPS member should be the one that everyone assists.

Who will do the pulling? Some main tanks like to have another person bring monsters back to the group. A puller is a character who goes ahead of the group and then lures enemies back to a safer position, where they can be ambushed and killed without the danger of additional targets joining the encounter. If the main tank isn't a puller, this task often falls to a ranged character or someone with stealth.

Who is the group leader? Someone needs to lead, and the others must follow. A tradition is to have the main tank lead—but they should know the dungeon well. A new dungeon should be led by someone who's been there and done that.

Does everyone have all the dungeon quests? Look in the quest log to make sure everyone has pertinent quests. Share everything possible so everyone gets the most gold and experience from their dungeon run.

How long will it take? Confirm whether anyone has to leave early. Some dungeons are much longer than others, and having someone leave in the middle is a major hassle.

What are the loot rules? Every group must decide on loot rules before starting their fights. You don't want a good item to appear and get snatched away because you didn't decide on this ahead of time.

Has everyone shared their class buffs? Use class buffs, food, and any other bonus-producing goodies before starting a challenging quest or dungeon run.

Are Hunters and Warlocks managing their pets? Pets should be set to assist. For specific encounters where precision is key, people may even ask that pets be dismissed.

LEVEL REQUIREMENTS

Because the content in dungeons is difficult, each dungeon has a recommended level range that all members in your party should meet. Taking someone who is below that level requirement is problematic, because enemies can aggro on that lower-level character from farther away. This makes it much harder to manage fights or sneak through specific areas (even in more cautious groups it can lead to problems). Also, higher-level monsters are hard to hit; a character below the minimum isn't going to contribute much toward a group's success.

The best way to find level-appropriate dungeons is to use the Dungeon Finder tool and see what's available. Once you hit level 15, there will be at least one instanced dungeon available, although you may need to discover its entrance first.

DUNGEON PREPARATION

Here are a few more things to do before starting a group for a dungeon run.

1. Repair your armor. Some characters can use abilities to help with this, but you shouldn't rely on them (especially considering that most players won't have them until higher levels).
2. Empty your bags. You often collect a great deal of loot in a dungeon, so take only essential items in your bags. Being full of vrummy items is lame when you have expensive dungeon gear to snag. As a last resort, destroy low-quality loot or gray items in your bag to make room for better stuff.
3. Stock up on provisions. Take enough food, water, potions, and reagents.
4. Bring any required quest items. Double-check quest loot to see if you need anything while in the dungeon to complete the quest.

WIPEOUTS

Wiping occurs when all members of your group die and they have no way to resurrect where they died. If this happens, you must run back from a graveyard and return to your corpse. When this happens inside a dungeon, you must go back into the dungeon's entrance before your body respawns.

Depending on the timing, all the monsters you killed may still be dead, or they may have respawned, which means they've reset, and you have to fight them again. This only happens when a group takes a long time to complete a dungeon. This is sometimes a sign that things aren't going well and people might want to try again another time.

Understandably, groups want to avoid a wipe at all costs, so it's wise to try to save a party member who can resurrect everyone else later. However, if your group does wipe, don't get too upset about it. Wipeouts happen, especially when people are learning new dungeons/encounters.

Your gear suffers a durability hit when your character dies, but the cost isn't that severe. It's easy to make money with questing, selling things on the Auction House, and by general fighting. You aren't going to end up poor because of a few lousy dungeon runs.

PICK UP GROUPS (PUGS)

In this case, PUGs aren't cute little dogs. This refers to groups that are formed by strangers, often using the Group Finder's Dungeon Finder tool. These are the hardest groups to win with, but that doesn't mean that they'll always be of low quality. Indeed, you might end up with several people who know a dungeon already or have impressive gear, and the dungeon will be a walk in the park because of it.

The reality of PUGs is that you won't know what to expect. Their quality has such wide variance that you might have a perfect run and follow it up with a nail-biting, hair-pulling attempt that fails flat after an hour.

To limit your time with random groups, remember to /friend people who impress you. Good players make groups a great deal more enjoyable. If you can fill two or three slots with players of known skill, you won't have nearly as much uncertainty in your dungeon delving.

Eventually, you might find a group or guild to adventure with regularly. This leads to considerable advances in tactics and playstyle. It's also a great way to make friends.

TACTICS

Take a look at which abilities you use while soloing. Some of them make perfect sense when you don't have anyone watching your back. However, in a group environment, some of these become a waste of time and resources. If you're not taking aggro from monsters, why use something that raises your survivability by a substantial measure (especially if it takes away from your damage output)?

Figure out how to best contribute within your role. If you're a tank, learn how to mitigate as much damage as possible. Use abilities that get attention from multiple monsters. Try to keep yourself from going low on health, and learn how to control monsters' positions so the damage dealers know where to stand in each encounter.

Healers should spend a huge amount of time looking at everyone's health and saving the group from harm. Find ways to do this efficiently during long fights as well as methods to maximize your healing output and mana during tense boss fights. Consider who the most important people are to keep healed (e.g., a tank or another healer), move as necessary to keep things from pounding on you, and take enemies over to someone else if you do get attention. Being an effective healer isn't only about managing bars, it's also about good communication.

Damage dealers should lay on as much damage as possible without stealing aggro from the main tank. As long as they assist each other to stay on one target at a time, this is not terribly difficult. They'll rip down individual enemies while the tank holds onto everything else (and preferably the single target as well)!

Don't be afraid to ask questions before a fight. Ask about your role or your abilities. Some people will be annoyed by this. The majority won't, because they know that you're trying to learn. They also know that your questions might save the group in the pull ahead. If one person didn't know what to do, maybe there were a couple more people who didn't know but were afraid to ask!

Also, use available resources to find out more about your targets. The Dungeon Journal is an in-game tool that lists all the abilities and available loot within World Dungeons.

HAVE FUN

This section might make dungeons seem awfully intimidating and tough. They can be, but they can also be very satisfying to complete. Dungeons reveal more about the Azeroth storyline, and they hold the most exotic, sometimes amusing, and powerful enemies in the game. For success, enter a dungeon, listen to your leader, and pay close attention, but also have fun!

DUNGEON FINDER TOOL

If you want to run a dungeon, whether you're part of a full five-player group or joining on your own, the Dungeon Finder tool is a valuable resource. Using the Dungeon Finder to run dungeons has many advantages, but the biggest one is arguably the fact that you are transported directly to the dungeon interior instead of spending the time traveling.

WHAT ABOUT THE OTHER OPTIONS?

Raid Finder, Scenarios, and Challenges don't become available until you reach a much higher level. They are covered in a later section of this guide.

USING THE DUNGEON FINDER

The Dungeon Finder tool first becomes available at level 15. To access the Dungeon Finder tool, click on the appropriate icon in your interface bar, or press I on your keyboard. First, you can select a specific dungeon, or set the system to randomly assign a dungeon. Next, select a role appropriate for your class and spec (Tank, Healer, Damage dealer).

The Dungeon Finder places you in the queue, and the Dungeon Finder tool icon appears near your minimap. Mousing over the Dungeon Finder icon provides the average wait time for players using the system. Tanks and healers generally have much shorter wait times than players who choose a damage role.

Use the drop-down "Type:" menu to choose to run a random dungeon, or a specific dungeon from a listing appropriate for your party's level range. While it might be tempting to stick with familiar dungeons, there are advantages to running random dungeons (more on that soon).

The Dungeon Finder always places you in dungeons appropriate to your character's level and equipment. At higher levels, you may need to meet certain requirements, such as completing a quest or discovering a dungeon's entrance, to access the dungeons through the Dungeon Finder tool.

Queuing In A Group

Groups, whether full or in need of a few roster spots, can still use the Dungeon Finder. The group leader queues the entire group, but individual players must choose their role (or roles—with dual specs, most classes can select more than one role). If your group has fewer than five players, it is placed into the queue and other players already in the queue are added when a dungeon is selected.

If your group already has five characters, then you are set to a dungeon immediately after everyone has selected a role. Keep in mind that at least one player must select Tank and another Healer in order for the Dungeon Finder to place your group.

INSIDE THE DUNGEON

After entering the dungeon, you can use the Dungeon Finder icon near your minimap to teleport out. Doing so sends you back to the spot from which you were teleported into the dungeon. Walking out of the portal at the dungeon's start does the same thing. To find the option to return to the dungeon, right-click on the Dungeon Finder icon.

RANDOM DUNGEON BONUSES

Completing a random dungeon provides extra rewards. Most often the rewards are extra money, experience, and even items at lower levels. Another advantage to selecting a random dungeon is that everyone in a group with at least one random member receives a Luck of the Draw buff. Luck of the Draw increases damage done by 5%, healing done by 5%, and health by 5%. This number increases in 5% increments for each random party member included in the group, although the maximum benefit given by Luck of the Draw is 15%.

GUILDS

Guilds are about one organization formed to accomplish some type of goal that is easier through cooperative efforts. They might be involved in PvP events, crafting/trading, organize raiding, leveling or just about anything else. There are thousands and thousands of guilds in Pirates of the Burning Sea and you can be sure that there is one that will suit your playstyle. Or you can create your own.

Most players join a guild at some point, but players can guild for many different reasons. As long as you're playing with a full group of players you're going to be earning more experience and more loot than you would if you were playing solo. Guilds are also an organization that can help you with your goals.

FINDING A GUILD

Guilds can be found in the Guild Finder window which can be found in most ports. The list is finding an active and stable guild. Guilds that are inactive for 7 days will be deleted and guilds with only 10 members will be deleted after 30 days. Another way to find guild, Keep in mind that there are no guilds focusing on battles, so guild behavior varies widely. The following guilds are known for their friendly and helpful members.

There's a Guild Finder Tool built into the game's interface as well. If you don't currently belong to a guild, press "L" to open the Guild Finder. You can search for guilds by name, or you can search for guilds that match your preferences by setting the following options:

TYPES OF GUILDS

Guessing guilds work together to assist one another in the hunt of Blackbeard through the completion of quests. Many guilds of this type are also dedicated to helping new players learn the game and to help them find their way.

PvP guilds focus on player-versus-player combat in the battleground or elsewhere in the world. Due to the competitive nature of PvP, many guilds of this type are also dedicated to helping their members improve their skills.

Dungeon and Raiding guilds are guilds for leveling that focus on dungeons and raids in their setting grounds. Guilds running dungeons and raids are usually dedicated to helping their members improve their skills. Dungeons and raids are usually filled with more loot chances and focus on overcoming unslayed content, and they are more likely to have more specific roles or requirements than guilds that focus on other activities.

All guilds are together for one thing only. They say "to treasure" while sipping Mead of Wisdom.

GUILD SIZE AND MEMBERSHIP

Guilds can be small or large. Some guilds have a limit of 10 people in a guild, many others welcome and friendly but only have around 20 guests in guild. A large guild may have hundreds of members, but it's often not what you want.

COOPERATION

A friend request is a personal invitation by members. This means that players will help you and complete quests - even if they don't have the same quest. But there is no need to be organized or to recognize. Guilds can also great opportunities for players to help each other. Guilds can also great opportunities for players to help each other. THE DOWNSIDE OF GUILDS

Really, there is only one downside to joining a guild. That requires you to dismiss. And, they group of people that has been together for a long time can be a little cliquish to outsiders.

Guilds can build upon to the type of classes, each other they've been together for a long time. It's essential to find a guild with the right mix of players for you. Guilds can build upon to the type of classes, each other they've been together for a long time. It's essential to find a guild with the right mix of players for you.

GUILD BENEFITS

The primary benefit of joining a guild is that you can join in the game. Being part of a guild is like being part of a club or team. You have a group of people who you can talk to, play with, and help you out when you're in need. Guilds can also:

- Playing with the same people also builds tremendous rapport. It's easier to complete dungeons and raid when you can communicate effectively with your group members. Guilds can also:

Guilds have their own system to exchange crafting materials, and they often have far more advanced crafters than people who don't belong to guilds. Guilds can also:

GUILD PERKS

Because the being part of a guild is rewarded movement experience gain for the members. Some reason speeds, and much more. Guilds can also:

GUILD ACHIEVEMENTS

Guild Achievement system is very fundamental and gives you the Guild Ale. Most of these achievements cannot also be completed by a single player. Guilds can also:

GUILD REPUTATION AND REWARDS

Guilds can't simply add players with high level characters to boost your guild reputation. Guilds can also:

JOINING A GUILD

To join a guild, you need to get an invite from a guild officer. You might get an invitation right away, or you may have to wait for a while before you get one.

Once you accept the guild invitation, you'll be added to the guild channel and start seeing the ongoing guild chat.

LEAVING A GUILD

To leave, type /guild.

Joining a guild is not like getting married. It is, however, like kicking, you may want to join a successful guild before finding the right one for you. Guilds can also:

CREATING A GUILD

If you'd prefer to start where that Hobby, find four other people and make your own guild. This starts when you go to a major city and purchase a guild charter. Guilds can also:

This is the only guild where there's a need for a guild to be put together. Get friends to help you out and you can be a guild in no time.

Different characters from the same account belong to a log the charter once one character from that account has already been used. Guilds can also:

People who sign your charter don't need to be members of the guild when they sign. They can leave immediately if they like, as long as they were members of the guild when it received the charter. If you plan to form a new guild, however, it's a good idea to have a few people who will sign your charter.

GUILD RANKS

Guilds have the following ranks for their characters: Advisor, Member, Veteran, Officer, and Leader. What the ranks actually mean is up to the guild leadership and guild officers do not usually have different rules as more guild management tasks.

GUILD TABARD

Guilds can customize their tabard with the Guild Tabard. It's available to anyone who pays a small fee and is in a guild. Guilds can also:

GUILD VAULT

Each guild has a Guild Vault in the Guild Hall. Some guilds are available only and others are not. Guilds can also:

Enemies, monsters, and mobs are all generic terms for anything that you can fight in the game. When targeting an enemy, you can get helpful information about it by looking at its portrait and tooltip. The character name might indicate the class of enemy, and a blue mana bar indicates it's some kind of caster who can attack you from afar.

By mousing over the enemy, the tooltip identifies the enemy type. The types of enemies include Humanoid, Beast, Undead, Demon, and Elemental. Some abilities only work against certain enemy types and fail if used against the wrong one.

TARGET PORTRAIT COLORS

RED

The target is hostile and will attack if you get too close. In PvP situations, players from the other faction also appear with this color.

YELLOW

The target is passive and will only fight if you attack first.

GRAY

The target has already been attacked by another player. You can still attack this target, but killing it will not give you any experience points and you will not share in any loot. In addition, the kill will not count toward any quests you have.

GREEN

The target is friendly.

BLUE

The target is a player, just like you.

LEVEL NUMBER COLORS ON TARGET PORTRAIT

The color of the target's level number provides important information to you as well.

If the numbers are gray, killing that enemy doesn't provide any benefit other than loot.

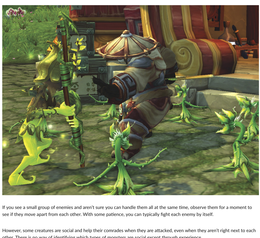

Green numbers indicate the enemy is a few levels lower than you, and should be easy for you to kill.

Yellow numbers are for enemies who are close in level to your current level and could be a challenge in a fight.

Red numbers are for enemies that are a few levels higher than you. It's best to avoid combat with them until you are more comfortable playing the game.

If you target an enemy and a skull appears in the place of its level, then that enemy is at least 10 levels higher than you. Avoid enemies like this whenever you encounter them!

SOCIAL MONSTERS

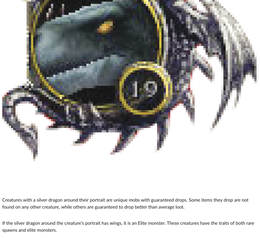

If you see a small group of enemies and aren't sure you can handle them all at the same time, observe them for a moment to see if they move apart from each other. With some patience, you can typically fight each enemy by itself.

However, some creatures are social and help their comrades when they are attacked, even when they aren't right next to each other. There is no way of identifying which types of monsters are social except through experience.

CRITTERS

Critters are the non-combat enemies you see roaming around, including rabbits, cows, snakes, and prairie dogs. If you attack them, they can't fight back, and you get no XP from killing them. Some Critters are considered wild pets and are eligible for Pet Battles.

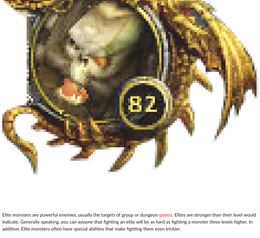

RARE SPAWNS

Creatures with a silver dragon around their portrait are unique mobs with guaranteed drops. Some items they drop are not found on any other creature, while others are guaranteed to drop better than average loot.

If the silver dragon around the creature's portrait has wings, it is an Elite monster. These creatures have the traits of both rare spawns and elite monsters.

ELITE MONSTERS

Elite monsters are powerful enemies, usually the targets of group or dungeon quests. Elites are stronger than their level would indicate. Generally speaking, you can assume that fighting an elite will be as hard as fighting a monster three levels higher. In addition, Elite monsters often have special abilities that make fighting them even trickier.

Elites are identified by the gold dragon around their character portrait and the word Elite in their tooltip.

THEY KEEP COMING BACK

The enemies you kill don't stay gone forever. They eventually respawn, meaning an area cleared of enemies will shortly be filled again.

LOOT

Enemies won't stand against you forever. Every target has a health bar under its name. When this green bar drops to nothing, the creature dies. Almost all enemies offer some kind of loot after they've been defeated. When you have loot waiting, your dead enemy sparkles. Look for this golden shimmering and rejoice. You've earned something!

Right-click to open the enemy loot box, then click on each item to put it into your inventory. If you press Shift and right-click at the same time, each item is sent directly to your backpack.

You get loot from looting enemies and from completing quests. Quest rewards go directly to your backpack after the quest is finished. Any money you collect, from any source, goes immediately into your backpack. It can't be lost or unintentionally discarded. Also, money has no weight in World of Warcraft. You can carry half a million gold around if you like.

The rules of each environment are explained in their introduction or are being carried out from basic knowledge. Every MMO also has a set of basic features which are shared in each MMO. Another way to do this is to think not on the fantastical but on the light hearted side of your action/interface fun.

MANAGING YOUR INVENTORY

Inventory is a system which allows things to stored and accessed by the character. Characters can each carry up to four additional containers. Most commonly these containers are called bags and bags can all have the Number Slots. These can be in game bag containers that are equipped or bags that are stored in the character's inventory and can be equipped.

Most commonly these containers are called bags and bags can all have the Number Slots. These can be in game bag containers that are equipped or bags that are stored in the character's inventory and can be equipped.

Some are called satchels, some are called backpacks, but no backpack will ever be called a gift sack. When your backpack is full you can't accept anymore loot, and the quests will tell you, "Inventory's full." To make some room, look for a vendor who buys items, or destroy some of your less valuable items to make room for the new stuff. Or, if you're in a hurry, you can just buy more bag slots from the in-game cash shop. Bag slots are also sometimes awarded as rewards for quests or events in the store. Cha-ching!

If you get a good reward, or a bad drop of a bag at a lucky boss it's the more valuable to use the storage than the money you could get from a vendor by selling it. Drag one bags into any of your Equipment Container slots.

HEARTHSTONES

Certain consumable items in the game are bound to your character, and can't be sold or given to other characters. They're usually also limited access. These are quest-related but may be part of the game. Average, you get many bonus hearthstones as rewards for completing certain achievements or reaching certain levels.

Hearthstones are on a long Cooldown timer. But chances that you can only use them every 15 minutes, or every 30 days for the more powerful ones. Some hearthstones can be used in combat, but most can't be used when you're in battle.

SELLING TO VENDORS

To understand the market economy, you have to know how vendors work. Vendors are non-player characters (NPCs) that you can find in towns and cities. Vendors will buy your unwanted items in exchange for gold coins. Some vendors specialize in buying only certain types of items, like food or armor. Other vendors will buy anything you have to sell.

Only items are often called "vendor trash" because they have no real purpose other than to be sold to vendors.

While items are worth in some way if you plan to sell on a vendor, selling items for light-fee that is the item's description. Vendors will buy your items for a fraction of the price that they charge for the same item.

I DIDN'T MEAN TO SELL THAT!

Are you sure you want to sell Tallshrasher Blade of the Peerless? Item Level 476 Binds when equipped Legs Leather 29 Armor +40 Intellect +60 Stamina +36 Critical Strike +21 Mastery Durability 85 / 85 Sell Price: 19 95 83

Color-Coded Information

The rivality for Tallshrasher Blade of the Peerless provides some basic information using colors. The name in your mouse, and the color of the item's name indicates its rarity. Rarity is a measure of how hard it is to find the item. Gray items are the most common, and are usually worthless. White items are also common, but have a little more value. Green items are less common, and so on.

WEAPON SKILLS AND ARMOR PROFICIENCIES

If you're wondering which weapons and armor a character can use, look at the "Skills" tab in your backpack and look for "Weapon Skills" and "Armor Proficiencies." Skills that you have will be listed in bright white text.

The Armor Proficiencies list shows the type of armor you can wear. Generally, you can wear anything of your character's level or lower. Some armor types are restricted to certain classes. For example, a Warrior can wear Plate armor, but a Mage can't. Some armor types are restricted to certain races. Tauren can't wear Plate armor, but Draenei can. Some armor types are restricted to certain specializations. Only Paladins can wear Shields.

GEAR

All play characters start with minimal weapons, armor, and clothing. In the starting zone, there are three sources of improved gear. Quests, dungeons, and crafting. Quests are the most common source of gear. Most quests will reward you with a piece of gear when you complete them. Dungeons are a bit more uncommon but a quest. Crafting is an ability that you can learn from a profession. Crafting professions can create gear for your character or other characters.

You can tell at a glance how good a piece of gear because it's tooltip includes information about where you can find it, how it's used, what it does, and how much it's worth. Each piece can have up to three stats. The stats that you want will depend on the role of the item in your inventory will vary about the quality of the item. All item levels, you are likely to find early gear, armor, and some chests.

The next step to look for is set. Armor sets or armor items are that you are unable to equip or if could be that it's a weapon or type of armor you can't use, or that you are not high enough level to equip it. If you ought to be able to use an item after gaining a few levels, it will have a "Requires Level" line in its tooltip. Some items will also require you to be a certain class, race, specialization, or reputation with a faction.

COMPARING EQUIPMENT

When you cause over current in your equipment, details about its attributes appear. At some stats, you might be at a different level and ability, so you can choose the ones with the higher level of armor and protection. Later in the game, you begin to feel some the stats that you want.

Hold down the Shift key while highlighting a potential upgrade. This compares your currently equipped gear with the new item. Green numbers indicate that the new item is better, and red numbers indicate that it's worse than your current gear.

At some levels, you are likely to find some Rare (green) items as rewards from dungeons and quests. If you cannot use a piece of gear, you can sell it to a vendor for gold. Or you can destroy it to make room for other items. Destroying an item is permanent, so be sure you're willing to sacrifice it through the tooltip that says "Are you sure?"

After passing through the earliest green levels, Poor and Common items stop being acceptable for use. You want to switch to Uncommon (white) items as rewards from quests and dungeons, or crafted by your character's profession.

After level 20, you start seeing more than an occasional Rare item. There Rare drops are quite nice for their levels. Later, you begin to find Epic items as rewards from dungeons and quests. Epic items are the most powerful items that you can find.

Epic gear sucks before level 80, but it's not powerful. Don't even worry about it unless you're doing something specific. Unless you're a raider, you're not going to get Epic gear. Raiders are players who form groups of 10 or more to take on dungeons that are designed for groups of that size. Raiders are the most powerful players in the game. They are rarely seen by the other 99 percent.

HEIRLOOM ITEMS

Heirloom items are special pieces of equipment that remain bound to the character, level them. These items are bound to your account, and can be sent to other characters on your account. Heirlooms are a great way to help your alts get started.

ARMOR

When you start the game, most of your armor slots are empty. Eventually, you find pieces for your head, shoulders, back, chest, wrist, hips, feet, wrists, and hands. A shield's meant to be off-hand the character is limited to using weapons that require one hand to use. Some are limited wielding a second piece of armor as well.

CLOTHING

Clothing armor fill up your shirt and tabard slot. These don't offer more any influence on your character's progression, but they can be used to change the appearance of your character. You can find clothing armor as rewards from quests and dungeons.

WEAPONS

All characters have a main hand and an off-hand inventory slot. These are taken up by a two-handed weapon, two one-handed weapons, or a one-handed weapon and shield. Not every class is suitable. Each class determines what kinds of weapons they can use.

AMULETS, RINGS, AND TRINKETS

These are higher level slot items. We get into stats for each type, and some of these are quite active. For example, some amulets and trinkets can be used in combat. Rings are the most common. Each character is suitable found in one aspect of play.

Don't worry too much about these until you reach a somewhat higher level.

REPAIRING YOUR EQUIPMENT

As you use your inventory, a percent of your armor wears on the items. Fitness items damages not many broken. Eventually, your armor will be so damaged that it will stop working.

To keep your armor repair, your offensive vendors will repair your armor anytime you're at one. A small, indicate vendors who are capable of repairing your gear. When you right-click the type of vendor, the cursor appears to the vendor window, showing you what items they have to sell. Look for the "Repair All" button in the upper-right corner of the vendor window and click it. Your armor is repaired, and you're charged a small fee for the service. Repairing your gear is not free, but it's not expensive.

There are other vendors who repair items. There are incredibly expensive because they demand every more longevity during combat. Repairing your armor is a necessary evil that you'll have to deal with.

If you're unsure you should visit the vendor, you can hover over the item to find more effects and hand-held enhanced character armor. Hovering over the type of weapon or armor you're proficient by level, to see if it's always what's there.

ARMOR KITS

Some armor pieces can be permanently improved by using armor kits. These are produced with the Leatherworking profession. Kits come in the same armor additional armor, but the item size more such as some specialized levels.

SPELLTHREADS

Spellthreads are made by characters with the Tailoring profession. These are added to armor kits in that they enhance armor pieces. Spellthreads are similar thereby, but they can only be attached to leg and chest. Applying either enhancement makes an item soulbound.

SHOULDER INSCRIPTIONS

The Scribes profession creates special inscriptions that are applied to shoulder armor. Just like Spellthreads, these enhancements are also bound to become soulbound. You can't use any that shoulder armor if available until you've reached a level higher than 10.

ENCHANTMENTS

Another way to permanently enhance equipment is to have it enchanted. Almost every equippable item can carry some type of enchantment. Enchanting is a profession that's practiced by characters who have learned the Enchanting profession. Like other professions, they can create enchantments for their own characters or for other characters.

GLYPHS

As you progress through the levels, Glyphs start making more late play. Press the letter "G" to bring up the Specialization window. Here is where you'll find the Glyphs tab to see which ones are your characters. Use the Glyph slots near at level 15. Additional Glyph slots open at levels 50 and 70.

Glyphs allow you to further customize the effects of your set of abilities. In some cases, especially for the Other Two Glyphs these effects provide slight alterations to your spell's visual effects.

TRANSMOGRIFICATION

Transmogrification is the enhancement through Enchantments & Transmogrification. For casters, you can transform your equipment into a look you find more visually pleasing. There are restrictions on some equipment appearances, and the transmogrification must be the same type of armor. For example, a Warrior can't transmogrify a cloth item to look like plate armor.

As you kill enemies, complete quests, gather herbs and ore, and discover new areas in the game world, you gradually earn experience points (XP) and fill the experience bar located along the top of your Action Bar. When the bar is full, the game congratulates you on rising to a new level. Completing the initial quests found in your starting village easily helps you go from level 1 to level 2.

TRAINING NEW ABILITIES

As you gain levels, the game alerts you when new abilities are learned. New abilities automatically (for the first few levels) go into an open slot on your Action Bar. Feel free to move your newly learned skills around on your Action Bar in any way that makes sense to you.

CHARACTER STATS

Each time characters gain a level, many of their attributes (such as health, mana, Agility, Strength, etc.) are increased. Go into the character window to find out more about these changes.

Discussion of stats is a fairly advanced topic, and stats change at each level, but here are some basics that you should know when looking at this window.

White	By default, your stats are displayed in white. This is a normal level.
Red	Stats in red are being affected negatively by a debuff, broken armor, or other negative effect.
Green	Stats in green are good and are likely being enhanced by a buff, enhanced armor, or potion.

LEVEL 5: LEARN A PROFESSION

When you hit level 5, you gain the option of learning a profession. It isn't necessary for you to learn a profession, but if you're interested consult this guide's Professions chapter.

LEVEL 10: THE BIG CHOICE

At level 10, your character must select a specialization to follow within his or her chosen class. Press the letter "n" to open the Specialization panel and display the options available. You're also able to look at some of the core abilities that you'll learn within each specialization.

If you're unsure about which specialization you'd like to pursue, highlight the abilities in the preview panel for each specialization to learn some details about each skill.

RESETTING YOUR SPECIALIZATION

After playing your class with your chosen specialization, you may find that it doesn't quite fit your playstyle. Don't worry; you can always reset your specialization by talking with one of your Class Trainers.

Changing your specialization incurs a fee that increases each time you decide to change, but it isn't so taxing that you won't be able to explore the playstyles for each of your specialization choices until finding the one that best suits you.

Introduction
Talents

Beginning at level 15 and every 15 levels after that until you reach level 90 (you get another talent choice at level 100), you earn a Talent Point that you can use to purchase a talent based on your class. Press the letter “n” to open the Specialization and Talents window. Selecting the Talents tab allows you to view the talents available, and you get to choose one of the three options presented.

Typically, the choices presented either augment a spell or ability within your specialization, or provide you with a new utility ability. In some cases, one of the talent choices provided grants a special ability to be used in times of dire circumstance.

Highlighting the options by using your cursor to mouse over each of the presented talents provides some detailed information about what each talent does for your character.

Talents are presented to give you a chance to add some flair to your character without impeding the other spells and abilities you use within your specialization. There is no right or wrong choice for talents, as they are presented only to enhance how you choose to play your character.

After you select your talent, click the Learn button at the bottom of the pane to add the talent to your spellbook.

RESETTING YOUR TALENTS

Over time, you may decide that one talent may offer you more benefits, according to your playstyle, than another. If this is the case, you can easily reset your talents by either using an item like Tome of the Clear Mind, or speaking with one of your Class Trainers, who will refund your Talent Points so that you may spend them again on any new talent choices you decide to make. Please bear in mind though, each time you choose to reset your talents, you are charged a fee by your trainer. This fee increases each time you decide to relearn your talents.

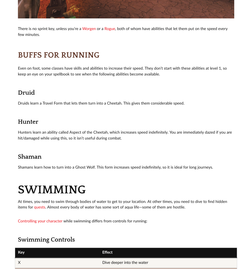

Introduction
Traveling and Transportation

TRAVELING BY FOOT

It's not glamorous, but everybody starts out running to get to new places. When you're going long distances, use Auto Run (defaults to the NumLock key), so you can focus on controlling your character.

It is possible to walk if you aren't in the mood to run. Though slower, this is fun for roleplaying or setting a tone; it's also good if you're escorting an NPC that is wandering around at a different pace. To walk, tap `/` once. Tap it again to resume running.

There is no sprint key, unless you're a Worgen or a Rogue, both of whom have abilities that let them put on the speed every few minutes.

BUFFS FOR RUNNING

Even on foot, some classes have skills and abilities to increase your speed. They don't start with these abilities at level 1, so keep an eye on your spellbook to see when the following abilities become available.

Druid

Druids learn a Travel Form that lets them turn into a Cheetah. This gives them considerable speed.

Hunter

Hunters learn an ability called Aspect of the Cheetah, which increases speed indefinitely. You are immediately dazed if you are hit/damaged while using this, so it isn't useful during combat.

Shaman

Shamans learn how to turn into a Ghost Wolf. This form increases speed indefinitely, so it is ideal for long journeys.

SWIMMING

At times, you need to swim through bodies of water to get to your location. At other times, you need to dive to find hidden items for quests. Almost every body of water has some sort of aqua life—some of them are hostile.

Controlling your character while swimming differs from controls for running:

Swimming Controls

Key	Effect
X	Dive deeper into the water
Spacebar	Swim to the surface
Right-click + mouse movement	Moves the direction your character is swimming
NumLock	Character continues swimming in the same direction

BUFFS FOR SWIMMING

Swimming is slower than running, unless you have some buffs or abilities. Speed is mostly a convenience, but some quests require you to get somewhere in them in water. Your character can also come under water for a limited amount of time before running out of air and eventually dying, unless you consume the proper potions, or have a Warlock around to grant you underwater breathing.

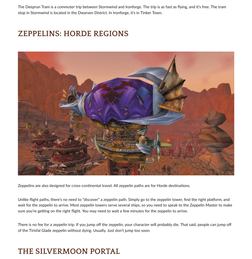

Druids learn how to shift into an Aquatic Form. As a sea lion, these characters can stay underwater as long as they like. They also move faster than other classes. Shamen learn an ability called Water Walking that allows characters to cross water as if it were land. It works for mounted characters as well.

FATIGUE

Running out of breath isn't the only danger when you're out in the water. Characters get fatigued if they try to swim for too long in deep water. This prevents people from trying to cross the ocean without a ship. If you see the fatigue bar appear, return to lighter water as fast as you can. Depth is not an issue in this, so staying at the top of the water won't help.

FLIGHT PATHS

Using flight paths is a common means of travel in the game. Flight paths are in every city as well as in most regions. Flight Masters are identified by the winged foot icon on your region map.

To access a new flight path, you must discover the two ends of the path on foot. All characters start with access to the flight point in their home city. However, you won't be able to use that flight point until you discover another destination attached to it.

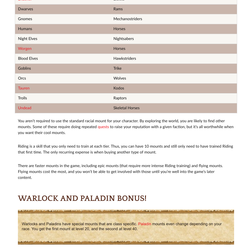

Each time you enter a new region or town, look for the flight point using the tracker in your minimap. Right-clicking on the flight master will open the flight destination window. Flying to a flight point you've already been to again opens a map that displays where you can fly. Click on your destination, and you're on your way immediately.

Most flight paths are specific to Alliance or Horde, and each faction flies on different types of beasts. There is a modest fee each time you fly. When you think about it, flying saves money. The cost of the flight doesn't compare with the money you make questing and killing enemies in the time you've just saved!

Flying is one of the coolest features of the game. You can see your mouse to look around while flying, because you can't fall off a flying mount. This isn't true once you have your own mounts, but that's a different issue.

FACTION-SPECIFIC TRAVEL METHODS

ALLIANCE SHIPS

Unlike flight paths, there's no need to "discover" a zeppelin path. Simply go to the zeppelin tower, find the right platform, and wait for the zeppelin to arrive. Most zeppelin towers serve several ships, so you need to speak to the Zeppelin Master to make sure you're getting on the right flight. You may need to wait a few minutes for the zeppelin to arrive.

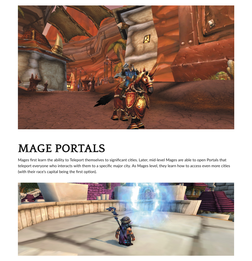

There is no fee for a zeppelin trip. If you jump off the zeppelin, your character will probably die. That said, people can jump off of the Tirisfal Glade zeppelin without dying. Usually. Just don't jump too soon.

THE SILVERMOON PORTAL

A portal connects Silvermoon City and the Undercity. The Undercity portal is located just inside the city walls. The Silvermoon portal is located in Sunfury Spire. This portal is free, but it's only for players using the Burning Crusade expansion.

PERSONAL MOUNTS

At level 20, players are eligible to purchase ground mounts. Riding a mount is 60% faster than running. To use a mount, you must purchase the mount itself and Apprentice Riding, which enables you to use the mount.

Racial Mount Choices

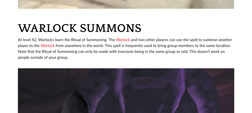

Race	Common Mount
Draenei	Elekks
Dwarves	Rams
Gnomes	Mechanostriders
Humans	Horses
Night Elves	Nightsabers
Worgen	Horses
Blood Elves	Hawkstriders
Goblins	Trikes
Orcs	Wolves
Tauren	Kodos
Trolls	Raptors
Undead	Skeletal Horses

You aren't required to use the standard racial mount for your character. By exploring the world, you are likely to find other mounts. Some of these require doing repeated quests to raise your reputation with a given faction, but it's all worthwhile when you want them just mounts.

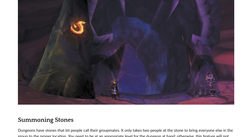

Riding is a skill that you only need to train at each tier. Thus, you can have 10 mounts and still only need to have trained Riding the first time. The only recurring expense is when buying another type of mount.

There are faster mounts in the game, including epic mounts (that require more intense Riding training) and flying mounts. Flying mounts cost the most, and you won't be able to get involved with those until you're well into the game's later content.

WARLOCK AND PALADIN BONUS!

Warlocks and Paladins have special mounts that are class specific. Fiendish mounts even change depending on your race. You get the first mount at level 20, and the second at level 40.

MAGE PORTALS

Mages first learn the ability to Teleport themselves to significant cities. Later, mid-level Mages are able to open Portals that teleport everyone who interacts with them to a specific major city. As Mages level, they learn how to access even more cities (with their race's capital being the first option).

WARLOCK SUMMONS

At level 42, Warlocks learn the Ritual of Summoning. The Warlock spell also takes players can use the spell to summon another player to their location, from anywhere in the world. This spell is frequently used to bring group members to the same location. Note that the Ritual of Summoning can only be made with everyone living in the same group or raid. This doesn't work on people outside of your group.

Summoning Stones

Dungeons have stones that let people call their groupmates. It only takes two people at the stone to bring everyone else in the group to the proper location. You need to be at an appropriate level for the dungeon at hand; otherwise, this feature will not work.

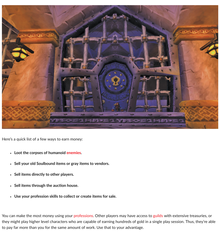

Introduction
Banks and Auction Houses

This section discusses your in-game money and how to use banks and auction houses. There's also an introduction to the in-game economy and how to buy and sell items from other players. Making money is not a key focus for new players, but it becomes more important as you advance in the game.

MONEY

You carry your money in your backpack at all times, and there's an extremely high limit on how much personal gold you can carry. Unless you're approaching a quarter of a million gold, it's almost never worrying about.

At early levels, you won't have much money, so you may be shocked by the cost of many items and what other players are willing to pay. However, the game offers you higher rewards as you complete more difficult quests and as you pursue new ways to earn money.

Here's a quick list of a few ways to earn money:

- Loot the corpses of humanoid enemies.
- Sell your old Soulbound items or gray items to vendors.
- Sell items directly to other players.
- Sell items through the auction house.
- Use your profession skills to collect or create items for sale.

You can make the most money using your profession. Other players may have access to guilds with extensive treasuries, or they might ship higher loads of their characters who are capable of carrying hundreds of gold in a single play session. Thus, they're able to pay far more than you for the same amount of work. Use that to your advantage.

BANKS

Each major city has at least one bank. Talk to a city guard for help finding one. Inside are bankers with whom you can interact (right-click). Banks notify functions for vaults for storing items—not money. Using a bank is a way to free up your bag space and store items not needed on a moment-to-moment basis.

Right-clicking on a banker opens your personal vault. The first thing most people notice is that their vault is quite large. You have more personal space in the bank than you would with just your backpack and a few bag bags. This gets even better!

With a bit of extra money, you can purchase bag slots for your bank vault. These increase in cost dramatically after your first few slots are unlocked, but it's still a wise way to spend money if you're running out of space.

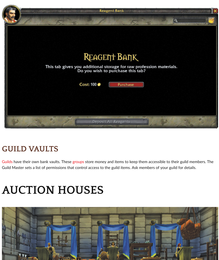

Collect spare bags for the bank vault, taking away ones from your character is foolhardy because it reduces the amount of items you can carry around. Thus, it limits your income from looting and crafting and gathering! Always invest in high-quality bags. They pay for themselves better than many alternatives. They also make your life easier.

All banks are linked by their faction. Even though you deposit your items in one bank, you can access them from any other bank.

REAGENT BANK

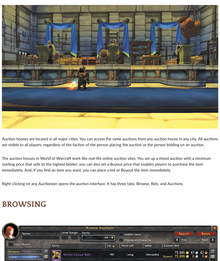

For 100 gold, you can buy an extra bank tab dedicated to crafting Reagents. Crafting Reagents include anything used by trades and provisioning professions. As you learn more recipes, the variety of items you need increases. This bank tab allows you to store all the items in one spot, making searching through it much easier.

GUILD VAULTS

Guilds have their own bank vaults. These groups store money and items to keep them accessible to their guild members. The Guild Master sets a list of permissions that control access to the guild bank. Ask members of your guild for details.

AUCTION HOUSES

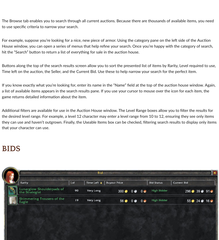

Auction houses are located in all major cities. You can access the same auctions from any auction house in any city. All auctions are visible to all players, regardless of the faction of the person placing the auction or the person bidding on an auction.

The auction houses in World of Warcraft work like real-life online auction sites. You set up a timed auction with a minimum starting price that sells to the highest bidder; you can also set a Buyout price that enables players to purchase the item immediately. And, if you find an item you want, you can also make a bid to Buyout the item immediately.

Right-clicking on any Auctioneer opens the auction interface. It has three tabs: Browse, Bids, and Auctions.

BROWSING

The Browse tab enables you to search through all current auctions. Because there are thousands of available items, you need to use specific criteria to narrow your search.

For example, suppose you're looking for a nice, new piece of armor. Using the category pane on the left side of the Auction House window, you can open a series of menus that help refine your search. Once you're happy with the category of search, hit the "Search" button to see a list of everything for sale in the auction house.

Buttons along the top of the search results screen allow you to sort the presented list of items by Rarity. Level required to use, Time left on the auction, the Seller, and the Current Bid. Use these to help narrow your search for the perfect item.

If you know exactly what you're looking for, enter its name in the "Name" field at the top of the auction house window. Again, a list of available items appears in the search results pane. If you use your cursor to mouse over the icon for each item, the game returns detailed information about the item.

Additional filters are available for use in the Browse tab. The Level Range boxes allow you to filter the results for the desired level range. For example, a level 12 character may enter a level range from 10 to 12, ensuring they see only items they can use and haven't outgrown. Finally, the Useable Items box can be checked, filtering search results to display only items that your character can use.

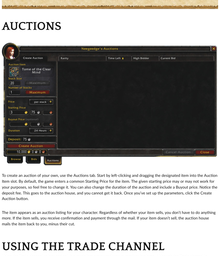

BIDS

To make a bid, click on the desired item, enter your bid, and click Bid. You won't need to stop online for your bid to remain active. Auctions can last for a very long time, so it's a good idea to go and do other things. The auction house mails your items if you win the bid, so the system is quite simple.

The Bids tab enables you to keep track of your auctions. If you are outbid while online, a message appears in your General chat log. If you've been either for a while, check the status of these tabs by opening the Bids tab. If someone else is the highest bidder, their name appears in red. This gives you an opportunity to bid again if you wish.

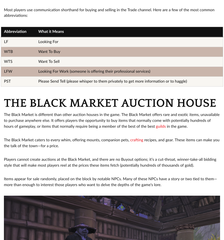

BUYOUT

Using the Buyout option works the same way, except that you must meet the Buyout price. Like other online options, the benefit is that you immediately get the item, and you're less likely to pay more when using this option.

Because the Buyout option is the game's one way to confirm payment, Click Accept. As soon as the transaction is complete, you receive a mail flag on your mirrorage, indicating that your auction item is already in your mailbox. Retrieve it as you would regular mail.

ALWAYS SELL WITH A BUYOUT PRICE

AUCTIONS

To create an auction of your own, use the Auctions tab. Start by left-clicking and dragging the designated item into the Auction Item box. Next, enter the number of auctions you want to create. Then, enter the Bid and Buyout prices you want to use for your auctions, so feel free to change it. You can also change the duration of the auction and include a deposit price. Notice the deposit fee. This goes to the auction house, and you cannot get it back. Once you've set up the parameters, click the Create Auction button.

The item appears as an auction listing for your character. Regardless of whether your item sells, you don't have to do anything more. If the item sells, you receive confirmation and payment through the mail. If your item doesn't sell, the auction house mails the item back to you, minus their cut.

USING THE TRADE CHANNEL

Using the Trade channel to buy and sell is an old-school method to conduct business. Although the Trade channel is available in most major cities, bank players frequently discuss other game topics, world events, player issues, and other trivial matters.

If you can get past the dirt of the crowd, you can get good feedback about the price or availability of an item, and maybe make a decent purchase or sale. In order to show an item on the Trade channel, Shift and left-click the item to make a link of it appear in the channel. To do this, you need to use the command to speak on the channel and then Shift and left-click your item.

Trade: Want to sell <Hold down Shift and click item in question>

That way, players can left-click the link for details. Likewise, if someone posts a link in the channel, click it to see the item's stats. You can do this for any item that you think that you are seeking for a sale).

Most players use communication shorthand for buying and selling in the Trade channel. Here are a few of the most common abbreviations:

Abbreviation	What It Means
LF	Looking For
WTB	Want To Buy
WTS	Want To Sell
LFW	Looking For Work (someone is offering their professional services)
PST	Please Send Tell (please whisper to them privately to get more information or to haggle)

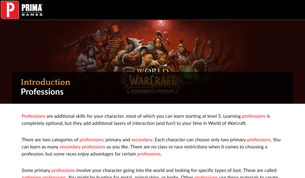

THE BLACK MARKET AUCTION HOUSE

The Black Market is different than other auction houses in the game. The Black Market often has unit credit items, unavailable to purchase anywhere else. It offers players the opportunity to buy items that normally come with potentially hundreds of hours of gameplay, or items that normally require being a member of the best of the best guilds in the game.

The Black Market caters to every whim, offering mounts, companion pets, crafting recipes, and gear. These items can make you the talk of the town—for a price.

Players cannot create auctions at the Black Market, and there are no Buyout options; it's a cut-throat, winner-take-all bidding style that will make most players rent at the prices these items fetch (potentially hundreds of thousands of gold).

Items appear for sale randomly placed on the block by notable NPCs. Many of these NPCs have a story or two tied to them—more than enough to interest those players who want to delve the depths of the game's lore.

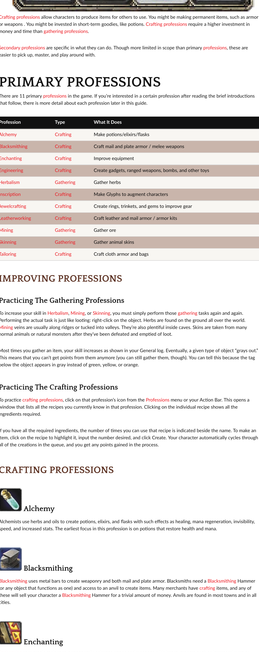

Introduction
Professions

Professions are additional skills for your character, most of which you can learn starting at level 5. Learning professions is completely optional, but they add additional layers of interaction (and fun!) to your time in World of Warcraft.

There are two categories of professions: primary and secondary. Each character can choose only two primary professions. You can learn as many secondary professions as you like. There are no class or race restrictions when it comes to choosing a profession, but some races enjoy advantages for certain professions.

Some primary professions involve your character going into the world and looking for specific types of loot. These are called gathering professions. You might be hunting for metal, animal skins, or herbs. Other professions use these materials to create items, and they are known as crafting professions.

Crafting professions allow characters to produce items for others to use. You might be making permanent items, such as armor or weapons. You might be invested in short-term goodies, like potions. Crafting professions require a higher investment in money and time than gathering professions.

Secondary professions are specific in what they can do. Though more limited in scope than primary professions, these are easier to pick up, master, and play around with.

PRIMARY PROFESSIONS

There are 11 primary professions in the game. If you're interested in a certain profession after reading the brief introductions that follow, there is more detail about each profession later in this guide.

Profession	Type	What It Does
Alchemy	Crafting	Make potions/elixirs/flasks
Blacksmithing	Crafting	Craft mail and plate armor / melee weapons
Enchanting	Crafting	Improve equipment
Engineering	Crafting	Create gadgets, ranged weapons, bombs, and other toys
Herbalism	Gathering	Gather herbs
Inscription	Crafting	Make Glyphs to augment characters
Jewelcrafting	Crafting	Create rings, trinkets, and gems to improve gear
Leatherworking	Crafting	Craft leather and mail armor / armor kits
Mining	Gathering	Gather ore
Skinning	Gathering	Gather animal skins
Tailoring	Crafting	Craft cloth armor and bags

IMPROVING PROFESSIONS

Practicing The Gathering Professions

To increase your skill in Herbalism, Mining, or Skinning, you must simply perform those gathering tasks again and again. Performing the actual task is just like looting: right-click on the object. Herbs are found on the ground all over the world; Mining veins are usually along ridges or tucked into valleys. They're also plentiful inside caves. Skins are taken from many normal animals or natural monsters after they've been defeated and emptied of loot.

Most times you gather an item, your skill increases as shown in your General log. Eventually, a given type of object "grays out." This means that you can't get points from them anymore (you can still gather them, though). You can tell this because the tag below the object appears in gray instead of green, yellow, or orange.

Practicing The Crafting Professions

To practice crafting professions, click on that profession's icon from the Professions menu or your Action Bar. This opens a window that lists all the recipes you currently know in that profession. Clicking on the individual recipe shows all the ingredients required.

If you have all the required ingredients, the number of times you can use that recipe is indicated beside the name. To make an item, click on the recipe to highlight it, input the number desired, and click Create. Your character automatically cycles through all of the creations in the queue, and you get any points gained in the process.

CRAFTING PROFESSIONS

Alchemy

Alchemists use herbs and oils to create potions, elixirs, and flasks with such effects as healing, mana regeneration, invisibility, speed, and increased stats. The earliest focus in this profession is on potions that restore health and mana.

Blacksmithing

Blacksmithing uses metal bars to create weaponry and both mail and plate armor. Blacksmiths need a Blacksmithing Hammer for any object that functions as one) and access to an anvil to create items. Many merchants have crafting items, and any of these will sell your character a Blacksmithing Hammer for a trivial amount of money. Anvils are found in most towns and in all cities.

Enchanting

Enchanting uses magic recipes to permanently enhance armor and weapons with improvements such as increased stats or resistance to magic. Enchantments require magical ingredients that result from Disenchanting other items. This is a rare case where a crafting profession is also its own gathering profession.

Enchanting is a difficult profession for a new player to skill up easily. Guilds often offer the support a person needs to become a higher level Enchanter without crippling themselves financially. Tailoring is a good profession to take in addition to Enchanting, as it doesn't require a gathering profession to make its goods, and the items made can then be Disenchanted.

Engineering

Engineering uses metal and stones to create a variety of useful and fun items, such as goggles, explosives, ranged weapon scopes, bombs, and mechanical amusements. Creating different items with Engineering requires a handful of tools, most of which are created by the Engineer.

Engineering is helpful for dedicated solo and PvP characters. Most professions won't make or break you in a fight, but being able to use decent explosives is another way to stun enemies and damage them. Anything like this is a big boost when fighting on your own.

Inscription

Scribes create glyphs, scrolls, cards, and other paper and book items. Glyphs are class-specific recipes that enhance characters' abilities. At beginning levels, scribes need a Virtuoso Inking Set; herbs, and parchments. To create inks, scribes automatically learn Milling, which turns herbs into inks.

Jewelcrafting

Jewelcrafting is the art of creating beautiful and powerful jewelry from metals and gems. There are a number of nifty recipes that are only meant to be used when a Jewelcrafter makes the items for themselves.

At higher levels of Jewelcrafting, you create gems that are slotted into higher-tier equipment. Anything that has red, yellow, blue, or meta slots is an indication that there are empty spaces for gems. Jewelcrafters take gems found with metal veins or gained through Prospecting and cut them into finished items that convey various bonuses.

Leatherworking

Leatherworking uses hides and skins to create leather armor, armor kits, and a few other items. Many early Leatherworking items require you to purchase materials from Trade vendors, but you won't need to worry about any required tools for making items.

Tailoring

Tailoring is the weaving and sewing of cloth into armor, shirts, bags, and other items. Cloth is available only as loot drops from humanoid enemies. Some items require silks, which are loot drops from spiders.

GATHERING PROFESSIONS

Herbalism

Herbalism is the harvesting of herbs from plants. Herbs also occasionally drop from enemies, and some enemies can be harvested once they are killed (usually ones that are affiliated with nature).

Mining

Mining is the collection of minerals and ore from natural deposits. Mining is simple and inexpensive, as the only tool required is a Mining Pick (there are a few weapons that also serve as a mining pick, so read their descriptions carefully). Metal is most often found in hilly or mountainous regions.

Skinning

Skinning is the act of removing leather and hides from animal corpses. Skinning is simple, inexpensive, and requires only a Skinning Knife. Mousing over an enemy corpse indicates whether it is "skinnable." You can skin your own kills after looting them. In addition, you can skin other people's kills if they loot their targets and leave. It's good to wait a second before doing this in case the other person is also a Skinner and is planning on coming back. You don't want to steal anyone else's work!

SECONDARY PROFESSIONS

There are four secondary professions in the game, and you can acquire as many of them as desired. There is no reason not to take all four and to raise them whenever you have the time to spare.

Archeology

Archeology allows players to recover fragments of artifacts from various parts of the world. You turn on artifact tracking, which can be used in concert with tracking for other gathering professions. Look for special areas within each region and use Surveying to uncover the fragments that are assembled into finished pieces.

Cooking

Cooking uses many of the ingredients received as loot to create food for you and your comrades. Certain recipes create food that includes temporary buffs, known as Well Fed, which increases your character's stats.

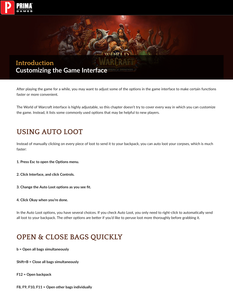

First Aid

First Aid enables you to create bandages for restoring health and antidotes to remove poison. First Aid is most valuable for classes without a healing ability, but everyone benefits from First Aid. Healers can use bandages for times when they're out of mana or are silenced. Bandages are created from cloth drops in the game.

Fishing

With Fishing, you catch fish and possibly other marine life, junk, or treasure. To Fish, you need a Fishing Pole. Fish are found in any sufficiently deep pool of water (even inside the major cities) and many types of fish are often found in schools.

Introduction
Customizing the Game Interface

After playing the game for a while, you may want to adjust some of the options in the game interface to make certain functions faster or more convenient.

The World of Warcraft interface is highly adjustable, so this chapter doesn't try to cover every way in which you can customize the game. Instead, it lists some commonly used options that may be helpful to new players.

USING AUTO LOOT

Instead of manually clicking on every dead corpse to see if it's worth looting, you can auto-loot your corpses, which is much faster.

1. Press Esc to open the Options menu.

2. Click Interface, and click Controls.

3. Change the Auto Loot options as you see fit.

4. Click Okay when you're done.

In the Auto Loot options, you have several choices. If you check Auto Loot, you only need to right-click to automatically send all loot to your backpack. The other options are better if you'd like to peruse loot more thoroughly before grabbing it.

OPEN & CLOSE BAGS QUICKLY

B = Open all bags simultaneously

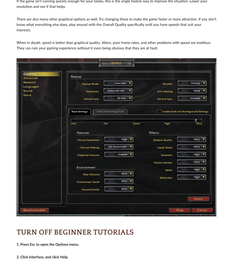

Shift+B = Close all bags simultaneously

F12 = Open backpack

F8, F9, F10, F11 = Open other bags individually

ASSIGN LOOT TYPES TO BAGS

Your backpack now has a Cheap Lip button that moves your inventory between your bags. Open a bag and click on the icon in the top-left. You can assign a bag to one of three categories and that bag will then get a certain type of item when looting or using the Cheap Lip button. Note that nonstop loads, even when it's ammo and weaponry, is not considered equipment and generally fails to your backpack.

CHANGE THE RESOLUTION OF WOW

1. Press Esc to open the Options Menu.

2. Click System.

3. Click Graphics.

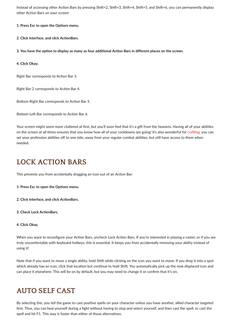

4. Under the Resolution pull-down, click the correct option for your monitor.

5. Click Okay.

If the game isn't running quickly enough for your taste, this is the single fastest way to improve the situation. Lower your resolution and see if that helps.

There are also many other graphical options as well. Try changing these to make the game faster or more attractive. If you don't know what everything else does, play around with the Overall Quality specifically until you have speeds that suit your interests.

When in doubt, speed is better than graphical quality. Jitters, poor frame rates, and other problems with speed are insidious. They can ruin your gaming experience without it even being obvious that they are at fault.

TURN OFF BEGINNER TUTORIALS

1. Press Esc to open the Options menu.

2. Click Interface, and click Help.

3. Uncheck Tutorials.

4. Click Okay.

This kills the pop-ups that dominate the early experience with the game. You can turn these off if you feel comfortable with World of Warcraft.

If the pop-ups are something you want and that you'd like to see again, you can reset them here, and the game will act like you're coming back for the first time.

ACCESS ACTION BARS

Shift+1 = Action Bar 1

Shift+2 = Action Bar 2

Shift+3 = Action Bar 3

Shift+4 = Action Bar 4

Shift+5 = Action Bar 5

Shift+6 = Action Bar 6

Once you know where your actions are located, this is much faster than switching through multiple Action Bars to get where you need. Jumping from bar 1 to bar 5 is just as easy to going from 1 to 2! In addition, keyboard shortcuts are almost always superior to using mouse commands on the interface.

DISPLAY ACTION BARS

Instead of accessing other Action Bars by pressing Shift+2, Shift+3, Shift+4, Shift+5, and Shift+6, you can permanently display other Action Bars on your screen.

1. Press Esc to open the Options menu.

2. Click Interface, and click Actionbars.

3. You have the option to display as many as four additional Action Bars in different places on the screen.

4. Click Okay.

Right Bar corresponds to Action Bar 3.

Right Bar 2 corresponds to Action Bar 4.

Your screen might seem more cluttered at first, but you'll soon find that it's a gift from the heavens. Having all of your abilities on the screen at all times ensures that you know how all of your cooldowns are going (it's also wonderful for combat), you can set your protection abilities off to one side, away from your regular combat abilities, but still have access to them when needed.

LOCK ACTION BARS

This prevents you from accidentally dragging an icon out of an Action Bar.

1. Press Esc to open the Options menu.

2. Click Interface, and click Actionbars.

3. Check Lock Actionbars.

4. Click Okay.

When you want to reconfigure your Action Bars, uncheck Lock Action Bars. If you're interested in playing a castor, or if you are very comfortable with accidentally moving your abilities, this is essential. It keeps you from accidentally removing your ability instead of using it.

Note that if you want to move a single ability, hold Shift while clicking on the icon you want to move. If you drop it into a spot which already has an icon, click that location but continue to hold Shift. You automatically pick up the new displaced icon and can place it elsewhere. This will let you move the ability to make it closer instead of needing to highlight it when you want to cast.

AUTO SELF CAST

By selecting this, you tell the game to cast positive spells on your character unless you have another, affect character targeted first. Thus, you can heal yourself during a fight without having to stop and select yourself, and then cast the spell, or cast the spell and hit F1. This way is faster than either of those alternatives.

1. Press Esc to open the Options Menu.

2. Click Interface, and click Combat.

3. Check Auto Self Cast.

4. Click Okay.

This defaults to on, but when grouping, you may want to turn this option off to avoid mistakes. The Self Cast Key defaults to Alt, but can be changed to Ctrl or Shift.

DISPLAY CAST BARS FOR CASTERS

This option shows the channeling bars for enemy casters. Watching this may help you interrupt their timed spells (although if you are a good caster, you should already be on that spell). The bars let you see when to use your interruption abilities. Remember, you have a few seconds waste effort on a spell only to have it countered at the last possible moment. This is logged as a Miss.

1. Press Esc to open the Options Menu.

2. Click Interface, and click Combat.

3. Check Cast Bars On Targets.

4. Click Okay.

CUSTOMIZE CHAT LOGS

There are many key changes you can make to the way your chat system presents information. Right-click on your chat windows's tabs to begin this process. You can change the font size. You can define which colors appear from any information. You can even create new chat windows that display information you specify. Some of the most important changes you can make have trouble reading the text. Define the windows to make it clearer instead of needing to highlight it when you want to read.

Play around with this system as much as you want. You can't really break anything. If the windows end up being too strange, simply "reset" them from the same menu and they're back where they started.

COMBAT TEXT OPTIONS

You can change the Combat Text options so that you see more on-screen text showing what's happening during combat:

1. Press Esc to open the Options Menu.

2. Click Interface, and click Floating Combat Text.

3. Check Damage to see the damage you deal, and check any other options you wish to see during combat.

4. Click Okay.

Spell Alerts is a good reminder for new players of when specific spells are ready. You may need to experiment to see which items help you and which get in your way.

USING KEY BINDINGS

The Key Bindings option serves two purposes: a reminder of shortcut keys already in the game, and mapping your own shortcuts keys.

1. Press Esc to open the Options Menu.

2. Click Key Bindings. A window opens, indicating all the keys that already have shortcuts listed in white.

3. To set up a new shortcut, click the Command you want tied to a specific key. For example, the Talent Pane has a keyboard shortcut ("N") but the Glyphs Pane does not. Scroll down to Interface Pane Functions, and click Toggle Glyphs.

4. Choose the key you want to bind it to. If that key is already bound, like G is, a red notification appears at the bottom of the box. You can always reset the Key Bindings to default if needed.

5. Click Okay.

These bindings aren't limited to your keyboard! You can assign functions to your mouse or other input devices as well.

OTHER SHORTCUTS

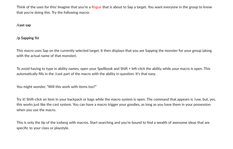

Command	Effect
Print	Sit or stand
Press 2	Unsheathe or sheathe your weapon(s)
Shift+P	Open window for all mounts and pets
Press V	Show raid nameplates and health bars only over your target in combat
Right-click a bank	Remove any positive buff on self
Shift+I	Open pet's spellbook
Esc	Close an open window
Alt+Z	Turn off game interface
PrintScreen	Capture screenshot (screenshots are automatically saved in the World of Warcraft/Screenshots directory)

MACROS

The base game already has many options to consider, but you might want even more once you understand everything. The macro system is a place to help you find the perfect WoW experience.

Macros let you trigger abilities in a more complex manner. You have access to any command in the game through this, and you can even chain multiple commands together. This system is found inside your Options menu. Hit the Escape key and select Macros to see what it's all about.

MAKING A MACRO

You can make character-specific macros, or you can make ones that are available to all characters on your account. There are thousands of ideas floating around for good macros; one of the best ways to find these is to hunt around class message boards and see what other people have made.

Macros can be activated by clicking on them with your mouse, but you can also assign them to keyboard shortcuts. Remember, you have a limited number of slots for macros and then you can use the macro like any normal ability.

Standard slash commands work just fine in macros. For example: /say Sparky Glance- Pitt

However, you can also use commands that you wouldn't normally type in. /cast is the most common one. This lets you trigger abilities through the macro system.

Think of the uses for this! Imagine that you're a Rogue that is about to Sap a target. You want everyone in the group to know that you're doing this. Try the following macro:

/cast sap

/p Sapping %t

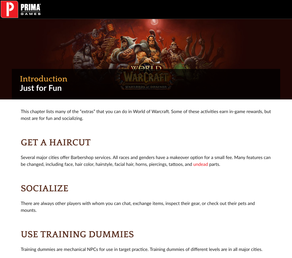

This macro uses Sap on the currently selected target. It then displays that you are Sapping the monster for your group (along with the actual name of that monster).

To avoid having to type in quite a few commands, you can combine /cast and /p with click the ability while your macro is open. This automatically fills in the /cast part of the macro with the ability in question. It's that easy.

You might wonder, "Will this work with items too?"

Try it! Shift-click an item in your backpack or bags while the macro system is open. The command that appears is /use, but, yes, this works just like the /cast system. You can have a macro trigger your goodies, as long as you have them in your possession when you use the macro.

This is only the tip of the iceberg with macros. Start searching and you're bound to find a wealth of awesome ideas that are specific to your class or playstyle.

Introduction
Just for Fun

This chapter lists many of the "extras" that you can do in World of Warcraft. Some of these activities earn in-game rewards, but most are for fun and socializing.

GET A HAIRCUT

Several major cities offer Barbershop services. All races and genders have a makeover option for a small fee. Many features can be changed, including face, hair color, hairstyle, facial hair, horns, piercings, tattoos, and undead parts.

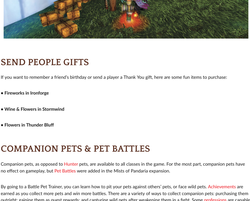

SOCIALIZE

There are always other players with whom you can chat, exchange items, inspect their gear, or check out their pets and mounts.

USE TRAINING DUMMIES

Training dummies are mechanical NPCs for use in target practice. Training dummies of different levels are in all major cities.

SEND PEOPLE GIFTS

If you want to remember a friend's birthday or send a player a Thank You gift, here are some fun items to purchase:

- Fireworks in Ironforge
- Wine & Flowers in Stormwind
- Flowers in Thunder Bluff

COMPANION PETS & PET BATTLES

Companion pets, as opposed to Hunter pets, are available to all classes in the game. For the most part, companion pets have no effect on gameplay, but Pet Battles were added in the Mists of Pandaria expansion.

By going to a Battle Pet Trainer, you can learn how to pit your pets against others' pets, or face wild pets. Achievements are earned so you collect more pets and win more battles. There are a variety of ways to collect companion pets: purchasing them outright; gaining them as quest rewards; and capturing wild pets after weakening them in a fight. Some professions are capable of creating pets, and you can find more companions by completing Achievements, or by searching for enemies that drop pets on rare occasions.

The following tables show the pets available for purchase throughout the worlds of Azeroth and Draenor.

Common Horde Pets

Pet	Location
Cockroach	Undercity
Snakes	Orgrimmar
Prairie Dog	Thunder Bluff
Dragonhawk Hatchling	Eversong Woods, Fairbreeze Village

Common Alliance Pets

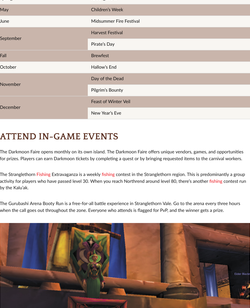

Pet	Location
Cats	Elwynn Forest, Southeast of Stormwind
Snowshoe Rabbit	Dun Morogh, Amberstill Ranch
Owls	Darnassus
Moths	The Exodar

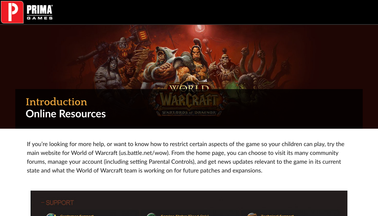

Other Purchasable Pets

Pet	Location
Frogs	Darkmoon Faire
Birds	Booty Bay, Stranglethorn Vale
Magical Creatures	Stormspire, Nethersturm

Introduction
Online Resources

If you're looking for more help, or want to know how to restrict certain aspects of the game so your children can play, try the main website for World of Warcraft (us.battle.net/wow). From the home page, you can choose to visit its many community forums, manage your account (including setting Parental Controls), and get news updates relevant to the game in its current state and what the World of Warcraft team is working on for future patches and expansions.

COMMUNITY FORUMS

Forums are online bulletin boards where players can ask questions, brag, help other players, and read updates from Blizzard staffers. Using forums is like mining for gold. There's plenty of valuable information in forums, but you must wade through many random topics to find it.

Some of the most helpful forums for new players are Class, Realm, Profession Discussion, and Quest Discussion. With some patience, you should find a great deal of assistance.

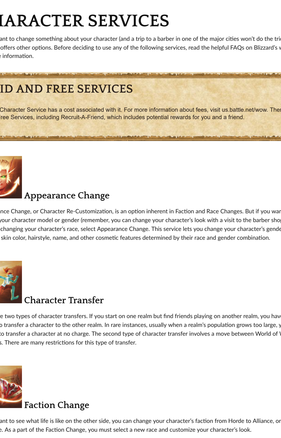

REMOTE AUCTION HOUSE

If you have fun "playing the Auction House," you can now access your realm's Auction House from your web browser or mobile device. Anyone can browse the Auction House for free, or subscribe to the premium service which allows you to bid on and buy out auctions with real-time results, create auctions from items in your bags, bank, or mailbox, and collect gold earned in your auctions.

PARENTAL CONTROLS

Blizzard Entertainment believes that real-world priorities such as homework, chores, and family dinner should take precedence over entertainment. Their Parental Controls provide parents and guardians with easy-to-use tools to set up rules for World of Warcraft play time and manage access to Blizzard Entertainment games in a way that fits your family's situation.

You can set Play-Time Limits, a schedule, and even have weekly reports sent to your e-mail account that provide information about the times your child was playing the game, and much more. All these options are found on the battle.net website (www.battle.net) under your Account Settings.

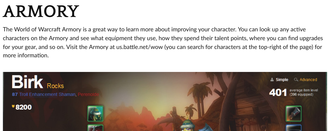

AUTHENTICATOR

If you're worried about your account being compromised, Blizzard offers another layer of protection from unauthorized access. A Blizzard Authenticator is an additional layer of security for your Battle.net account. There are multiple types of Authenticators, but they all provide the same security. The Battle.net Authenticator provides you with a unique code that is constantly changing in addition to your regular password. For more information, check the Account Security section in the Services section on the World of Warcraft website.

CHARACTER SERVICES

If you want to change something about your character (and a trip to a barber in one of the major cities won't do the trick), Blizzard offers other options. Before deciding to use any of the following services, read the helpful FAQs on Blizzard's website for more information.

Appearance Change

Appearance Change, or Character Re-Customization, is an option inherent in Faction and Race Changes. But if you want to change your character model or gender (remember, you can change your character's look with a visit to the barber shop!) without changing your character's race, select Appearance Change. This service lets you change your character's gender, face, hair and skin color, hairstyle, name, and other cosmetic features determined by their race and gender combination.

Character Transfer

There are two types of character transfers. If you start on one realm but find friends playing on another realm, you have the option to transfer a character to the other realm. In rare instances, usually when a realm's population grows too large, you may be able to transfer a character at no charge. The second type of character transfer involves a move between World of Warcraft accounts. There are many restrictions for this type of transfer.

Faction Change

If you want to see what life is like on the other side, you can change your character's faction from Horde to Alliance, or Alliance to Horde. As a part of the Faction Change, you must select a new race and customize your character's look.

Name Change

Changing your character's name is an option included in some of the other services. But if your character's name is the only thing you wish to change, this service is the one to choose.

Race Change

If you want to try out a new race that is part of your current faction, select the Race Change option. The full range of customization options offered by the Character Re-Customization service is included as well.

THE BLIZZARD STORE

The Blizzard Store sells a few items that appear in World of Warcraft. Currently, you can buy a number of vanity pets, and mounts including the Celestial Steed, Winged Guardian, and Heart of the Aspects.

ARMORY

The World of Warcraft Armory is a great way to learn more about improving your character. You can look up any active characters on the Armory and see what equipment they use, how they spend their talent points, where you can find upgrades for your gear, and so on. Visit the Armory at us.battle.net/wow (you can search for characters at the top-right of the page) for more information.

FIND ADDITIONAL RESOURCES

BradyGames strategy guides are a great source for information and fun ideas, but WoW is too big to put into any single book or even a group of books. There are thousands and thousands of sites with WoW information. Beyond the main forums for the game, there are guild sites, fan sites, and millions of individual players to talk to.

Don't play WoW like it's a solo game. It isn't! There are so many knowledgeable people out there who enjoy sharing their ideas. Talk to people in the game. Read the forums. Look up macros, tactics, questions, and answers as well. If you want to know what to craft or where to find a reagent, entire recipe lists are available. If you have trouble with a quest, don't drop it. Find out if other people have had trouble too. Go online and search with the exact quest name. Pretty much every single quest garners helpful search results.

Be eager in your quest for knowledge. None of the best players on your server got there by themselves. It's impossible to know everything about every class and situation. Even people who only play one class are bound to miss a few ideas.

The following is a list of important in-game terms and abbreviations, from all of these are official terms used by Amazon Prime Gaming. Some of these terms such as Prime and its other players from other. You don't need to memorize this list, but it's merely reference in case you encounter an unfamiliar word or phrase.

Introduction
Choosing Your Character's Race

There are 13 races in the game: six for the Alliance, six for the Horde, and one race that can choose either side. Keep in mind that each race has limitations on available classes.

Each race has innate benefits (known as Racial Abilities) that are unique to that race. These are abilities you have in addition to what you get from choosing your class.

FACTIONS

The race you choose determines whether you are part of the Alliance or the Horde. If you have friends in the game with whom you want to play, choose the same faction as them to work together. There are no “good” or “bad” sides in this conflict. Both factions have rich storylines and compelling motives.

Horde Races

Though their ways are sometimes brutal and warlike, some of the leaders of the Horde exemplify honor and courage. The various races of the Horde have struggled to free themselves from demonic tyranny, a mindless plague, and countless wars.

Pandaren Race

The enigmatic Pandaren have long been a mystery to the other races of Azeroth. For ten thousand years, they lived in isolation in their mist-shrouded homeland, staying away from the conflicts of the world of Azeroth. Now the outside world has come to the continent of Pandaria and the Wandering Isle, giving each Pandaren the option of which faction they wish to join.

Alliance Races

The Alliance gives the appearance of being on the side of righteousness, and many of its leaders are good people. However, they are also the source of hypocrisy and considerable lawlessness. The destruction left behind by the Gnomes’ scientific mistakes, Dwarven civil wars, and Human misconduct have scared much of the Eastern Kingdoms.

STARTING OUT WITH FRIENDS

Each race has its own home region, so the race you choose determines where you start in the game. If you and a friend want to begin the game together, choose the same race to start at the same location.

If you and your friend can’t agree on the same race, it won’t take long to reach the game’s major hubs where you can join up. As a result, it’s best to play the exact character you want, even if it means waiting to see your buddies a little bit longer.

THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR

It’s not uncommon to see that one race might be better suited to the class that you’ve chosen, but what if that isn’t the race that you had your heart set on? If you have any strong preference for a specific race, the best thing to do is ignore Racial Abilities. Bonding with your character is a real thing. Choosing a race that you don’t want to play is something that grates on you over time. Don’t let that happen. Enjoy your time in the game. In the end, stats aren’t a big deal; you won’t founder just because you picked a “weaker” race to go with your class. None of the races are especially overpowered or underpowered. Their bonuses are more of a tiny perk. They help, but they never make or break a class.

RACES OF THE ALLIANCE
Draenei

The Draenei are an intelligent and spiritual race who no longer have a homeworld of their own. They fled their home planet of Argus, and then Outland as well. The Legion, a force of horrible evil, has dogged their efforts at every turn. Currently, the Draenei have crash landed on Azeroth in their capital ship (The Exodar). Though their ship's engines have been sabotaged, they are ready and willing to continue the battle against evil.

Draenei are dedicated to magic and Holy Light. The Draenei also have a spiritual affinity with the Naaru, energy beings who serve the Holy Light.

Draenei are 7-8 feet tall, with long tails and bipedal hooves. Females have horns of varying shapes and sizes. Males have unique cranial and facial features.

Start location: Ammen Vale in Azuremyst Isle.

Home city: The Exodar.

RACES OF THE ALLIANCE
Dwarf

Dwarves are a hardy people, due no doubt to living for generations in cold regions, frequently in underground fortresses. Masters of stone and ore, Dwarves are equally skilled at building cities and crafting weaponry. Dwarves are treasure seekers, explorers, and courageous fighters.

Dwarves are 4-5 feet tall, stocky, and muscular. Males prize their elaborate beards; females, their decorative hairstyles and piercings.

Start Location: Coldridge Valley in Dun Morogh

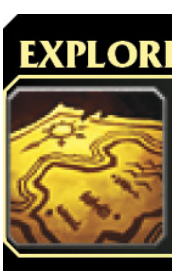

Home city: Ironforge

Rams, the Dwarven Racial Mount

EXPLORER

You find additional fragments when looting archeological finds, and you can survey faster than normal archaeologists.

FROST RESISTANCE

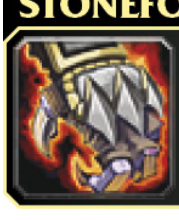

Reduces Frost damage taken by 1%.

MIGHT OF THE MOUNTAIN

Critical strike bonus damage and healing increased by 2%.

STONEFORM

Removes all poison, disease, curse, magic, and bleed effects and reduces all damage taken by 10% for 8 sec.

RACES OF THE ALLIANCE
Gnome

The eccentric Gnomes once thrived in Gnomeregan, a city deep in the mountains beneath Dun Morogh. When attacked by Troggs, the clever Gnomes released toxic radiation against their attackers[md]and the gnome citizenry as well. The surviving Gnomes fled the city, still sharing their inventions and odd devices with others. They currently use Ironforge, the Dwarven capital, as a place of refuge.

Gnomish and Goblin engineers have a long-standing rivalry. It's uncertain to outsiders which side is more dangerous to their friends and enemies!

Gnomes are approximately 3 feet tall, being the shortest sentient race in Azeroth. They have petite bodies but larger facial features. Gnomes have only 4 fingers per hand. Male and female Gnomes are known for their outrageous hair colors.

Start Location: Gnomeregan in Dun Morogh

Home city: Ironforge (Tinker Town)

RACES OF THE ALLIANCE
Human

Humans are both proud and ambitious, seeking comfort and glory and to change the world around them. Many humans are laborers, working in the farms, mines, and lumber mills outside of Stormwind, eagerly taking all that nature offers. Humans are also courageous knights, brave on the battlefield and loyal to their comrades.

Humans are 5-6 feet tall, strong and healthy. Human physical traits vary greatly, with a wide palette of skin and hair colors.

Start location: Northshire in Elwynn Forest

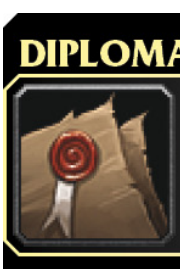

Home city: Stormwind

Horses, the Human Racial Mount

DIPLOMACY

Reputation gains increased by 10%.

EVERY MAN FOR HIMSELF

Removes all movement impairing effects and all effects which cause loss of control of your character. This effect shares a cooldown with other similar effects.

THE HUMAN SPIRIT

Versatility increased by an amount that scales with level.

Night Elves are perceived as aloof and solitary, preferring nature to conventional cities and the company of their own kind to that of other races. Rather than using nature as a resource, Night Elves seek to be in rhythm with the natural world. Night Elves blend magic and the forces of nature for their protection and strength. This belief places Night Elves in strong opposition to Blood Elves, who have consumed tremendous magic against the flow of nature and who continue to place ambition before reason.

Night Elves are approximately 7 feet tall; they are lithe and athletic. All Night Elves have prominent eyebrows and very long ears. Males have elaborate facial hair. Females have facial tattoos.

Start location: Shadowglen in Teldrassil

Home city: Darnassus

Nightsabers, the Night Elf Racial Mount

RACIAL ABILITIES

Reduces the chance enemies have to detect you while Shadowmelded and increases your speed while stealthed by 5%.

NATURE RESISTANCE

Reduces Nature damage taken by 1%.

QUICKNESS

Increases your chance to dodge melee and ranged attacks by 2%, and your movement speed by 2%.

SHADOWMELD

Activate to slip into the shadows, reducing the chance for enemies to detect your presence. Lasts until cancelled or upon moving. Any threat is restored versus enemies still in combat upon cancellation of this effect.

TOUCHED BY ELUNE

Increases your haste by 1% during the night. Increases your Critical Strike by 1% during the day.

WISP SPIRIT

Transform into a wisp upon death, increasing speed by 75%.

RACES OF THE ALLIANCE
Worgen

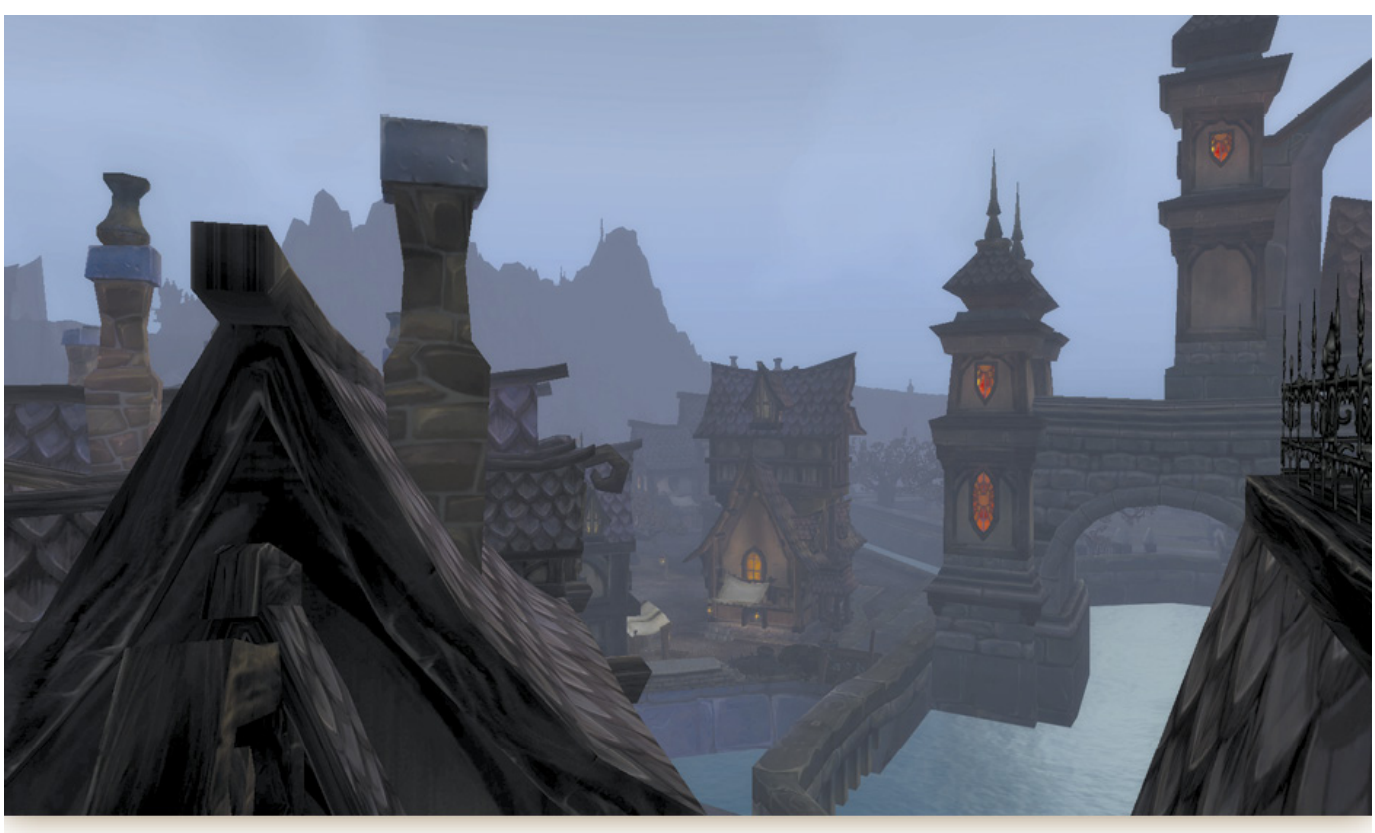

It was once thought that Worgen were evil creatures that came to Azeroth from another dimension. Time has proven this false, as newer knowledge reveals that Worgen are descendants of cursed Night Elven Druids. These Druids worshipped Goldrinn and would take on the form of the wolf. Eventually, this sect lost themselves in madness, and their curse has continued for many generations.

The Greymane Worgen are infected with this curse, but they have fought hard to retain themselves and developed a partial cure to this illness. As such, they are not driven toward uncontrolled violence. These Worgen have reached out to the Alliance, forming the sixth member race of this group.

These Worgen are both human and wolf, able to pass between the two forms. They have full control over themselves, but appear as true Worgen when in such a form, growing thick hair and possessing a canine appearance.

Start Location: Ruins of Gilneas

Home city: Gilneas

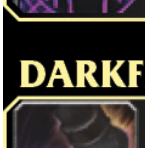

Worgen learn the racial ability Running Wild at level 20 in addition to the ability to use a mount

RACIAL ABILITIES

RUNNING WILD

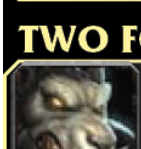

Drop to all fours to run as fast as an animal.

TWO FORMS

Turn into your currently inactive form.

VICIOUSNESS

Increases critical strike chance by 1%.

RACES OF THE HORDE
Blood Elf

The Blood Elves are so named in honor of their high elf ancestors who died during the Scourge invasion of their homeland, Quel'Thalas. Blood Elves seek power through arcane magic, bending it to their will to create warped, beautiful surroundings. Fiercely loyal to their race, Blood Elves will do anything to avenge their ancestors and reclaim their magic power. They are survivors hoping to regain glory once again.

Those of a weak disposition are unable to control their lust for magic and power. This burns away at their wills and turns these Elves into a pathetic, weaker version of what they once were.

Blood Elves are 5-6 feet tall, slim and wiry. Their hair and skin color reflect their affinity to fire and the sun. All Blood Elves have prominent eyebrows and long ears. Males have minimal facial hair. Females have elaborate ear jewelry.

Start location: Sunstrider Isle in Eversong Woods

Home city: Silvermoon City

Hawkstriders, the Blood Elf Racial Mount

ARCANE RESISTANCE

Reduces Arcane damage taken by 1%.

ARCANE TORRENT

Silence all enemies within 8 yards for 2 sec and restores 3% of your Chi, Energy, Focus, Mana or Runic Power. Non-player victim spellcasting is also interrupted for 3 sec.

RACES OF THE HORDE
Goblin

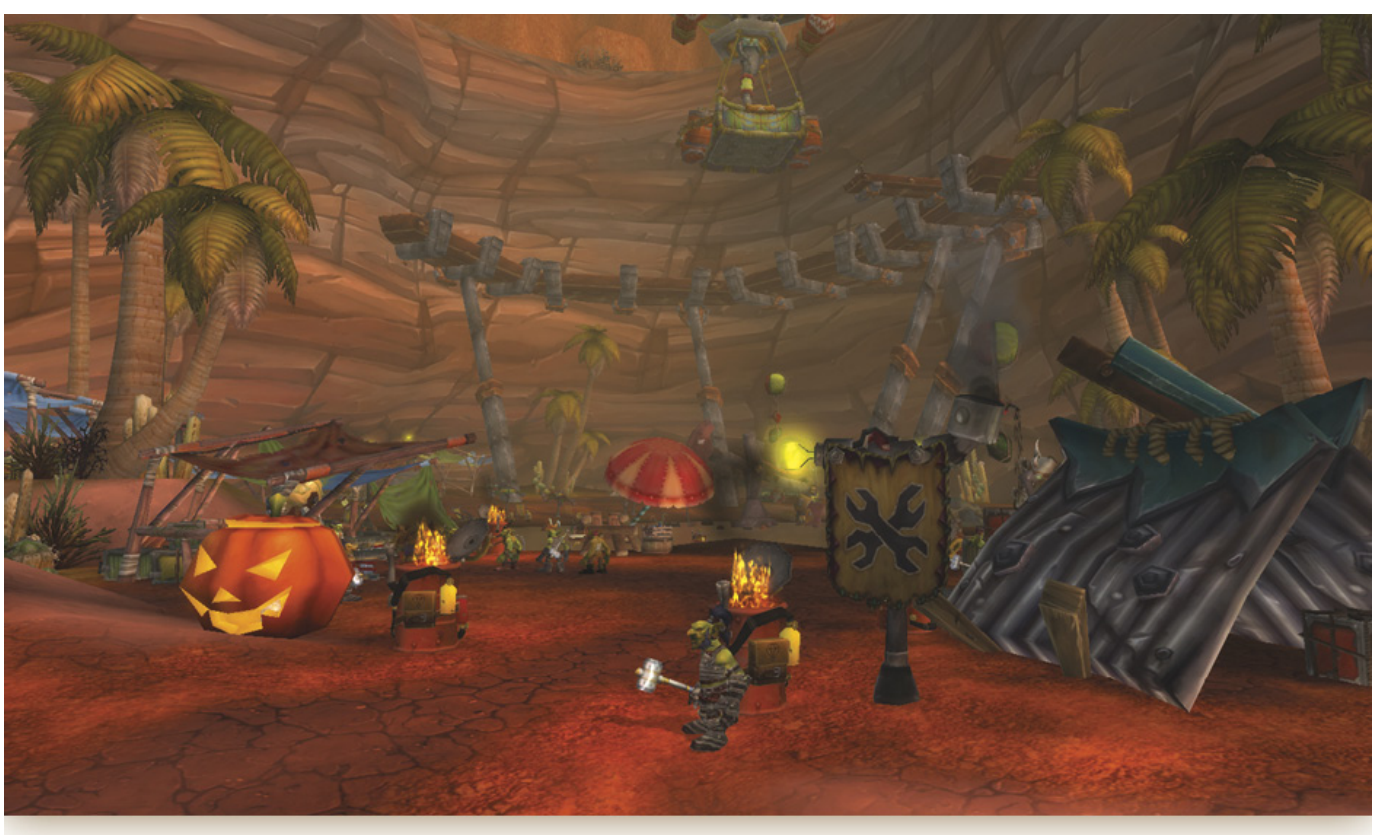

Goblins are a creative race that often fails to see the forest for the trees. This might be because of their penchant for cutting down entire swaths of landscape. Many Goblins have a fascination with technology and innovative engineering.

Often found on neutral ground, many Goblins weren't interested in taking sides between the Horde and the Alliance. There isn't much profit in the choice because it closes out a huge market from the other side. However, recent developments in the world have made it impossible for all of the Goblins to sit on the sidelines. As such, some have joined the Horde and are ready to lend their inventions to the cause.

Goblins are tiny creatures, though Gnomes still push them out for the title of smallest fry. These green-skinned people have long ears and equally impressive arms for their size.

Starting Location: Kezan

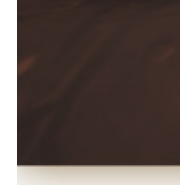

Capital City: Orgrimmar (Goblin Slums)

TIME IS MONEY

Cash in on a 1% increase to haste.

RACES OF THE HORDE
Orc

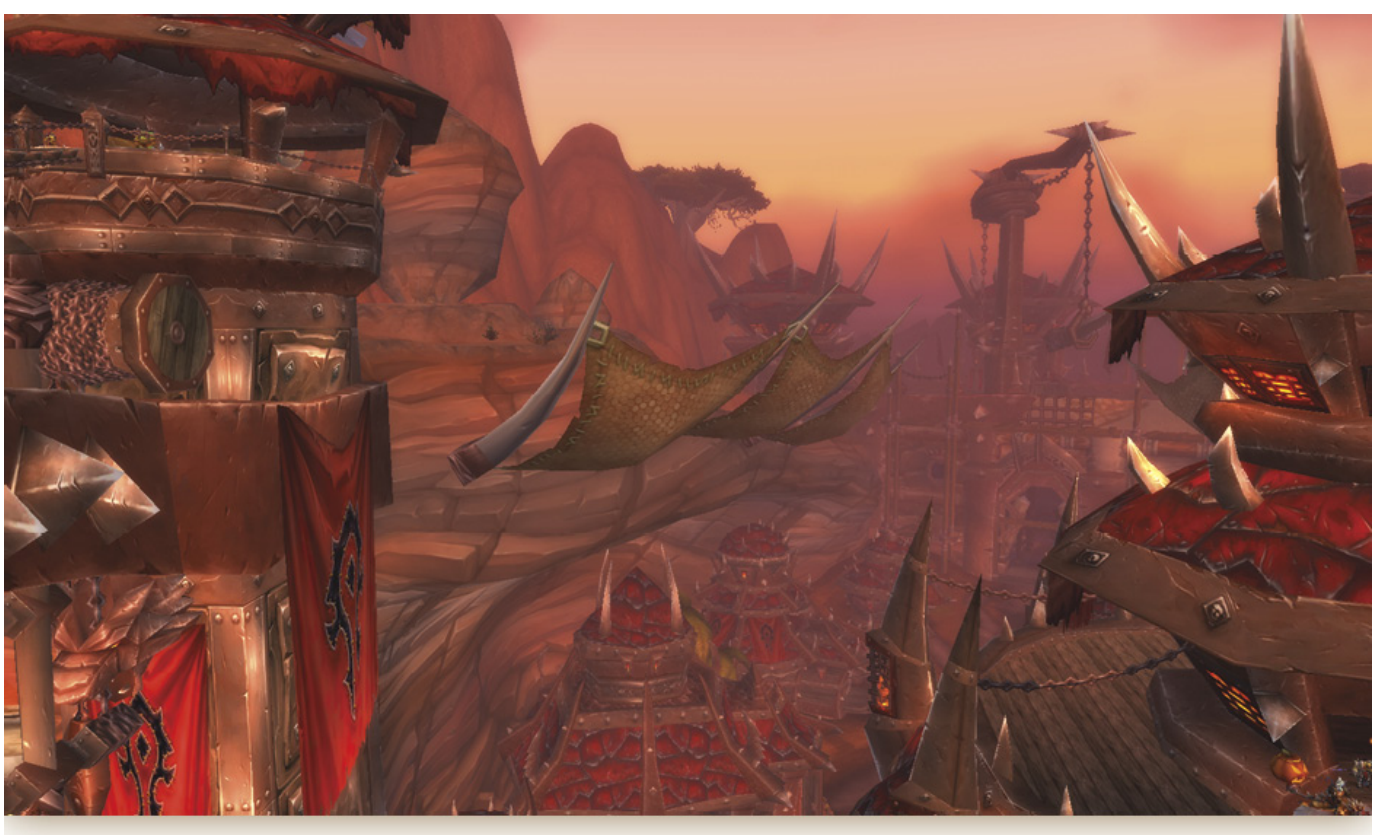

Orcs are large and terrifying to their enemies, but after numerous wars, the Orcs seek peace and a return to their shamanistic heritage. Thrall, their great Warchief, led his people to Durotar, chosen due to its desolate climate and isolated position. Due to their warring heritage, Orcs are courageous on the battlefield. They are also a hardy people, seeking a new path to glory and honor.

Orcs are approximately 6 feet tall, with muscular physiques. Males have very long and unusual facial hair. Females have eclectic hairstyles and unusual piercings. All Orcs have some variation of green skin.

Start location: Valley of Trials in Durotar

WAR STOMP

Stun up to 5 enemies within 8 yards for 2 seconds.

RACES OF THE HORDE
Troll

The Darkspear Trolls fled Stranglethorn Vale after generations of wars with other troll tribes and invaders. The Orcs offered the Trolls a new homeland in Durotar. Sen'jin Village is named in honor of the Trolls' fallen leader. This was the temporary settling point for the Trolls, but they've now pushed out to the Echo Isles, just off the Durotar coastline.

Trolls are wild, from living in the jungle, and superstitious, due to their tribe's spiritual practices. They are 7-8 feet tall, the tallest race in Azeroth. Males frequently squat in place, but females do not. Trolls have three fingers per hand and two toes per foot. Both males and females have a variety of tusk styles and wild hairstyles.

Start location: Echo Isles in Durotar

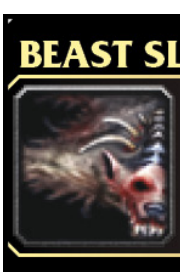

Home city: Orgrimmar (Valley of Spirits)

REGENERATION

Health regeneration rate increased by 10%. 10% of total health regeneration may continue during combat.

RACES OF THE HORDE
Undead

A renegade group of undead broke away from the Scourge army and the rule of the Lich King. Led by Sylvanas Windrunner, this group of undead call themselves the Forsaken. Hated by the living but unwilling to return to the control of the Lich King, the Forsaken wage a continuous battle for their independent survival. They didn't choose undeath, but they see that it has its benefits.

Forsaken are 5-6 feet tall, scrawny, and gaunt. Their skin is deteriorating, and their hair is unkempt. Both males and females have a variety of decomposing features.

Start location: Deathknell in Tirisfal Glades

Home city: The Undercity

Skeletal Horses, the Undead Racial Mount

TOUCH OF THE GRAVE

Your attacks and damaging spells have a chance to drain the target dealing Shadow damage and healing you for the same amount.

WILL OF THE FORSAKEN

Removes any Charm, Fear, and Sleep effect. This ability shares a 30 second cooldown with other similar effects.

THEY WHO WALK BOTH PATHS
Pandaren

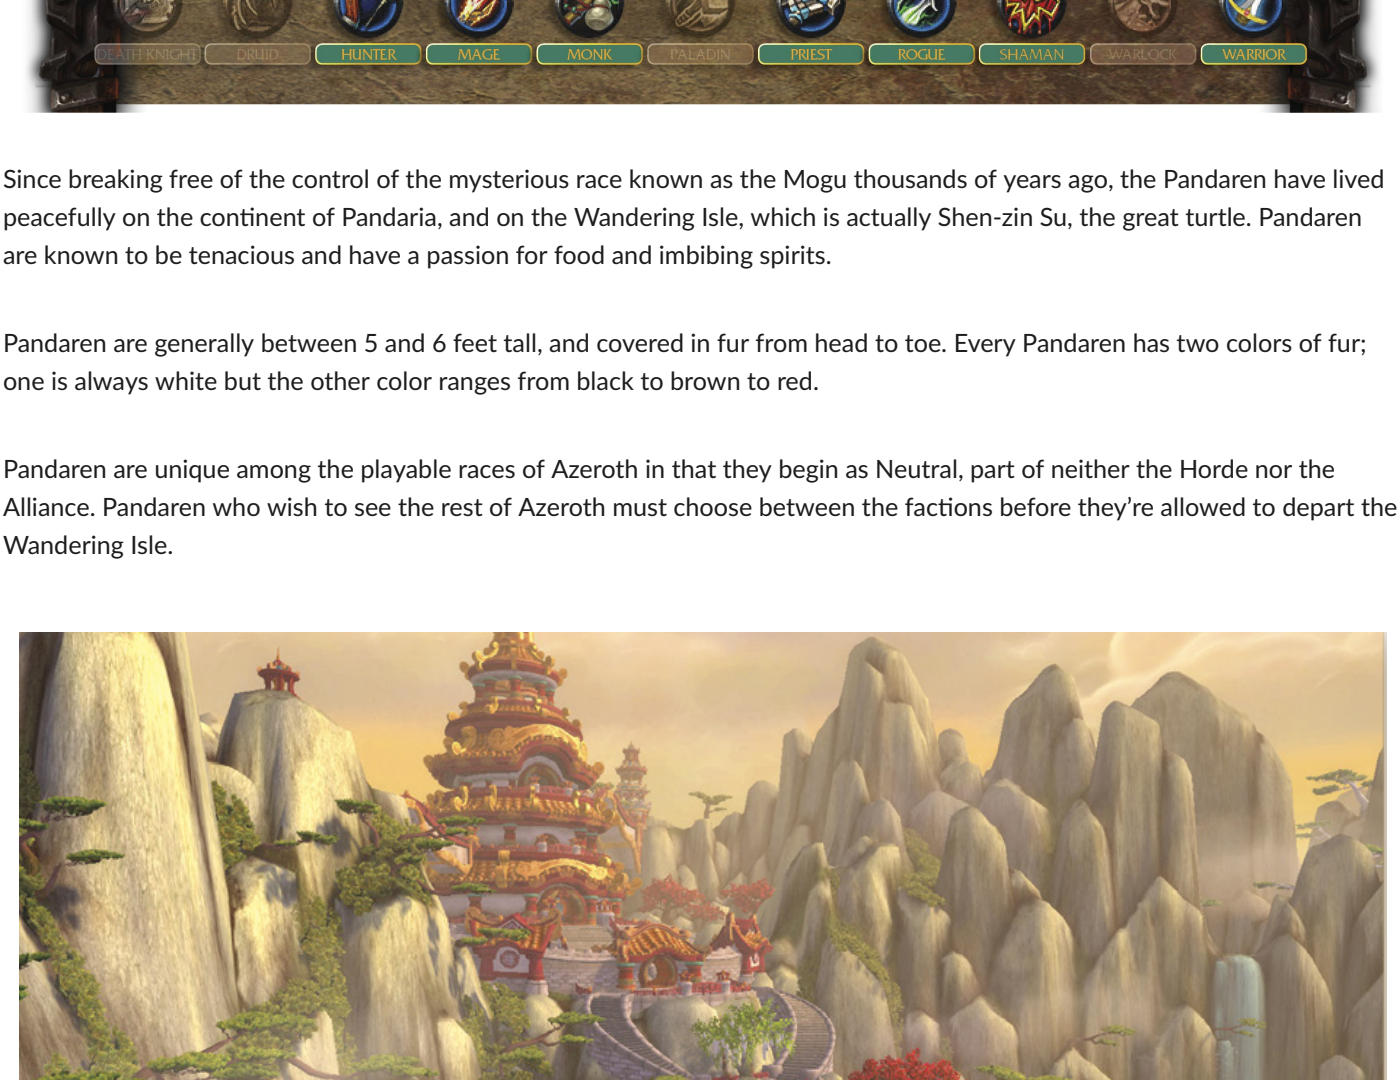

Since breaking free of the control of the mysterious race known as the Mogu thousands of years ago, the Pandaren have lived peacefully on the continent of Pandaria, and on the Wandering Isle, which is actually Shen-zin Su, the great turtle. Pandaren are known to be tenacious and have a passion for food and imbibing spirits.

Pandaren are generally between 5 and 6 feet tall, and covered in fur from head to toe. Every Pandaren has two colors of fur; one is always white but the other color ranges from black to brown to red.

Pandaren are unique among the playable races of Azeroth in that they begin as Neutral, part of neither the Horde nor the Alliance. Pandaren who wish to see the rest of Azeroth must choose between the factions before they're allowed to depart the Wandering Isle.

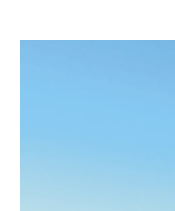

Start location: Shang Xi Training Grounds on Shen-zin Su

PET BATTLES
Introduction

The popularity of building a collection of pets and sending them into battle continues to grow. The release of Warlords of Draenor heralds the arrival of a new wave of pets, pushing the total number available to over 1,000. If you're looking to start your own collection, or for details on how to find the newest additions to the Pet Journal, you are in the right place.

PET BATTLES
Getting Started

Once you get a character to level 5, look for Pet Battle Trainers in the towns nearest each race's starting locations. For example, there is a trainer in Goldshire (Elwynn Forest) and another in Razor Hill (Durotar). Each faction capital (Stormwind for Alliance and Orgrimmar for Horde) has a trainer as well. Speak with any of these trainers to learn the Pet Battles ability. These trainers also sell starter pets, based on your character's race Trainers also offer a series of quests (starting with "Learning the Ropes") that teach you the basics of battling. Before clicking on a wild pet to start a battle, press Shift + "p" to open your Collections Window. Click on the Pet Journal tab to view your available pets. If there's a specific pet you want to use, click on the pet's icon and drag it to the top line of Pet Battle Slots. Once you click on a wild pet to start a fight, you can't switch any pets from your journal into an active slot.

BATTLE PET INFORMATION

To learn more about a specific pet, Open your Collections, and select the Pet Journal tab. The box above your Battle Pet Slots should look similar to this image.

PETS PURCHASED FROM PET BATTLE TRAINERS

The race of your character, not the race of the trainer, determines which pet a given trainer offers to you.

ALLIANCE

Race	Pet
Draenei	Blue Moth
Dwarf	Snowshoe Rabbit
Gnome	Snowshoe Rabbit
Human	Orange Tabby Cat
Night Elf	Great Horned Owl
Worgen	Gilnean Raven

HORDE

Race	Pet
Blood Elf	Golden Dragonhawk
Goblin	Shore Crawler

PANDAREN

Race	Pet
Pandaren	Jade Crane Chick

Pet Icon And Level

Mousing over the icon tells you how to acquire the pet and provides the creature's lore. This also works with pets you haven't yet obtained.

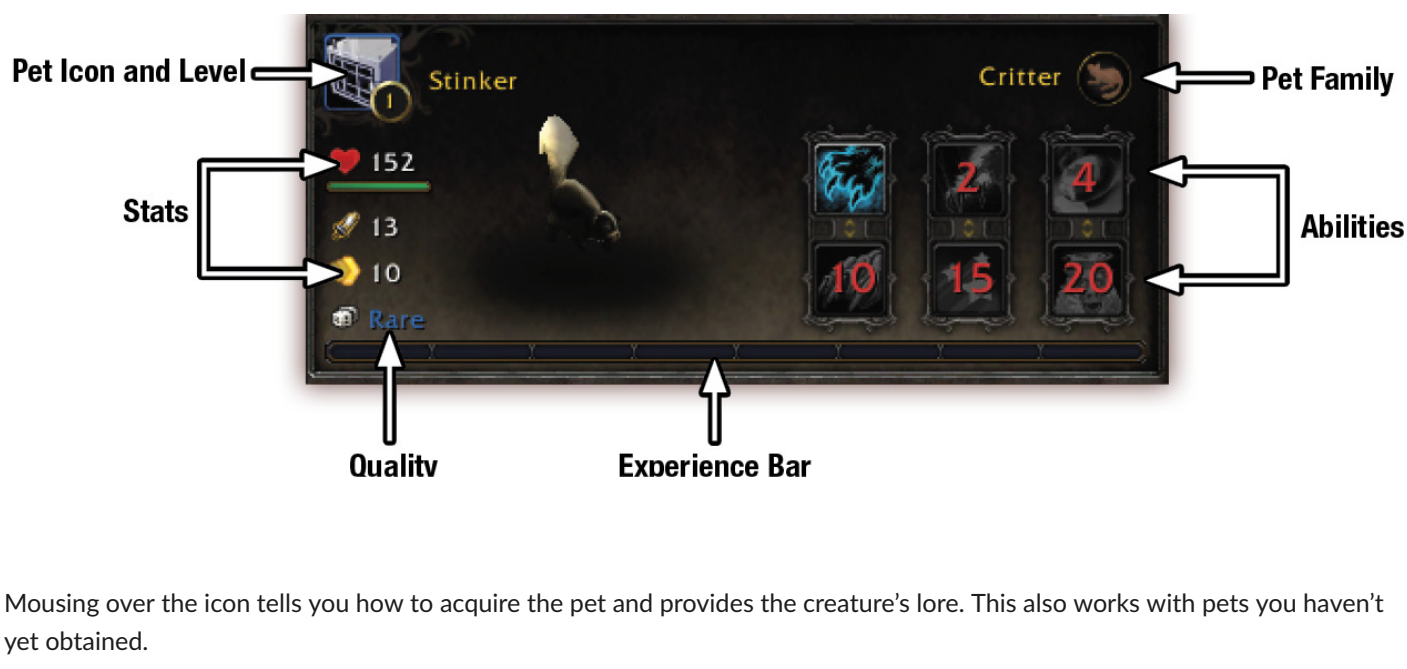

Experience Bar

Tracks how much experience a pet has earned and how much more is needed to reach the next level.

Stats

All battle pets have three stats: Health, Power, and Speed. Each stat increases as your pet gains levels.

Stat	Description
Health	Pet's maximum health. When a pet's health reaches zero, they're incapacitated and unable to continue fighting.
Power	This number determines the amount of damage a pet deals in combat. The higher the number, the more damage the pet does in battle.
Speed	Speed determines initiative, which is used to set the order in which pets act in each turn of battle.

Pets have an extra characteristic: Quality. Quality can be Poor (gray), Common (white), Uncommon (green), and Rare (blue). Pet Quality does not change when it is captured, nor does it change as you level up a captured pet. The only way to improve a pet's quality is through the use of a Battle-Stone.

Battle-Stones are randomly rewarded after wild pet battles, or from the pet supplies you receive after completing daily pet battle quests. Most Battle-Stones are family specific, and certain NPCs will trade your extra Battle-Stones of one family for another.

PET BATTLES
A Basic Pet Battle

Pet battles are turn-based, meaning each combatant is allowed one action each turn. Click on the icon, or press the corresponding button on your keyboard to command your pet. The battle ends when the pets on one side or the other exhaust their health, or (if you're facing another trainer) when someone Forfeits the match.

To learn more about the various abilities available to your battle pets, mouse over an ability's icon until its description appears.

Regardless of the opponent you're facing, you have the same choices on each of your turns. Keep in mind that some abilities include a cooldown. When you use one of these abilities, a number appears over the icon to indicate how many rounds must pass before the ability is ready to use again. There are also certain abilities that block some of your options for a limited number of rounds. For example, many spiders use Sticky Web to keep you from switching pets for a few rounds.

TYPES OF PET BATTLES

There are three types of Pet Battles.

PVP Battles are fought anonymously against other players. Use the Find Battle button on your Pet Journal window to find opponents.

Pet Duels are initiated with a click on another player's portrait. Select Pet Duel and wait for the other person to accept.

Wild Pet Battles are fought against wild pets. Locate a wild pet with the green paw icon floating over it and right-click it to start the fight.

You are immune to NPC damage while engaged in a pet battle, but if you're flagged for PvP, you are vulnerable to other players. Be careful where you choose to battle!

WEATHER CONDITIONS

There are a number of abilities that change the weather conditions and impact the battle. The following list provides more information about each weather condition.

Condition	Description	Ability (Family)
Raining	During a cleansing rain, the duration of hostile damage over time effects is reduced by 1 round and Aquatic pets deal 25% more damage.	Cleansing Rain (Aquatic)
Sunny Day	During a sunny day, the maximum health of all pets is increased by 50% and healing done is increased by 25%.	Sunlight (Elemental)
Scorched Earth	Deals Dragonkin damage to the front pet of both teams each round. All pets count as Burning.	Scorched Earth (Dragonkin)
Arcane Winds	During Arcane Winds, pets cannot be stunned or rooted.	Arcane Storm (Magic)
Moonlight	During Moonlight, all pets receive 25% additional healing and Magic abilities deal 10% additional damage.	Moonfire (Magic)
Blizzard	During a Blizzard, all pets are considered Chilled.	Call Blizzard (Elemental)
Darkness	During Darkness, all pets are considered Blinded and all healing received is reduced by 50%.	Call Darkness (Humanoid)
Lightning Storm	During a Lightning Storm, all pets deal bonus Mechanical damage on each attack and Mechanical abilities deal 25% additional damage.	Call Lightning (Mechanical)
Sandstorm	During a sandstorm, all pets take less damage and their accuracy is reduced by 10%.	Sandstorm (Flying)
Muddy	Muddy weather prevents any pet on the battlefield from swapping out for 3 rounds.	Mudslide (Critter)

PvP Pet Battles

When you click on the Find Battle button on your Pet Journal, you are randomly matched against other players. The game does not track your losses, only the number of times you've won. There are no rewards for PvP Pet Battles, other than earning Achievements.

Pet Duels

Pet Duels function basically the same as regular duels. Approach another character, right-click their portrait, and invite them to a Pet Duel. Pet Duels follow the same rules as regular duels, meaning you can't duel inside a city or designated sanctuary. If your PvP flag is turned on, then Pet Duels against characters of the opposite faction is not an option. You must use an area such as the sewers under Dalaran if you want to Pet Duel when characters are flagged for PvP. There are no rewards for Pet Duels, other than earning Achievements.

Pet Battles Against NPC Trainers

There are NPC pet trainers found in many locations on every world. A line of quests sends you to battle them, and you must work your way through these trainers in order to unlock the daily quests listed in your Achievements under the Pet Battles tab.

Pet Battles Against Wild Pets

Until you're overloaded with level 25 pets, the bulk of your Pet Battles will take place against wild pets. There are wild pets throughout Azeroth and Draenor, with most zones having at least one that appears nowhere else. These are the battles where your pets gain most of their experience points, and the means by which you add to the population of your Pet Journal.

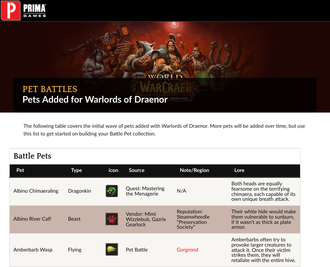

Pets in the wild can be any level from 1 to 25 and they maintain a majority of their levels when you capture them. For example, a pet caught at level 24 can be weakened to level 22 by capture. Once they're yours, they gain experience in the same way as any other pet you own. If you want to go after higher level wild pets, you must look in increasingly higher level zones.

Acquiring New Pets

- Wild pets are numerous, and make up a large portion of your Pet Journal. However, there are other ways to acquire pets, such as:
- Purchasing from vendors with in-game currency
- Completing Achievements
- During World Events
- Purchasing from the Blizzard Store
- Redeeming codes found in the World of Warcraft Trading Card Game
- Crafted with professions
- Completion of quests

World Drops (includes Dungeons and Raids)

PET BATTLES
Pets Added for Warlords of Draenor

The following table covers the initial wave of pets added with Warlords of Draenor. More pets will be added over time, but use this list to get started on building your Battle Pet collection.

Battle Pets

Pet	Type	Icon	Source	Note/Region	Lore
Albino Chimaeraling	Dragonkin		Quest: Mastering the Menagerie	N/A	Both heads are equally dangerous when carrying chimaera, each capable of its own unique breath attack.
Albino River Calf	Beast		Vendor: Mimi Wizzlebub, Gazrix Gearlock	Reputation: Steamwheedle Cartel "Preservation Society"	Their white hide would make a beautiful rug, but only if it wasn't as thick as plate armor.
Amberbarb Wasp	Flying		Pet Battle	Gorgrond	Amberbarbs often try to sting their own tails when they attack it. Once their victim strikes them, they will retaliate with an entire hive.
Ancient Nest Guardian	Mechanical		Profession: Archaeology	N/A	The ancient nest guardian was designed with the unthinkable in mind: to hate cats.
Axebeak Hatchling	Flying		Pet Battle	Gorgrond	The edges of its beak are particularly sharp. Watch your fingers during feeding time!
Blazing Cindercrawler	Elemental		World Event: Midsummer Fire Festival	Midsummer Merchant	Tiny, incinerated corpses of various insects line its cage.
Bloodsting Wasp	Flying		Pet Battle	Spires of Arak	Contrary to popular belief, bloodstings don't eat blood on blood, but bees.
Bone Wasp	Flying		Faction Vendor	Reputation: Laughing Skull	One rare ritual involves cupping a bone wasp in their hands and letting it vigorously. The wasps increases strength and invokes vivid imagery.
Brilliant Bloodfeather	Flying		Pet Battle	Talador	The bloodfeather is completely fearless, fanning out its feathers and charging any threat.
Brilliant Spore	Flying		Drop: Rotcap	Spires of Arak	Brilliant spores are very rarely seen, found deep under the waves of Draenor within the darkest corners of the Zangar fungal encroachment.
Bush Chicken	Critter		World Event: Pilgrim's Bounty	N/A	Following their introduction to the mainland by the goblins, Bush Chickens have become a staple dish for the Pilgrim's Bounty due to their high deliciousness and low intelligence.
Crazy Carrot	Elemental		Vendor: Naron Bloomthistle	Garrison (Herb Garden)	Left to their own devices, carrots will simply lose their minds.
Crimson Spore	Flying		Drop: Strange Spore	Gorgrond	A spore plucked from the Zangar fungal bloom of Gorgrond that was swallowed when Draenor was ripped apart by nether magic.
Cursed Birman	Undead		World Event: Hallow's End	Vendor: Chub (Tirisfal Glades), Vendor: Dorothy (Stormwind)	One of this cat's nine lives has returned to haunt the living. Watch out for this one when you're trying to sleep.
Deathwatch Hatchling	Beast		Vendor: Guild Vendor	Stormwind, Orgrimmar	This hatchling has an unusual sense that allows it to detect the living and surround with aura protection.
Doom Bloom	Elemental		Drop: Mandrakor	Gorgrond	A clear indication that goblin fertilizers should be used sparingly.
Dranei Micro Defender	Mechanical		Vendor: Vindicator Nuureen	Reputation: Council of Exarchs (Revered)	While these tiny mechanical defenders were created to protect domesticated elekks from Dranei kids, they turned out to be really good at giving back massages.
Elekk Plushie	Magic		Profession: Tailoring	Garrison (Inn)	This adorable little elephant is always there for you.
Everbloom Peacock	Flying		Quest: For The Birds	Garrison (Inn, Level 3)	These tiny creatures seem to favor big, flashy nests, as an animal-loving druid.
Eye of Observation	Magic		Drop: Oronno the Observer	Talador	You'll always feel like something is watching you.
Firewing	Flying		Quest: Mastering the Menagerie	N/A	Don't line her cage with paper unless you want a fire.
Flat-tooth Calf	Beast		Pet Battle	Talador	Surprisingly quick when provoked, but easily calmed with a meal of Nagrand arrowbloom.
Forest Sprouting	Elemental		Vendor: Mimi Wizzlebub, Brakkee Sage Brakoss	Reputation: Steamwheedle Cartel "Preservation Society"	From seed to flower, a tiny terror is grown.
Frostshell Pincher	Aquatic		Pet Battle	Frostfire Ridge	The frostshell pinchers build up layers of ice to give them the appearance taken from larger predators.
Frostwolf Ghostpup	Undead		Profession: Archaeology	N/A	The little wolf told to stay. Watching, waiting, for whatever it was told to leave, she slipped away. Unburdened, now, forever free to play.
Frostwolf Pup	Beast		Vendor: Beska Redtusk	Faction: Frostwolf (Revered)	These pups are bundles of fur and teeth until they grow up, at which point they are really just teeth.
Fruit Hunter	Flying		Drop: Wiggling Egg	Frostfire Ridge	This anxious avian has a voracious appetite for fruit.
Ghastly Kid	Undead		Quest: Mastering the Menagerie	N/A	In the ultimate demonstration of stubbornness, this once-living narvie simply refused to die.
Golden Dawnfeather	Flying		Pet Battle	Spires of Arak	It's said the feathers glitter like the sun, and the rising sun shines upon them.
Hatespark the Tiny	Elemental		Drop: Ragnaros the Firelord	Zone: Molten Core (Anniversary Edition)	His hate is not diminished by size.
Hydraling	Aquatic		Drop: Vasha's Egg	Spires of Arak	The hydraling can be an expensive pet, as it is capable of eating from three food bowls at the same time.
Ironpine Hatchling	Beast		Pet Battle	Frostfire Ridge	Equipped with extremely sharp claws, these frigid hatchlings dig through thick ice to find ice and rock for shelter.
Ikky	Flying		Quest: Ikky's Egg	Spires of Arak	Kaliri hatchlings feast on grubs when they're young, but switch to carnivore to anything smaller than themselves.
Iron Starlette	Mechanical		Quest: Report to the King (A); Quest: Warning the Warchief (H)	Blasted Lands	This rusted scrapyard of mechanoids has been restructured to be used in the garden. Motes beware!
Ironclaw Scuttler	Aquatic		Pet Battle	Frostfire Ridge	With claws that can crush a steel breastplate, he is best to handle with care.
Junglebeak	Flying		Pet Battle	Gorgrond	The colorful plumage from these birds are highly sought after by hunters. It is rumored that wearing these feathers will bring you good luck.
Kaliri Hatchling	Flying		Vesharr	Spires of Arak	Hunted to near extinction for its feathers, this kaliri has developed keen senses.
Kelp Scuttler	Aquatic		Pet Battle	Draenor	They will cover themselves in seaweed and other plant foliage to get the upper claw on their prey.
Land Shark	Aquatic		Vendor: Nat Pagle	Garrison	After birth, newborn sharks stay close to their land mothers. Their early independence makes them dangerous, even while young.
Lanticore Spawnling	Dragonkin		Drop: The Lantkore	Upper Blackrock Spire	No one knows what deep part of Blackrock Descent the Lantkore's spawn kept it, but it probably benefited pretty awful.
Leatherhide Runt	Beast		Pet Battle	Nagrand	Many years ago, an ogre lord had his favorite pet rat as kickball. He was forever known as Onefoot afterwards.
Lifelike Mechanical Frostboar	Mechanical		Profession: Engineering	N/A	After many complaints that taming young boars was a painful experience, engineers came to the rescue with this creepily lifelike model.
Lil' Leftovers	Magic		Profession: Cooking	N/A	Cute enough to eat, but not recommended.
Lovebird Hatchling	Critter		World Event: Love is in the Air	Vendor: Lovely Merchant	Of course there are hatchlings, they're called Lovebirds aren't they?
Meadowstomper Calf	Beast		Quest: New Babies	Nagrand (Draenor)	The intelligence and caring nature of elekk calves make them a stalwart lifelong companion.
Mechanical Axebeak	Flying		Profession: Engineering	N/A	Squeeeeeaak!
Mechanical Scorpid	Mechanical		Profession: Engineering	N/A	Iron, iron, steel and fire. Willows, gears, plates, and wire.
Moonshell Crab	Aquatic		Pet Battle	Shadowmoon Valley	The moonshell crab reflects light so well that they can be used as a source of mirror. Just keep your face away from the claws!
Movable Skitterer	Beast		Pet Battle	Shadowmoon Valley	Camouflaged like moss, the skitterer waits for its prey and leap on their victims from above.
Mud Jumper	Aquatic		Pet Battle	Nagrand, Spires of Arak	Orcish children have a tradition of trying to sneak up on a mud jumper and whisper a secret they wish to come true.
Mudback Calf	Beast		Pet Battle	Gorgrond	Surprisingly quick when provoked, but easily calmed with a meal of Nagrand arrowbloom.
Mystical Spring Bouquet	Flying		World Event	Vendor: Noblegarden Merchant	Animated by magical means, and chlorophyll.
Nethersprawn, Nethersprawn, Nethersprawn	Magic		Drop: Netherspawn	Nagrand	This slime has a confusing lineage.
Nightshade Sprouting	Elemental		Profession: Herbalism	N/A	From seed to flower, a tiny terror is grown.
Ore Eater	Humanoid		Profession: Mining	N/A	They eat and eat and eat, until they grow large. Then they eat some more.
Puddle Terror	Aquatic		Quest: Mastering the Menagerie	N/A	Living so close to the water's surface, the puddle terror is not overly friend to all aquatic creatures, it is one.
Pygmy Cow	Critter		Drop	Garrison (Barn, Rank 3)	Originally bred to make milk more palatable for gnomes.
Royal Moth	Flying		Pet Battle	Shadowmoon Valley, Talador	Their deep purple wings are highly sought after by the magi believing that they can bring prolonged life when added to potions.
Royal Peacock	Flying		Achievement: Draenor Safari	Unique	A single peacock feather is often laid upon a grave to ward off evil spirits.
Sea Calf	Aquatic		Profession: Fishing	Garrison (Vendor: Nat Pagle)	The sea calf has a natural affinity for balancing things.
Sentinel's Companion	Flying		Quest: Little Sister Lost	N/A	The companion of a night-elf sentinel, rarely given out a pet.
Servant of Demidos	Magic		Drop: Demidos	Shadowmoon Valley	Demidos created a great many servants when he was building his fortress of void bats.
Sky Fry	Flying		Reputation Vendor	Reputation: Sha'tari Skyguard	Playing fetch with a voy is always fun. You don't even have to aim.
Sky-Bo	Mechanical		Drop: Blingtron 5000 Gift Package	N/A	The Sky-Bo was originally designed by the infamous Millie Watt as a toy for her pet Fry, but it was left slept in the box next to it.
Son of Sethe	Undead		Vendor: Ravenspeaker Khadgar, Corrie Geurkis	Reputation: Outcast Arakkoa	Godlike being now in travel size.
Soul of the Forge	Elemental		Profession: Blacksmithing		When forging enchanted steel, bits of magic seep into the metal. Over time, as the years, decades, even, the unbound energy slowly builds, creating a tiny elemental being of immense fortitude.
Stonegrinder	Mechanical		Drop	Talador	The master-crafted gear mechanisms and precise joints in this robot are clearly made with love.
Stormwing	Flying		Achievement: So. Many. Pets.	N/A	Half bird, half elemental, the stormwing represents a truly beautiful balance and a fierce temperament.
Stout Alemental	Elemental		World Event: Brewfest	Vendor: Belbi Quikswitch (Dun Morogh), Vendor: Blu'Flavidjun (Durotar)	The Pandaren Brewmasters accidentally brought a barrel of their last batch of brewfest with them to Brewfest.
Sun Sprouting	Elemental		Quest: Mastering the Menagerie	N/A	From seed to flower, a tiny terror is grown.
Sunfire Kaliri	Flying		Quest: Mastering the Menagerie	N/A	Legend says the Sunfire Kaliri flies into the sun itself when it is ready to die.
Swamplighter Firefly	Flying		Pet Battle	Spires of Arak	Scholars have debated at length about how fireflies glow, but the leading hypothesis is "magic."
Syd the Squid	Magic		Drop: [Greater Darkmoon Pet Supplies]	Darkmoon Island	This tiny squid seems to enjoy wearing pants, but where in the world would you find some that fit?
Tenclaw Hatchling	Flying		Drop: Tenclaw Nest	Talador	The tenclaw is a potent hunter of the small and furry.
Trunks	Magic		Achievement	An Awfully Big Adventure (Pet Battle)	A magical friend created during a grand pants adventure and spirit.

Umbrafen Spore	Flying		Drop: Strange Spore	Shadowmoon Valley	The deep blue Umbrafen would later become home to a tribe of Brokes.
Waterfly	Flying		Pet Battle	Shadowmoon Valley, Talador	The waterfly uses the surface of the water to reflect the light from their abdomen to attract mates.
Weebomination	Undead		Quest: Mastering the Menagerie	N/A	Made from bits and pieces of vanquished battle pets, dark magic, and just a pinch of love.
Widget the Departed	Undead		World Event: Hallow's End	Vendor: Chub (Tirisfal Glades), Vendor: Dorothy (Stormwind)	Not even death would stop this kitten's insatiable curiosity.
Wood Wasp	Flying		Pet Battle	Gorgrond	The wood wasps make their nests in dead or hollowed out trees, and they are quick to attack anything that threatens their home.
Zangar Crawler	Aquatic		Pet Battle	Shadowmoon Valley	They feed off of the nutrient-rich fungal spores that encroach upon them, the distinct coloring of their shells.
Zomstrock	Undead		Drop: Reanimated Darktide Boneshell, Darktide Hulk	Shadowmoon Valley	Zomstrock is evil incarnate, a twisted mockery of someone maddened by isolation, a creation that could not be undone.

PROFESSIONS
Introduction

Each character can learn two major Professions and as many secondary Professions as are available in the game. These modes of character progression are optional; you can avoid them entirely if you want. However, there are advantages to having these skills. Many Professions let you craft items for yourself and others. Many of these items are directly useful to your character, like armor, weapons, potions, and flasks. Other items, like mounts, pets, and toys, aren't necessarily there to improve your character's performance, but they are all kinds of fun!

To learn a Profession while leveling on Azeroth, you must follow a process:

1. Learn the Apprentice level from a Profession Trainer.

2. Learn specific recipes from the trainer.

3. Acquire any necessary tools or ingredients in the recipes.

4. Create items from the recipes; this activity also increases your skill level in your chosen Profession.

5. Return to #2. Repeat.

6. Every 75 points, you need to find a trainer so your character can advance to a new grade of that Profession. Not all trainers teach every recipe, so you may need to search out various factions and vendors in the world as you reach higher levels.

LEVEL 90 BOOST PROFESSIONS

If you are using the level 90 boost that came with your purchase of Warlords of Draenor, Professions are going to work a little differently. Your boost can be used to create a brand-new character, or to boost an existing character. What you choose will influence how you train and level your Professions.

If you boost an existing character of level 60 or higher, your Primary Professions and your First Aid will be automatically leveled to rank 600. Secondary Professions will not be affected. If you don't already have Primary Professions trained, two class-appropriate Professions will be chosen for you.

Character Armor Class	Professions Granted
Cloth	Enchanting, Tailoring
Leather/Mail	Leatherworking, Skinning
Plate	Blacksmithing, Mining

CHANGING PROFESSIONS

The game limits you to two Primary Professions, but you aren't locked into the first two you select. You can drop a Profession and learn a new one. The bad news is that you lose everything from your old Profession, so this is useful only if you find that you don't like the way a Profession progresses. When that happens, don't lament. Drop the Profession you dislike and try something new; it's better than having a slot taken up by something that you never plan on using again!

To drop a Profession, open the Spellbook (with "p") and click on the Professions tab. Look for small red symbols that look like Do Not Enter signs. These are the unlearn buttons for each Profession. Don't click on them unless you are absolutely sure that you know what you're doing. You lose everything as soon as you say "Unlearn" to the final query.

If you choose to boost a brand-new character from 1 to 90, none of your Professions will be leveled for you. However, there are new catch-up mechanics in place to increase your Profession skill as you level. You won't need to go back to Azeroth to train your Professions from 1-600; you can simply do so while you're questing and playing through Draenor's content.

You can choose either of the two methods to level your Professions. If you're taking your time and leveling a brand-new character from level 1, you should probably choose your Professions early, and level them as you level. Your Professions will usually provide useful items you can use as you are leveling. If you simply want to head to Draenor as quickly as possible, you can forgo Professions altogether, until you reach Draenor. Make sure you have at least trained in two Primary Professions before you head through the Dark Portal—you don't need to worry about raising your skill level in those Professions above level 1, however.

INCREASING YOUR SKILL AS YOU LEVEL

If you are leveling your Professions as a brand-new, non-boosted character, the process can be a little involved. The Apprentice level of a Profession covers your skill from 1 to 75. Using your Profession advances it until it hits each cap (every 75 points). When you are crafting materials to level your Profession skill, the color of the activity is your guide to its difficulty.

Green recipes are easy, yellow are moderate, and orange are harder. The harder the recipe, the more likely it is to boost your level. Some recipes will have a number next to them, in addition to a color. The number indicates how many skill points you will gain upon each successful crafting of the item.

If you need to raise your level, it's important to decide what you make. Look for pieces that require the least amount of material components but are almost certain to give you a point, or items that will give you multiple skill points per item crafted. That way, you get the most out of your materials.

Red	Your character's profession skill isn't high enough to craft an item.
Orange	Success increases your skill points every single time you complete this activity.
Yellow	There is a high chance of increasing your skill points.
Green	This activity is too easy; you aren't likely to gain points from completing it.
Grey	There isn't a chance of gaining any skill points whether you complete this activity or not.

SPACE SAVING

Almost every reagent for crafting professions now stacks to 200, which will dramatically improve your inventory space. To hold all your materials, your bank now has a reagents tab that is specifically for materials used for profession crafting. It costs 100g to unlock this tab. In addition, you no longer need to have your crafting reagents in your bag to craft items—crafting will now automatically use any items you have in your bank as well as items carried in your bags.

Once you reach 75, you cannot increase your points until you train again as a Journeyman. Each proficiency level also has a character level requirement. As your points increase, you can train in more recipes. Returning to your Profession trainer tells you when you can get more recipes or when you can train a higher proficiency. There are also many recipes hidden throughout the world, as a reward from certain quests, or as random drops. Check the Auction House for any new finds!

You might notice that the skill points for professional tiers don't add up evenly. Apprentices go from 1-75, but Journeyman can start as low as 50. This is because you can train a new tier in a Profession a bit early. That's a good idea because you don't want to hit the cap and waste any skill points. Train your skills early as long as you have the money; there are no downsides in completing your training ahead of schedule.

COMPLEMENTARY PROFESSIONS

Some Professions work extremely well when paired with another, complementary profession:

Profession	Good Additional Professions To Take
Alchemy	Herbalism, Fishing
Blacksmithing	Mining
Enchanting	Tailoring
Engineering	Mining
Herbalism	Alchemy or Inscription
Inscription	Herbalism
Jewelcrafting	Mining
Leatherworking	Skinning
Mining	Blacksmithing, Engineering, or Jewelcrafting
Skinning	Leatherworking
Tailoring	Any gathering or Enchanting

LEVELING YOUR PROFESSIONS IN DRAENOR

If you are leveling your Professions from skill level 1 on Draenor, you'll be going through a slightly different process. All Professions have special items that will unlock every level of skill all the way from 1-700, eliminating skill caps, and the need to visit a trainer while you are working on your Professions. You can simply gather, craft, and create, without worrying about having to stop what you're doing and finding a trainer to continue gaining skill points.

These special drop items are Rare quality, blue items, but they aren't difficult to obtain. Gathering Professions will simply drop off of random mobs, usually within the first starting zone of Draenor. Primary crafting Professions are learned via a dropped quest item. You'll be sent back to your Garrison, where you will begin a short series of quests. After completing the quests, you'll receive an item that will unlock the entirety of that Profession for you.

In addition, you'll receive a Level 1 blueprint for a small building tied to your existing Profession. Alchemists will receive the Alchemy Lab, Blacksmithing will receive the Forge, and so on. While you aren't required to build these buildings in your Garrison, doing so will help speed up your leveling process, and also eventually unlock the highest tier of Profession recipes available.

Gathering Professions have also been changed to make leveling a smoother process. You may now pick any herb, skin any creature, or mine any type of ore regardless of your skill level. However, your skill level now determines how much yield you get from what you are picking, mining, or skinning. If your Profession level is low, you may only get small pieces of ore, herbs, or skins. If you have enough pieces, you can combine them into one ore, herb, or skin. Once you have sufficiently increased your Profession skill, you'll begin to successfully obtain whole ores, herbs, or skins.

ALCHEMY

Alchemy is one of the easier crafting professions to pick up and learn. If you want to be self-sufficient, pair Alchemy with Herbalism so that you can gather your own materials. The main components to Alchemy are herbs and vials. Other items are required for specific creations, but for the most part it's herbs and vials.

Alchemists also learn how to transmute certain items into other items. This ability often involves changing element-based items (such as Primals and Eternals) but also covers meta gems and certain ores. A Philosopher's Stone (a trinket created through Alchemy) is required for transmuting items. Transmuting an item sometimes leads to the discovery of a new recipe.

Proficiency Level Name	Character Level Minimum	Skill LevelMinimum	Skill Level Maximum
Apprentice	5	0	75
Journeyman	10	50	150
Expert	20	125	225
Artisan	35	200	300
Master	50	275	375
Grand Master	65	350	450
Illustrious Grand Master	75	425	525
Zen Master	80	500	600
Draenor Master	90	1	700

PRACTICING ALCHEMY

Alchemists don't need to be in a special place or to have a specific item in their inventory to do most of their work; they just need their herbs and purchasable vials. Good Alchemists carry spare vials around if they plan on making any new potions out in the field. More extensive creations (like elixirs and flasks) are better to do in town, where you can be certain to have what you need.

ALCHEMY SPECIALTIES

When you reach level 68 and have an Alchemy skill of at least 325, you are given the opportunity to complete a quest that allows you to select an Alchemy specialization. Your choices are Potion Mastery, Elixir Mastery, and Transmutation Mastery.

Potion Mastery and Elixir Mastery work the same way. When you create a potion or an elixir (depending on your specialty), there is a chance you will create additional potions or elixirs of the same type with the same number of reagents. Transmutation Mastery does the same for materials that are created by any recipe tagged as a Transmute.

When you transmute any item, there is a chance you will create an additional item at no additional reagent cost. If you wish to change your specialization at any time, speak with the NPC who granted you the ability, then speak with one of the other specialists. Keep in mind that there is a cost associated with dropping a specialization.

GOBLIN BONUS

Goblins have a racial ability - Better Living Through Chemistry - which increases their Alchemy skill by 15.

MAKING MONEY AS AN ALCHEMIST

Healing and mana potions are constant points of sales because people go through them at a considerable pace. Later on, you start to see an expanding market for elixirs and their longer-term buffs. In the late game, flasks become important as well. These products are very expensive, but their effects are the strongest and they last through death (making them essential tools for raiders focusing on new content or very difficult dungeon runs).

DRAENOR ALCHEMY

Alchemy in Draenor works much differently than it does on Azeroth. Your primary ingredient for creating any flasks or potions is Alchemical Catalyst. This item can be created through a daily cooldown, but it can also be created via Work Orders processed at the Alchemy Lab. Thus, if you have both the Alchemy Lab, and Alchemy trained as a Profession, you'll be able to craft recipes much faster—because you'll be generating Alchemical Catalyst much more quickly.

Recipes learned in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Alchemy quickly while on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find various Alchemy items that can be combined and turned in to your Garrison in exchange for Garrison Resources. These items will also grant you skill points when they are turned in.

Potion creation has been greatly simplified. All potions require Crescent Oil, created from a fish commonly found all over Draenor, as well as 1-3 various other Draenor resources, including ore, meat, and fish.

There are now two levels of flasks you can create. For basic flasks, you will need Alchemical Catalyst, as well as Draenor herbs. To create Greater flasks, you will need more Alchemical Catalyst, 5 of the basic level flasks, and a Sorcerous element. The Sorcerous elements, Fire, Water, Earth and Air, are magical byproducts of various professions. When you craft an item, you have a chance of also creating a Sorcerous element. Different professions create different elements.

BLACKSMITHING

Blacksmithing is the shaping of bars, gems, stones and trade goods into armor and melee weapons. At low levels, Blacksmiths also turn stones uncovered by miners into temporary weapon enhancements. Many unique weapons and armor pieces can be created only by player Blacksmiths for their own use. To be a fully self-sufficient Blacksmith, you may want to take Mining as a second Profession.

Proficiency Level Name	Character Level Minimum	Skill Level Minimum	Skill Level Maximum
Apprentice	5	0	75
Journeyman	10	50	150
Expert	20	125	225
Artisan	35	200	300
Master	50	275	375
Grand Master	65	350	450
Illustrious Grand Master	75	425	525
Zen Master	80	500	600
Draenor Master	90	1	700

PRACTICING BLACKSMITHING

Most Blacksmithing items require a Blacksmithing Hammer to be in your inventory. In addition, work must be completed near an anvil. Anvils are found in any town or city, most often near the Blacksmithing trainers. Some recipes call for items available only from a trade vendor as well, so don't head for the anvil until you're sure you have everything you need for your creation.

MAKING MONEY AS A BLACKSMITH

Blacksmithing is a brutal profession on your in-game gold. It's hard to find a market for your created items as most of these items are only on par with green quest rewards. Only specific Blacksmithing gear at high levels warrants the higher investment in time and materials.

To cut down on the price, take Mining and gather your own ore. Even here you should be careful. Someone joining a guild is likely to have access to their own Blacksmith. Only take this Profession if you know what you're getting into.

DRAENOR BLACKSMITHING

Blacksmithing in Draenor works much differently than it does on Azeroth. Your primary ingredients for creating any armor or weapons are Truesteel Ingots. These items can be created through a daily cooldown, but it can also be created via Work Orders processed at the Forge. Thus, if you have both The Forge, and Blacksmithing trained as a Profession, you'll be able to craft recipes much faster--because you'll be generating Trueforge Ingots much more quickly.

Recipes learned in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Blacksmithing quickly while on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find various broken armor pieces and rare or unusual pieces of armor that can be combined with Draenor ore and turned in to your Garrison, in exchange for Garrison Resources. These items will also grant you skill points when they are turned in.

Blacksmiths are able to not only create powerful crafted items, but later upgrade the item level of those crafted items to be even more powerful. To create the reagent needed to upgrade an item, Blacksmiths will need even more Truesteel Ingots, as well as a couple of other items. Sorcerous elements, Fire, Water, Earth, and Air, are magical byproducts of various professions. When you craft an item, you have a chance of also creating a Sorcerous element. Different professions create different elements. In addition to Sorcerous elements, you will also need Savage Blood. This item can be obtained through the Barn in your Garrison, or on the Auction House.

ENCHANTING

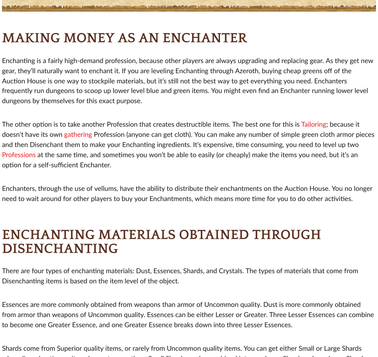

Enchanting recipes add various buffs to your weapons and armor, such as improved statistics for your character or procs with random effects to your weapons. They also create low-level wands, and oils (which are short-term buffs to weapons).

Enchanters learn a second ability, known as Disenchanting, which they use to create their own materials. That sounds like a great deal, right? You get to make the materials that you need to advance your craft. There's a catch. You can't gather Enchanting materials without destroying magical items. Green, blue, and purple items each have their own types of Enchanting reagents stored inside them. Beyond that, you need to destroy higher level equipment of these quality levels to complete higher level enchantments.

PRACTICING ENCHANTING

Clicking the Enchanting icon opens a menu of all the magic recipes you know. Clicking the Disenchant icon enables you to extract magical elements from targeted items by destroying them forever. To enchant any item, you must have the proper Enchanting Rod in your inventory.

Up until skill level 60 or so, you can get points from destroying magical items. That trails off fairly soon, and then you need to use Enchanting to get skill points. Some Enchanting suppliers sell components necessary for lowest level enchanting recipes. As long as you have the materials, you can enchant the same item multiple times, but an item can only retain one Enchantment at a given time (you "overwrite" the Enchantment). There are also vellums created via Inscription which can hold enchants for later use.

BLOOD ELF BONUS

Blood Elves have a racial ability—Arcane Affinity—which increases their Enchanting skill by 10.

MAKING MONEY AS AN ENCHANTER

Enchanting is a fairly high-demand profession, because other players are always upgrading and replacing gear. As they get new gear, they'll naturally want to enchant it. If you are leveling Enchanting through Azeroth, buying cheap greens off of the Auction House is one way to stockpile materials, but it's still not the best way to get everything you need. Enchanters frequently run dungeons to scoop up lower level blue and green items. You might even find an Enchanter running lower level dungeons by themselves for this exact purpose.

The other option is to take another Profession that creates destructible items. The best one for this is Tailoring; because it doesn't have its own gathering Profession (anyone can get cloth). You can make any number of simple green cloth armor pieces and then Disenchant them to make your Enchanting ingredients. It's expensive, time consuming, you need to level up two Professions at the same time, and sometimes you won't be able to easily (or cheaply) make the items you need, but it's an option for a self-sufficient Enchanter.

Enchanters, through the use of vellums, have the ability to distribute their enchantments on the Auction House. You no longer need to wait around for other players to buy your Enchantments, which means more time for you to do other activities.

ENCHANTING MATERIALS OBTAINED THROUGH DISENCHANTING

There are four types of enchanting materials: Dust, Essences, Shards, and Crystals. The types of materials that come from Disenchanting items is based on the item level of the object.

Essences are more commonly obtained from weapons than armor of Uncommon quality. Dust is more commonly obtained from armor than weapons of Uncommon quality. Essences can be either Lesser or Greater. Three Lesser Essences can combine to become one Greater Essence, and one Greater Essence breaks down into three Lesser Essences.

Shards come from Superior quality items, or rarely from Uncommon quality items. You can get either Small or Large Shards when disenchanting an item. In most cases, three Small Shards can be combined into one Large Shard, and one Large Shard can be broken down into three Small Shards.

Crystals come from Epic quality items, and rarely from Superior quality items. At higher skill levels, you can learn how to convert these Crystals into other types of Enchanting materials.

DRAENOR ENCHANTING

Enchanting in Draenor works much, much differently than it does on Azeroth. You still need to disenchant items for materials, but these materials can also be generated via Work Orders processed at the Enchanter's Study. Thus, if you have both the Enchanter's Study, and Enchanting trained as a Profession, you'll be able to craft recipes much faster—because you'll be generating Enchanting materials much more quickly.

Recipes learned in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Enchanting quickly while on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find various broken Common quality items that can be combined with Enchanting reagents and turned in to your Garrison. Occasionally, you may also find Uncommon or Rare magical items that need no repair, and those can be turned in at your Garrison as well. In exchange for these items, you'll get both Garrison Resources and Enchanting skill points.

Enchants have changed significantly in Warlords of Draenor. Enchanters may now enchant weapons, necklaces, cloaks, and rings, but Draenor armor pieces may no longer be enchanted.

However, Enchanters have a very unique item they can now craft called an Illusion Scroll. These scrolls will change your weapon's appearance by giving it a distinctive glow. Over the years, Warcraft has introduced tons of unique Enchants that were beautiful in appearance, but no longer really practical once new Enchants with better stats were introduced. With the Illusion Scrolls, your weapon can take the appearance of any of these classic Enchants—from classic World of Warcraft all the way up to Mists of Pandaria. And if you don't like the glowing appearance of enchanted weapons, there's even an Illusion Scroll specifically designed to hide weapon glow effects so you no longer see them!

ENGINEERING

Engineering creates a variety of items such as goggles, explosives, ranged weapon scopes, bombs, and mechanical animals. Creating different items with Engineering requires a handful of tools, most of which are created by the Engineer. Many (but not all) of the items created by Engineers require the Engineering skill to use. One of the fun things about being an Engineer is that you never know when some of your creations will misfire, often leading to unexpected results.

Mining is a perfect way to make an Engineer self-sufficient. Pretty much everything an Engineer needs is found while you're out hunting for metal veins.

PRACTICING ENGINEERING

Clicking the Engineering icon opens a menu of all the schematics you know. Engineers have a few tools that are needed to make various items, so you might want to carry them around with you if you prefer crafting on the fly (or just get a Gnomish Army Knife!). Otherwise, it's better to work when you're back in town, near a Bank.

GNOME BONUS

Gnomes have a racial ability—Engineering Specialization—which increases their Engineering skill by 15.

ENGINEERING SPECIALTIES

When you reach an Engineering skill of 200, you are given a choice to specialize in Gnomish Engineering or Goblin Engineering. For the most part, items created by one specialization are usable by any Engineer with a high enough skill level. The main difference is that Goblin Engineers are able to teleport to Everlook (in Wintersprings) and Area 52 (in Netherstorm), while Gnomes can travel instantly to Gadgetzan (in Tanaris) or Toshley's Station (in Blade's Edge Mountains).

You can change your specialization if you like. There is a fee involved with dropping your specialization, so you may not want to do this too often.

MAKING MONEY AS AN ENGINEER

Engineering is not the best way to go when you're trying to make gold off your Profession. Because many items created with Engineering require Engineering to use them, your market is reduced. However, some of an Engineer's products are viable for selling. Selling scopes and crafted Battle Pets is a reasonable source of income, but these items can't really be expected to sell consistently.

DRAENOR ENGINEERING

Engineering in Draenor is a slightly different process than what you find on Azeroth. Your primary ingredients for creating various devices and gadgets are Gearspring Parts. These can be created by the Engineer, but they are also created via Work Orders processed at the Engineering Works. Thus, if you have both the Engineering Works, and Engineering trained as a Profession, you'll be able to craft your items far more quickly than with just Engineering alone.

Recipes learned in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Blacksmithing quickly while on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find various broken robots, scopes, and explosives that can be combined with Draenor ore and turned in to your Garrison, as well as Uncommon or Rare quality versions that don't actually need repairs. Upon turning them in, you will receive Garrison Resources, as well as Engineering skill points.

Engineering is a much more personalized profession than anything else. Most of the items you create are items that you yourself will be able to use. Engineers on Draenor can create four different types of Epic goggles for themselves, and these goggles can be upgraded up to two times, making them a really desirable item. In addition, Engineers can attach Tinkers to their equipment. These items act sort of like Enchants, but provide a variety of effects that may not necessarily increase your combat performance, but will definitely amp up the fun factor!

INSCRIPTION

In addition to staffs and off-hand items, Scribes create glyphs, scrolls, cards, and other paper and book items with paper purchased from Trade vendors, and inks. Scribes create inks by learning Milling, which turns herbs into pigments, and other Inscription abilities turn the pigments into ink. While Inscription creates many items, it's best known for making Glyphs. Glyphs are class-specific recipes that enhance characters' abilities. There are two types of glyphs: Minor and Major.

Inscription is an expensive Profession, unless you take Herbalism as well. Scribes need a Virtuoso Inking Set in their inventory to create many of their goods. The set isn't expensive, and it never wears out. Keep one in your inventory and your character will be able to Inscribe anywhere in the world.

Illustrious Grand Master	75	425	525
Zen Master	80	500	600
Draenor Master	90	1	700

PRACTICING INSCRIPTION

Clicking the Inscription icon opens a menu of all the Inscription patterns you know. Milling turns five similar herbs into one of two types of pigments (most herbs have a common pigment result and an uncommon pigment result). You must have five of the same herb in order to Mill them for pigments. The herbs are used up, but you get the pigments necessary to create inks. Creating ink is a good way to skill up Inscription each time you learn a new type of ink.

MAKING MONEY AS A SCRIBE

The most common items a Scribe will sell are Glyphs. Although Warlords of Draenor automatically provides leveling players with a few basic Glyphs, there are many, many more that they can collect and learn. And although a Glyph is retained once it is learned, new players are leveling at the time, which means there's usually a fairly steady demand for these items. In addition to Glyphs, Scribes can also craft Darkmoon Cards, which can be combined into Darkmoon Decks and turned in at the Darkmoon Fairy for amazing trinkets. These Decks are usually in fairly high demand as well. And in Warlords of Draenor, Scribes will also be able to craft Cards of Omens. These Cards, when used, will be flipped over to reveal the fortune on the back, as well as a random amount that they will vendor for. Some Cards of Omens can vendor for up to 6,000 gold—but it's a gamble to see which one you'll get!

DRAENOR INSCRIPTION

Inscription on Draenor works in a slightly different way than on Azeroth. All herbs on Draenor mill into just one pigment: Cerulean Pigment. But your primary ingredients for creating glyphs and other items are War Paints. These items can be created through a daily cooldown, but they can also be purchased at the Work Orders accessed at the Scribe's Quarters. Thus, if you have both the Scribe's Quarters in your Garrison, and Inscription trained as a Profession, you'll be able to craft glyphs, cards, and other items much more quickly.

Recipes learned in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Inscription quickly while you're on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find lettered bits of paper: paintings, scrolls, and cards that can be combined with Draenor herbs or herbs and turned in to your Garrison. In exchange for Garrison Resources. There are also Uncommon and Rare versions of these items that don't need repair; you can just take them to your Garrison to turn them in. When you do so, these items will also grant you skill points.

Glyph recipes can be learned by using the spell Research: Warbinder's Ink. This spell uses two War Paints and some parchment, and will discover a glyph recipe that uses Warbinder's Ink. The glyph recipes are randomly learned, but once you have learned every Draenor glyph recipe, the spell will then grant you a glyph that uses any known ink. This means you don't need to farm for rare glyph recipes—you'll learn them all eventually, with enough research!

CRAFTING
Jewelcrafting

JEWELCRAFTING

Initially, Jewelcrafters create the wire and settings necessary to craft low level rings and necklaces, then start making rings, necklaces, and other random items. A Jeweler's Kit is required, but it is available at a trivial cost from a Trade vendor. At higher skill levels, Jewelcrafters learn how to cut gems that provide statistical bonuses to socketed equipment. Even at higher skill levels, Jewelcrafters continue to create rings and necklaces for anyone to use.

Jewelcrafting can be an expensive Profession to skill up, so strongly consider Mining as a second Profession, to gather your own ore. Jewelcrafters learn a second ability, called Prospecting, which allows them to break down raw ore and extract different minerals and gems that are otherwise available only through mining.

Proficiency Level Name	Character Level Minimum	Skill Level Minimum	Skill Level Maximum
Apprentice	5	0	75
Journeyman	10	50	150
Expert	20	125	225
Artisan	35	200	300
Master	50	275	375
Grand Master	65	350	450
Illustrious Grand Master	75	425	525
Zen Master	80	500	600
Draenor Master	90	1	700

PRACTICING JEWELCRAFTING

Clicking Prospecting enables you to search five ore of the same type to find gems. Some types of ore of Uncommmon quality, such as Silver, cannot be Prospected. The ore is destroyed in the process, but you gain your shiny jewelcrafting ingredients.

For high-level Jewelcrafting, you need a base set of gems to work with. These are then turned into finished cut gems that provide bonuses when slotted into equipment. Note that you don't gain points in Jewelcrafting for slotting equipment, only for making the gems.

DRAENEI BONUS

Draenei have a racial ability, Gemcutting, which increases their Jewelcrafting skill by 10.

MAKING MONEY AS A JEWELCRAFTER

Making money with Jewelcrafting primarily centers on creating various stat-enhancing gems for players to put in socketed armor and weapons. More importantly, Jewelcrafters can create both rings and necklaces that can be upgraded to be quite powerful. These items should be in fairly high demand from players. There are also a number of fun vanity items that can be sold on the Auction House for a profit as well.

DRAENOR JEWELCRAFTING

Jewelcrafting in Draenor is vastly different than how the Profession works on Azeroth. Rather than creating a mountain of different colored gems to cut, all Draenor gems only use one primary ingredient: Taladite Crystals. These crystals can be created through a daily cooldown, but they are also created via Work Orders processed at the Gem Boutique. Thus, if you have both the Gem Boutique and Jewelcrafting trained as a Profession, you'll be able to generate materials much more quickly.

Recipes learned in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Jewelcrafting quickly while on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find various broken statues, shards, and pieces of jewelry that can be combined with Draenor ore and turned in to your Garrison, in exchange for Garrison Resources. There are also Uncommon and Rare versions of these items that do not need to be repaired; you can just deliver them to your Garrison. These items will also grant you skill points when they are turned in.

Taladite Crystal can be combined with Draenor herbs to create one of six stat-modifying, Uncommon quality gems. Greater amounts of Taladite Crystal can be used in conjunction with both Draenor herbs and Sorcerous elements to craft Rare quality gems that give a higher stat modifier. Sorcerous elements, Fire, Water, Earth, and Air, are magical byproducts of various professions. When you craft an item, you have a chance of also creating a Sorcerous element. In addition to gems, Jewelcrafters can create powerful rings and necklaces for other players. The Epic quality versions of these items can be upgraded up to two times by a Jewelcrafter.

CRAFTING
Leatherworking

LEATHERWORKING

Leatherworking uses leather and hides gathered from slain beasts to create different pieces of armor, as well as fun items that players can use. In Warlords of Draenor, there's even a mount that can be crafted via Leatherworking! There are no special tools required for Leatherworking, save for the Salt Shaker needed to cure certain lower level hides. Some Leatherworking patterns require items purchased from trade vendors.

PRACTICING LEATHERWORKING

The mechanics behind Leatherworking are fairly simple. This Profession is typically used in conjunction with Skinning. Hides and leather that are skinned from various creatures around Azeroth are combined to create various pieces of armor, or items that can enhance the performance of lower-level players.

DRAENOR LEATHERWORKING

Leatherworking in Draenor is a vastly different experience than on Azeroth. One of your primary ingredients for creating any armor or items is Burnished Leather. This leather can be created through a daily cooldown, but it can also be created via Work Orders processed at the Tannery. Thus, if you have both the Tannery, and Leatherworking trained as a Profession, you'll be able to craft useful upgrades much more quickly.

Recipes learned in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Blacksmithing quickly while on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find various tattered and torn leather items that can be combined with Draenor hides and turned in to your Garrison, in exchange for Garrison Resources. There are also Uncommon and Rare versions of these items that need no repair; you can simply return them to your Garrison. These items will also grant you skill points when they are turned in.

MAKING MONEY AS A LEATHERWORKER

Leatherworkers don't have extensive sales, but they also don't need to invest as heavily in their Profession. Anyone with Leatherworking and Skinning should have an easy time, especially due to the nature of Skinning. It's easy to find creatures that are skinnable, so reagents are somewhat cheap and plentiful. Leatherworkers can craft both Mail and Leather armor to sell, as well as cloaks that any class can wear. The Epic quality versions of these items can be upgraded up to two times, which makes them far more valuable to players looking for gear upgrades. Typically speaking, Leatherworkers shouldn't really expect to make a massive amount of income from their chosen Profession.

TAILORING

Tailoring creates cloth armor, shirts, bags, and other items out of different types of cloth or fur. Cloth is a plentiful, readily available resource that drops from humanoid and many undead enemies. In addition to cloth, Tailors also use silks dropped by spiders, and fur dropped by various beasts. Tailors can also learn how to improve various types of cloth. In Warlords of Draenor, Tailors can even craft their own mount—a flying carpet.

PRACTICING TAILORING

Tailoring is a fairly straightforward process; all you need is cloth, and sometimes thread as well. Since cloth, silk and fur are so easily obtained, this particular Profession doesn't really get difficult until later levels, when daily cooldowns come into play. Certain types of special cloth, used to create more powerful items, can only be crafted once per day.

MAKING MONEY WITH TAILORING

Bags are the most widespread product from this Profession. Tailors have a long-term market for these, especially once they start getting into bags from the later game. In addition, Tailors can create a variety of shirts and other specialized clothing for fun and role-playing purposes. The different kinds of armor that tailors can create are sometimes in demand as well, but more often than not bags will be your main source of income. Players always need more space for collecting!

DRAENOR TAILORING

Tailoring in Draenor has changed significantly from Tailoring in Azeroth. You'll be able to collect Sumptuous Fur from any beast on Draenor, but you'll need to combine it into Hexweave Cloth to make most items. Hexweave Cloth is created through a daily cooldown, but it can also be created via Work Orders processed at the Tailoring Emporium. Thus, if you have both the Tailoring Emporium, and Tailoring trained as a Profession, you'll be able to craft recipes much faster—because you'll be generating Hexcloth in much larger amounts.

Recipes in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, there are also other methods of leveling Tailoring quickly while on Draenor. As you quest and complete content, you may find various torn items that can be combined with Sumptuous Fur and turned in to your Garrison, in exchange for Garrison Resources. There are also Uncommon and Rare quality versions of these items that do not need repair; they can simply be taken to your Garrison. All of these items will also grant you skill points when they are turned in.

Tailors can create Epic quality armor and capes that can be upgraded up to two times. Armor and cloaks don't just take Hexweave Cloth to craft, they also require various Draenor herbs, hides, ore, and even flasks created by Alchemists. In addition to armor and bags, Tailors can also craft the Elekk Plushie, a unique—and cuddly—new Battle Pet.

GATHERING

HERBALISM

Herbalism is the harvesting of herbs from plant nodes, and from some enemies (usually Elemental enemies that look like walking vegetation) which have some affinity with nature. These herbs are primarily used by Alchemists and Scribes.

When you learn Herbalism, you gain the Find Herbs skill. When this skill is active, herb nodes appear on your minimap. Watch for these icons while hunting and questing and you should see your skill increase rapidly.

When you find a node, the herb has a glowing outline and your mouse cursor changes into a flower blossom. To gather, right-click on the herb in question. The same thing applies when you find harvestable enemies. When you mouse over a corpse, your mouse cursor changes to a flower blossom if you can harvest from it.

Illustrious Grand Master	75	425	525
Zen Master	80	500	600
Draenor Master	90	1	700

TAUREN BONUS

Tauren have a racial ability, Cultivation, which increases their Herbalism skill by 15 and allows them to harvest herbs faster than other races.

MAKING MONEY WITH HERBALISM

Herbalism is a good Profession for making money. People buy herbs at lucrative prices, even from the beginning levels forward. There is always a market for most of these herbs, and a new player stands to make plenty of cash if they sell low-level herbs in the Auction House.

Draenor Herbs: Talador Orchid, Nagrand Arrowbloom, Starflower, Gorgrond Flytrap, Fireweed, Frostweed, Chameleon Lotus, Draenic Seeds.

DRAENOR HERBALISM

Herbalism works differently in Warlords of Draenor. There are still plenty of herbs to be found and picked, but you no longer need to be a particular skill level to pick them—you can begin picking any herb at skill level 1! However, your skill level now determines how proficient you are at getting useful materials from the plant. At lower levels, you'll only pick petals. These petals can then be combined to create an herb.

Herb nodes on Draenor drop both herbs and Draenic Seeds. Draenic Seeds can be used to create Work Orders at your Garrison's Herb Garden. In return for your seeds, you'll get a randomly determined, but hefty amount of a variety of Draenor herbs. You can also turn in Draenic Seeds for special cosmetic gear, as well as a special Battle Pet.

Beware when picking herbs on Draenor, however—occasionally, the flowers will fight back! Herbs will randomly spawn an occasional Disturbed Podling who is none too happy about your herb picking. Defeating the Podling will grant you even more herbs for your troubles.

GATHERING

MINING

With Mining, you extract ore, gems, and (in lower level zones) stones from raw metal veins, deposits, and from some enemies (usually rocky Elemental creatures). These materials are used primarily in Jewelcrafting, Blacksmithing, and Engineering. A Mining Pick (or any item that acts as a Mining Pick) is required to mine. You do not need to equip the Mining Pick; just keep it in your Backpack. Miners learn a second ability, Smelting, which turns the ore into metal bars.

Mining also imparts the ability to Find Minerals. When it is active, mineral nodes appear on your minimap. When you find a node, it has a glowing outline and the cursor changes into a pick axe. To mine, right-click on the node. The same thing applies when you find harvestable enemies. When you mouse over a corpse, your mouse cursor changes to a pick axe if you can harvest from it.

Another way to increase your Mining skill level is to Smelt ore. To Smelt, you need access to a forge and ore. Click on the Smelting icon to see what you can currently Smelt. Gaining skill ups from Smelting varies wildly with each new ore you learn to Smelt. Any time you work with a new metal, Smelt as much of it as you can as soon as you can. The skill ups from Smelting dry up much faster than the skill ups you get from mining.

Proficiency Level Name	Character Level Minimum	Skill Level Minimum	Skill Level Maximum

Illustrious Grand Master	75	425	525
Zen Master	80	500	600
Draenor Master	90	1	700

MAKING MONEY WITH MINING

Mining can be incredibly profitable. With a multitude of different Professions all requiring ore, you have a large potential market. Try selling your low-level metal in both bar and ore form as some people want the refined bars, while others want the raw ore.

Draenor Ore: True Iron Ore, Blackrock Ore, Draenic Stone.

DRAENOR MINING

Mining has changed significantly with Warlords of Draenor. You no longer need to be a particular skill level to mine a particular kind of ore. Your skill level now determines how proficient you are at mining the item instead. If your Profession level is fairly low, you'll gather fragments, or nuggets of ore. These can be combined to create a full piece of ore. Once you have sufficiently leveled your skill, you'll no longer mine fragments.

In addition to ore, mining nodes on Draenor will also give you Draenic Stone. This stone can be used to create Work Orders with your Garrison's Mine. In exchange for the stone, you'll receive a random quantity of Draenor ore. While out mining in Draenor, you may even find a unique Battle Pet.

Almost every Profession in Warlords of Draenor uses ore in one way or another. This means that while Mining may sometimes seem tedious, it also has the potential to be really lucrative in terms of making gold.

SKINNING

Skinners are able to harvest the leather and hides from slain beasts. After you slay a beast and loot it (assuming it's a skinnable creature), your mouse cursor changes into an animal hide when you mouse over it. A Skinning Knife (or another item that acts as a Skinning Knife) is required for Skinning; however, you don't need to equip the item, just keep it in your backpack. To skin, right-click on a skinnable beast. You can also skin another player's looted corpses, but it's good form to ask permission first unless the other player leaves the area.

The leathers and hides are primarily used by Leatherworkers. Skinning is faster to advance than Herbalism or Mining, due to the prevalence of beasts in the game.

MAKING MONEY WITH SKINNING

Skinning isn't the best Profession to choose if you want to make money—skins and hides aren't high-ticket items. However, in Warlords of Draenor, the hides you get from skinning can be used to supplement a variety of different Professions, not just Leatherworking or Tailoring. If you choose Skinning as a Profession, expect to use the majority of your hides in conjunction with the other Profession you have learned. Sell any extra hides or leather you don't need, but don't expect to make a steady income from doing so—Skinning is largely a supplement to another chosen Profession, rather than a moneymaker.

Draenor Leather: Raw Beast Hide, Stitched Starglazed Leather, Burnished Leather.

DRAENOR SKINNING

Skinning in Warlords of Draenor has been improved so that you can skin any creature of any level, as long as you have the Skinning Profession. However, your skill level determines what kind of yield you get from skinning a creature. If your skill is a lower level, you'll mostly get scraps of materials, which can then be combined into complete pieces of leather or hides.

Skinning isn't the most exciting Gathering Profession you can choose, but it's arguably the easiest to level and gather materials with. While you might have to fight through creatures to reach an ore node or herb spawn, hides are simply gathered from creatures you were already fighting for quests.

SECONDARY
Archaeology

ARCHAEOLOGY

Archaeology is all about exploration and uncovering the past. There are two steps in the Archaeological process. First, you visit digsites and use Survey to locate and unearth artifact fragments of items from various cultures. After collecting enough pieces, you assemble them into a restored piece.

Unlike other gathering skills, digsites are player-specific. There is no competition for artifact fragments between players. Other players searching at the same digsite are uncovering their own fragments.

PRACTICING ARCHAEOLOGY

Open your world map and look for the small shovel icons that appear around the world. There should be up to four zones appropriate to your character's level per continent (Eastern Kingoms, Kalimdor, Draenor, Northrend, and Pandaria) that include active digsites. When you zoom into a zone with an active digsite, the area shaded red on the map provides the exact location for you to visit. There's an option in the upper-right corner of the map frame to toggle the red-shading at the dig sites.

When you reach the area, use the Survey ability to get directions to the exact location of the fragments. The survey instrument that appears indicates both the direction of, and distance to, the fragments. A red light means the fragments are far away; the yellow light indicates you are getting closer; and the green light means you are very close to the fragments. When you are close enough to the fragments, a container of some sort appears instead of your survey tools. Right-click on the item to collect the fragments. You don't carry these items around in your backpack. Instead, they're stored as currency.

DWARF BONUS

Dwarves have a racial ability, Explorer, which allows them to find additional fragments when looting archaeological finds and survey faster than other archaeologists.

Click on the appropriate Archaeology crest to watch your progress. After you collect enough fragments, click on the Solve button to create the listed item. The item goes into your backpack, you get a skill up, and you start on the next object. Any leftover fragments are applied to the new item, so you don't need to worry about wasted pieces.

Most of the items uncovered with Archaeology are not for combat purposes. There are a few special pieces here and there, but mostly this Profession leads to more peripheral elements, like fun pets, mounts, and Toys for your Toy Box.

ARAKKOA OUTCASTS

In Warlords of Draenor, the Arakkoa Outcasts work with Archaeology in much the same way that the Lorewalkers of Pandaria did. You can trade in excess fragments for crates of fragments from other, non-Draenor Archaeology types. Raising your reputation with the Arakkoa Outcasts will also unlock access to useful Archaeology items, like maps that randomize digsites, and even Lodestones that will teleport you to a randomly chosen active digsite.

LOOK UP!

Keep your eyes open in the Spires of Arak! Hidden around the zone are special treasure chests in hard-to-reach areas. Climb, jump, and sneak your way to these out of the way hidden caches and you'll be rewarded with additional Arakkoa Archaeology Fragments.

Archaeology rewards in Warlords of Draenor include unique Battle Pets and Bind on Account weapons and armor, as well as other fun items. Each completed solve also reveals interesting lore and history surrounding the orcs, ogres, and arakkoa of Draenor.

COOKING

Cooking turns various items (raw meat and fish, flour, and spider parts to name a few) into food that restores health and even conveys short-term buffs to various statistics. Cooking requires a heat source of some type, such as a stove or cooking fire. Fortunately, when you first train cooking, you also gain the ability to create a fire anywhere with Basic Campfire. You don't need any tools to create a Basic Campfire.

At higher levels, Cooking buffs go beyond Stamina improvements and start to provide bonuses to different stats. These are very nice, especially considering the low cost involved in creating them. Food isn't hard to gather, and it takes only a few moments to start a fire.

Any character benefits from Cooking. It's easiest to keep up with when you start as soon as possible and use the materials you get from looting enemies. If you are also working on Fishing, there are many recipes available that allow you to cook your catches.

PRACTICING COOKING

For easier access to the menus, you can put both Cooking and Basic Campfire abilities on an Action Bar. Clicking Cooking opens a menu of all the recipes you know. Clicking Basic Campfire creates a fire should you need a heat source. Some recipes call for special spices or other items, but these are available from Cooking vendors, and most Trade vendors.

MORE FUN WITH COOKING

There are daily quests available only to characters with Cooking. Visit Shattrath City in Outland, Dalaran in Northrend, or any of the Horde and Alliance cities to obtain these quests. Until you learn Pandaren Cooking, these daily quests reward Epicurean's Awards. When you become proficient in Pandaren Cooking, the quests found in your faction's cities award Ironpaw Tokens instead. There are Achievements tied to these daily quests as well as unique recipes, which can't be obtained in any other way.

On a final note, you can't go wrong learning Cooking if you plan on raiding or running heroic dungeons. Cooked meals provide a variety of statistical bonuses (although only one type of stat boost from cooking can be active at a time), and there are even feasts you can set out for anyone in your party to eat and reap their benefits. While not everyone needs to be a cook, someone needs to create and distribute the food to your group, and only you know what type of food buff is best for your character.

PANDAREN BONUSES

Pandaren have two racial abilities related to Cooking. Gourmand increases their Cooking skill by 15. Epicurean doubles the statistical benefit from food buffs.

DRAENOR COOKING

Cooking in Warlords of Draenor has been vastly streamlined for easier food production. Most basic food recipes in Draenor can be learned and created at skill level 1. However, the more proficient your skill level is the more servings of a recipe you can make per crafting. There are two tiers of food you can create, and two feasts you can create as well. All food recipes use meat, fish, and herbs commonly found all over Draenor. With your Garrison's Herb Garden, you should have no problem getting all the ingredients you need to dish up some Draenor cuisine!

Draenor food now only provides buff increases to Secondary Stats. The basic level of food recipes will provide +50 to a particular Secondary Stat. The only exception to this is Stamina. The Stamina buff for basic food is slightly higher. Basic recipes do not require herbs, simply meat or fish from around Draenor, and eggs that can be purchased from Traders in your Garrison for Garrison Resources.

The second tier of food you can create provides +75 buff to a particular Secondary Stat. Again, the only exception to this is Stamina food, which provides a slightly higher buff. This higher level food requires you to combine two basic food items along with Draenor herbs. Feasts are available for either 10 or 25 players, and are made with large amounts of meat, fish, and eggs.

Sometimes while cooking, you'll come up with a recipe idea that teaches you a new Draenor recipe. Similarly, you can occasionally learn a new recipe simply by tasting a dish you haven't learned the recipe for. In addition to the streamlined method of food production, Cooking also has its own Battle Pet, Lil' Leftovers.

First Aid

FIRST AID

First Aid enables you to create bandages which are used to restore health, and antidotes to remove poisons. Bandages are created from cloth drops in the game, and they can be used outside of combat or even while in the middle of it. Bandages can be used on yourself, other players, or pets. Characters that are damage dealers should use First Aid even more aggressively than most. In really big team fights, the tanks and healers get the most attention when it comes to healing. Damage dealers are last on the list, and if there isn't enough mana to go around they are the ones that come up short.

Being able to restore some health during these fights is a godsend. You shouldn't try to use a bandage when an enemy is in the middle of attacking you. This disrupts the process, ending your health restoration. Bandages have a cooldown period, so you can't continually apply them. Stun an enemy or otherwise get away from them for a few moments and use your First Aid.

PRACTICING FIRST AID ON DRAENOR

First Aid on Draenor now has multiple applications and uses. While you can still make bandages to heal yourself over time, you can now also craft Healing Tonics that act as health potions, for an instant heal. In addition, you can create oil and anti-venom that will not only cure a Disease or a Poison, but reduce the duration of newly applied Diseases or Poisons for a short duration of time. All new First Aid items now require you to gather fish. This includes the new Antiseptic Bandage, which uses both Sumptuous Fur and Sea Scorpion Segments to craft.

Fishing

FISHING

Fishing allows you to cast your line into any body of water deep enough. You can catch fish, of course, but you may also catch other marine life, junk, or treasure. Fish have many uses, and can be used to supplement a multitude of different Professions, but they are mainly used for food.

The types of fish available from a body of water are not determined by your Fishing skill. Instead, the types of fish are determined by the area. However, if your skill isn't considered high enough for the area, you only catch random trash items. There are also schools of fish in the waters around the world. These schools enable you to catch specific fish, if your casting is accurate. When you gain the ability to track fish, these schools of fish appear on your minimap making it easy to find them.

PRACTICING FISHING

You no longer need to purchase a Fishing Pole to begin Fishing; you automatically have a basic one when you learn the Fishing skill. Open your Professions tab to find the Fishing icon, and place it on one of your Action Bars for ease of access. Click on Fishing and your character will cast a line. A bobber appears on the water's surface; move your mouse cursor over the bobber until it turns into the fishhook icon. Keep a close eye on your bobber until it moves, and then quickly right-click the bobber. If successful, you receive a loot window that includes a fish or another item of some value.

Although you don't need a Fishing Pole to begin fishing, there are many unique Fishing Poles in the game that provide useful buffs to your Fishing skill, or even offer other buffs, like underwater breathing. You can also use a variety of baits, lures, and enchanted fishing lines to improve your odds of catching a fish.

DRAENOR FISHING

Fishing on Draenor is a little different than fishing on Azeroth. Draenor's fish come in several different sizes. The higher your Fishing skill, the larger the fish you can catch. When you catch a fish, you'll need to fillet it in order to use it for Cooking—to do so, simply right-click the fish. Along with providing materials for Cooking, Draenor fish are used in a variety of different crafting recipes. Your Garrison's Fishing Shack will allow you to catch Draenor fish from the comfort of your Garrison, without having to travel around the world. When you unlock and build the level 3 version of the Fishing Shack, you'll be able to go talk to Nat Pagle and persuade him to come to your Garrison and stay as a follower. He can then be assigned to the Fishing Shack, and he has all kinds of fun and valuable items and rewards that can be unlocked if you're a dedicated fisherman.

MORE FUN WITH FISHING

There are daily quests available only to characters with Fishing. Visit your faction's capital, Shattrath City in Outland, and Dalaran in Northrend to obtain these quests. There are Achievements tied to these daily quests as well as unique pets that can't be obtained in any other way.

There are also weekly fishing contests on two continents. The goblins of Booty Bay host one event, and the Kalu'ak of Northrend host another in the city of Dalaran. There are some great rewards for the players who manage to win these contests.

GARRISON BUILDINGS AND PROFESSIONS
Overview

GARRISON BUILDINGS AND PROFESSIONS

Professions in Warlords of Draenor are simultaneously more streamlined to learn and more accessible than ever before—and it's all because of Garrisons.

GATHERING MATERIALS

In addition to small buildings centered on Professions, your Garrison will also eventually unlock an Herb Garden and a Mine. Both of these structures will require you to complete a quest to unlock them, but once they are unlocked, you will be able to gather both Draenor herbs and Draenor ore, even if you do not have Herbalism or Mining as one of your Professions. Although the yield from these structures is nowhere near as prolific as going out in the world and gathering the materials with the appropriate Profession, this still means that you'll be able to remain reasonably self-sufficient when you are crafting goods.

BUILDINGS AND CRAFTING

Your Garrison can hold up to three small buildings, and many of these small buildings are directly related to Professions. If you have both a learned Profession and possess a building that specializes in that same Profession, that means you can craft and produce fun and valuable items fairly quickly. It also means that you have access to the highest, best possible tiers of crafting recipes.

However, you have a choice to make. If you wish, you can create small buildings that center on Professions that you have not learned. By doing so, you gain access to materials and items that you ordinarily would not be able to craft on your own—the workers in your Garrison will craft these items for you. This means that you won't need to rely on other crafters to create items for you while you are leveling; you can simply do so in your Garrison. But there's a catch—your Garrison workers cannot craft the highest, best possible items. Those are reserved solely for players that have trained that Profession and learned the appropriate recipes.

This might seem like a difficult decision to make, but keep in mind that your Garrison buildings are not static. You can change your mind and replace a building with another building at any point. It will cost you to do so, but this flexibility means that you can try out as many different Professions as you'd like. The choice is yours!

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Choosing a Class

Of all the character-creation decisions, your class choice has the greatest impact on the type of experience you have in World of Warcraft. There are eleven playable classes, but not all classes are available to every race. For your first character, you have ten class choices: Druid, Hunter, Mage, Monk, Paladin, Priest, Rogue, Shaman, Warrior, and Warlock.

DEATH KNIGHT

The eleventh class is a "hero" class: the Death Knight. This class is available only to players who already have a high-level character. You must wait to create a Death Knight until your first character reaches level 55. Any race, except Pandaren, can play as a Death Knight.

A QUICK LOOK AT CLASSES

Mage, Priest, Rogue, and Warrior are considered the four archetypal classes because they are classic role-playing and fantasy heroes from the myths and literature that permeate the cultures of World of Warcraft. Warriors and Rogues are primarily melee combat classes, while Mages and Priests prefer to stay at a safe distance in combat.

Druid, Monk, Paladin, and Shaman are the "hybrid" classes because they are versatile characters, equally comfortable fighting up close or using magic spells to harm enemies or heal allies.

Hunter and Warlock are the "pet" classes because both rely on a companion pet for a great deal of assistance. Hunters tame wild beasts, while Warlocks summon demonic creatures.

TIPS FOR CHOOSING YOUR CLASS

Experienced players can debate all day (and they do) about which classes are the easiest to play, hardest to play, strongest, weakest, over-powered, under-powered—you get the idea. As a new player, you should make a choice based on personal preference.

When contemplating classes, consider the role that appeals to you and keep the following things in mind:

- Hunters, Mages, Priests, and Warlocks fight best from a safe distance. You must learn how to control the range of the fight, because you're not built for melee combat. Keep enemies away from you, and you'll be successful.
- Monks, Paladins, Rogues, and Warriors fight up close and personal with their enemies. Melee combat is louder (with the combat noises like clanging weapons) and is generally more chaotic than what ranged classes experience.
- Druids and Shaman can fight at long range or in melee combat, and it's up to you to decide which way you prefer.

The next thing to consider is how you plan to play the game. The "how" in this case is "How many people will you be playing with?"

Going Solo

If you plan to play solo (which means you'll be playing the game alone for a majority of the time), any class is a viable choice. Because there are already a number of people who play the game alone, large portions of World of Warcraft are designed around people playing solo.

Playing In A Group

If you plan on playing with other people (even if it's just one other person), someone in the group should play a class with access to healing spells, but healing is just one of the roles your character can assume. To keep it simple, imagine that every character falls into one of three categories: tank, healer, and damage dealer.

Tank

Do you enjoy shielding people from harm? Tanks are a good choice for you. They are often the leader of groups, and people respect them when they get the job done. It's not the easiest choice, but it is rewarding. Protection Warriors, Protection Paladins, Brewmaster Monks, Guardian Druids, and Blood Death Knights may assume the role of tanks.

Healer

Is it okay if someone else does the killing while you support them? Healing may be the way for you. Healers are essential to great groups. They rarely get the glory of a tank, but they are needed, and wise players are quick to thank them for being there. Discipline and Holy Priests, Restoration Shamans, Mistweaver Monks, Holy Paladins, and Restoration Druids can fill this role.

Damage Dealer

Is self-reliance a big thing for you? Maybe you just want to slaughter when you get the chance, but groups are more of a "take it or leave it" thing. You're a damage dealer. About 60% of a given group is composed of damage dealers. Some now have backup healing (or backup tanking) potential, but their primary role is to dish out the damage. Any class can fill this role but Rogue, Mage, Warlock, and Hunter are notable choices because they are dedicated to this task.

Damage Dealers come in two varieties: melee and ranged.

Arms and Fury Warriors, all three Rogue specializations, Feral Druids, Windwalker Monks, Frost and Unholy Death Knights, Retribution Paladins, and Enhancement Shaman are all melee Damage Dealers.

The ranged Damage Dealer character options are all three specializations including Mages, Warlocks, Elemental Shaman, Balance Druids, and Shadow Priests. All three Hunter specializations are also ranged damage dealers, but they deal physical damage instead of the magic-based damage done by the previously listed classes.

RACIAL ABILITIES SUMMARY

The following is an overview of the bonuses for selecting a certain race. The designers of World of Warcraft worked hard to create balanced abilities. Consider the following bonuses as a minor factor in selecting your character's race.

ALLIANCE

Inner Peace	You earn twice as much mastel experience.
Quaking Palm	Strikes the target with lightning speed, incapacitating them for 4 seconds, and turns off your attack.

WHAT'S NEXT?

Use the following pages as an introduction to the 11 available classes. If you aren't sure which class is the one for you, try a few different classes. You may not know what you like until you try it!

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Death Knight

DEATH KNIGHT

OVERVIEW

Death Knights are a Hero class. You can't unlock these characters until you have one character reach level 55. Once there, you can create a Death Knight and have them start at level 55 themselves. There is a specific starting area just for these characters, and they have an awesome backstory that you get to experience.

Death Knights are forced to deal their damage at close range, but they wear plate and take hits well. Melee is their natural environment, and they even have abilities that pull enemies into their favored combat range. Death Knights also get combative pets, which aren't as powerful as Hunter or some Warlock pets, but they add flavor to playing as a Death Knight.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Runic Power

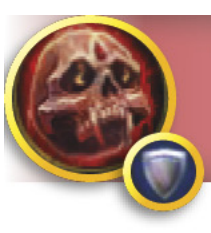

Death Knights have six total runes, from Blood, Frost, and Unholy. Use of these builds up Runic Power, a resource that is used for specific combat abilities.

Runeforging

Death Knights get to "enchant" their own weaponry. Runeforging allows a Death Knight to tailor weapons to specific situations with greater flexibility than what is available to other classes.

Specializations

At Level 55, Death Knights must choose one of the following specializations: Blood, Frost, or Unholy.

Blood Death Knights are tanks who focus on holding the attention of enemies in combat, and surviving the resulting damage.

Frost Death Knights combine damage from direct attacks and Frost-based spells. They are the only Death Knights capable of dual-wielding weapons.

Unholy Death Knights have better overall spellwork, improved damage over time, and have superior summonable pets. They even get a special Gargoyle every few minutes.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Druid

DRUID

OVERVIEW

Druids are the only class with four specializations. Druids can perform any group roles. They can fight in melee combat or use powerful spells from a safe distance. At level 6, Druids begin gaining the ability to change forms. Each form gives the Druid a different appearance and different abilities. Druids even learn how to fly under their own power (other classes need mounts to fly).

There is so much Druids can do and they have so many abilities, it's easy to become confused. However, don't be discouraged from trying out a Druid if you feel drawn to them, or if you have a background in other types of gaming and don't feel like you'll be in over your head. Remember that you do not need to perfect all four specializations at once and can progress by focusing on any single one of them.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Shapeshifting

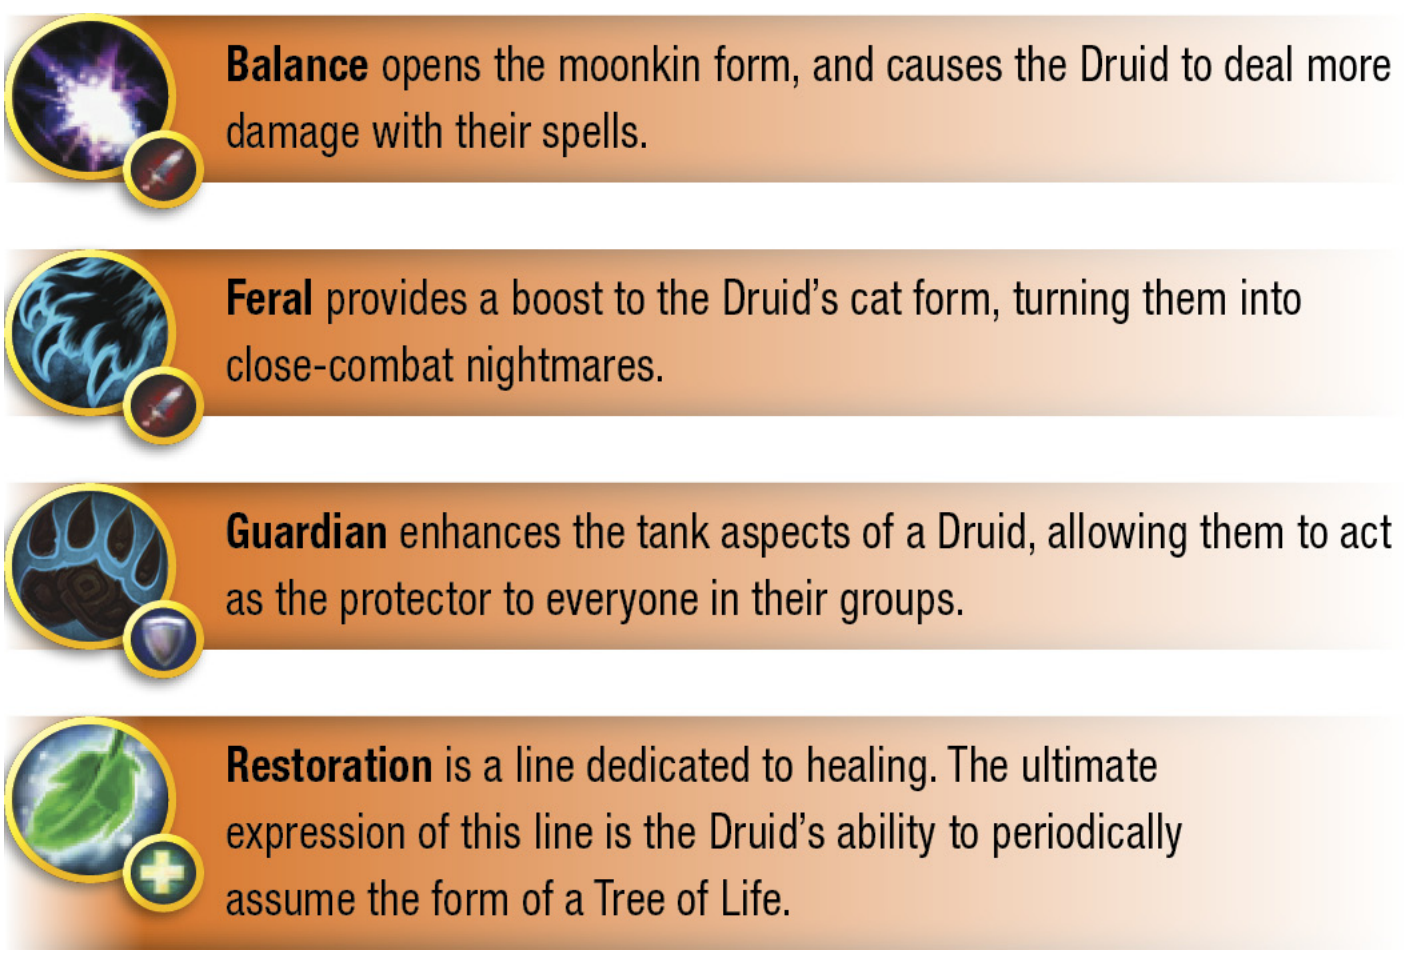

The versatility of Druids is highlighted by the many forms they can assume. Starting at level 6, where they get cat form, Druids end up with many potential choices, and each form is designed to enhance the Druid's abilities in a certain way: bear for durability, cat for inflicting damage, and moonkin for spell damage. Druids who want to heal stay in their base caster form, but can turn into the powerful Tree of Life with the Incarnation talent.

Travel Options

In addition to their combat forms, Druids learn special forms that boost their travel speed. They can assume a travel form that boosts their land speed, an aquatic form for increased swimming speed and underwather breathing, and a flight form that allows them to take to the sky.

Specializations

At level 10, Druids must decide to follow one of the following talent trees: Balance, Feral, Guardian, or Restoration.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Hunter

HUNTER

OVERVIEW

If you play a Hunter, you are never alone. Hunters have a pet as a constant companion. In essence, Hunters have a tank and a minor damage dealer at their beck and call, allowing them to attack from a safe range. Hunters can eventually tame a wide variety of pets, so you aren't forced to raise just one creature.

Hunters deal damage primarily with a bow or gun, but have other tricks at their disposal when it comes to dealing with enemies. You can even feign death to escape a difficult situation! For these reasons, many solo players choose the Hunter class.

PROMINNENT CLASS ABILITIES

Traps

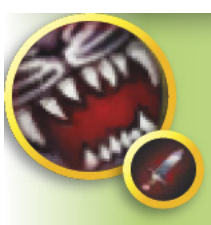

Hunters use traps on enemies during combat, and they have a variety of effects. For example, one trap damages any nearby enemies when it is set off. Hunters learn additional types of traps as they gain levels, and can even have multiple traps set at the same time.

Aspects

Hunters use animalistic characters in the form of Aspects to encourage one type of fighting or another. One Aspect improves a Hunter's endurance, others help the Hunter inflict damage. There are even ways to improve an entire group's running speed through the use of Aspects!

Specializations

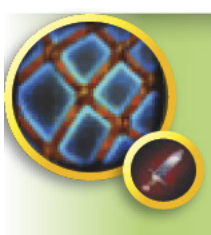

At level 10, Hunters must decide to follow one of the following specializations: Beast Mastery, Marksmanship, or Survival.

Beast Mastery puts at least half of the damage output of the Hunter/Pet team onto the pet. You get the strongest pets in the game by taking points in Beast Mastery. You also get the ability to tame Exotic Pets.

Marksmanship swings the damage pendulum back onto the Hunter. This is the line for massive ranged damage. However, Marksmanship is much harder to play than Beast Mastery. Your pet won't hold quite as much attention from monsters, so you need to know when to switch targets when necessary, and stay more mobile.

Survival Hunters are the trickiest Hunters to play. Think of things like this: Beast Masters encourage their pet to be the hero. Marksman have their pets as sidekicks. Survival Hunters try to strike an even balance with their pets. They work together, using the best strengths of each to get the most out of the class. Survivalists bring a number of tricks to a group, but it's a challenging Hunter specialization to master. Survival enhances traps and gives some of the best crowd control abilities among Hunters.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Mage

MAGE

OVERVIEW

Mages are known for dealing large doses of direct damage from a distance, while also being capable of damaging multiple enemies at once with their numerous AoE spells. Mages are not without their share of utility, however, which includes teleportation spells (for the Mage and group members), reliable crowd control and conjuring temporary items that replenish health and mana.

Depending on the situation and the talents chosen, Mages can be fragile but powerful wizards (often referred to as "glass cannons") or durable masters of snares and crowd control. Although all of a Mage's specializations are involved in dealing damage, they're vastly different in their purpose and the way they're played.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Out Of Combat Utility

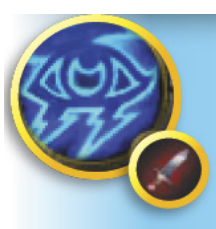

Mages are excellent damage dealers, but they have an impressive list of abilities that are a huge help at other times. They gain the ability to conjure food and water to sustain adventuring parties. Mages can learn to teleport themselves to various cities available to their faction. At higher levels, they learn how to create portals that allow anyone grouped with them to travel instantly to those same cities. Note that any damage caused to the caster will interrupt Teleport or Portal spells, so make sure to check for enemies before attempting to use these slow-casting spells.

Crowd Control

Polymorph is the main source of Mage crowd control. Mages can turn humanoid or beast targets into sheep (although there are objects around the world that let you pick other forms, such as pigs and penguins) and render them unable to act for some time, as long as the target doesn't take any damage. If you're in a party, it's a good idea to tell your party members if you plan to Polymorph a target; that way, they can avoid hitting it and breaking your Polymorph early.

Specializations

At level 10, Mages must decide on one of the following specializations: Arcane, Fire, or Frost.

Arcane is a good "middle of the road" specialization for Mages. They enjoy a fair number of instant spells, damage avoidance, and disabling target opportunities. They represent the balance between the damage heavy Fire Mages and the control heavy Frost Mages and present well-rounded abilities for group or solo play.

Fire is the most predictable Mage specialization, but that doesn't stop them from inflicting frightening amounts of damage. They have a more organized method of attack, and their sustained damage is excellent in groups. However, they aren't great at getting out of trouble.

Frost Mages are wonderful allies or vile pests, depending on your perspective. This specialization offers a greater number of escape options than other Mages, making them hard to kill. They don't deal as much damage as Fire Mages and may lack some of the utility of Arcane Mages, but there has to be a trade-off somewhere, right?

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Monk

MONK

OVERVIEW

Monk is a hybrid class able to assume any group role. Monks use Chi as the primary resource for performing many of their special abilities. Monks use leather armor and are equally adept with a variety of one-hand and two-hand weapons.

As with any hybrid, Monks come with so many tricks that they may not be an ideal choice for new players. However, once you're more familiar with the game, playing as a Monk can be incredibly fun and rewarding.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Stances

Depending on their specialization, Monks can adopt one of three animal-based Stances, granting them significant boosts to their abilities. There is one Stance designed for each party role (tank-ox, healer-serpent, damage dealer-tiger) Monks can assume.

Chi

Chi is a resource exclusive to Monks. Along with energy or mana, it's used as a resource to execute most of the Monk's staple abilities. Chi is generated by using certain abilities and can be then used to perform more powerful moves.

Specializations

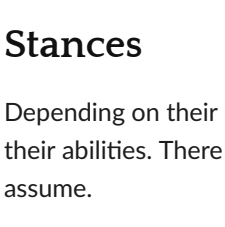

At level 10, Monks must choose one of the following specializations: Brewmaster, Mistweaver, or Windwalker.

Brewmaster Monks specialize in deflecting damage and protecting their allies. They rely on damage redirection and self-healing. Their signature battle pose, Stance of the Sturdy Ox, increases health and reduces damage taken.

Mistweaver Monks are healers first and foremost, but retain the ability to engage enemies at melee range and dish some damage while still providing health replenishment to their allies.

Windwalker Monks are melee damage dealers. As their name suggests, Windwalkers are mobile and versatile, having access to limited healing and tanking abilities common to all Monks.

PALADIN

Paladins are the holy warriors of the Alliance and Horde. Their powers are a mixture of offensive, defensive, and healing abilities. Paladins are the only class that can wear plate armor and use shields in addition to their weapons. Paladins are also the only class that can resurrect allies in combat.

Paladins in Wrath of the Lotk Lich King have access to Dual Talent Specialization, allowing them to switch between Holy, Protection, and Retribution specs.

CLASS ABILITIES AND RESOURCES

HOLY POWER

Holy Power is a resource that builds with the Seal abilities of the Retribution tree. The Seal of Vengeance, Seal of Corruption, and Seal of Command abilities all generate Holy Power. Holy Power is also generated by Holy Shock and Crusader Strike.

Paladins can accumulate up to three Holy Power. Holy Power is consumed by Templar's Verdict, Holy Wrath, Hammer of Wrath, Exorcism, Holy Shock, and Divine Storm.

SEALS

Seals are buffs that are applied to the Paladin and enhance the Paladin's melee attacks with their effects. Only one Seal can be active at a time.

Seal	Effect
Seal of Command	Your melee attacks have a chance to deal additional Holy damage. Generates Holy Power.
Seal of Corruption	Your melee attacks have a chance to deal additional Holy damage. Generates Holy Power.
Seal of Vengeance	Your melee attacks have a chance to deal additional Holy damage. Generates Holy Power.
Seal of Wisdom	Your melee attacks have a chance to restore mana.
Seal of Light	Your melee attacks have a chance to restore health.
Seal of Righteousness	Your melee attacks have a chance to deal additional Holy damage.
Seal of Justice	Your melee attacks have a chance to stun the target.

DIVINE SHIELD

Divine Shield becomes active when the Paladin activates Avenging Wrath or Divine Shield. While active, the Paladin is immune to all damage and harmful effects. Other actions can be performed normally. Using Divine Shield will cause the Paladin to be unable to recover from Forbearance for 30 sec.

DIVINE SHIELD

Divine Shield becomes active when the Paladin activates Avenging Wrath or Divine Shield. While active, the Paladin is immune to all damage and harmful effects. Other actions can be performed normally. Using Divine Shield will cause the Paladin to be unable to recover from Forbearance for 30 sec.

Key Combination Abilities

Ability	Description
Crusader Strike	Instantly attacks with a melee weapon and causes 110% weapon damage. Generates 1 Holy Power.

Greater Blessing of Kings	Increases total stats by 10%.
Greater Blessing of Might	Increases melee attack power by 220.
Greater Blessing of Wisdom	Restores 31 mana every 5 sec.
Greater Blessing of Sanctuary	Reduces damage taken by 3%, blocks 3% of damage, and increases Block value by 30.
Righteous Fury	Increases threat caused by 32%.
Devotion Aura	Increases armor of party members by 165.
Retribution Aura	Causes Holy damage to attackers.
Concentration Aura	Reduces the chance for party members to be interrupted while casting by 35%.
Shadow Resistance Aura	Increases Shadow resistance of party members by 70.
Frost Resistance Aura	Increases Frost resistance of party members by 70.
Fire Resistance Aura	Increases Fire resistance of party members by 70.
Crusader Aura	Increases mounted movement speed by 20%.
Sanctity Aura	Increases Holy damage done by party members by 10%.

Talents

Talent	Description
Improved Judgements	Reduces the cooldown of Judgement by 2 sec.
Heart of the Crusader	Increases the critical strike chance of Judgement, Crusader Strike, and Holy Shock by 3%.
Improved Blessing of Might	Increases the effect of Blessing of Might by 4%.
Benediction	Reduces the mana cost of Judgement by 3%.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Priest

PRIEST

OVERVIEW

While traditionally viewed as a healing class, Priests are capable of inflicting damage as well. Wearing only cloth armor, Priests are vulnerable to melee attacks at early levels so you must learn to keep enemies at a safe distance, kill them quickly, or keep them occupied.

Priests are highly sought after in group situations. Though you carry a substantial burden (that of keeping the group alive), it's possible to learn the dynamic quickly, especially if you're motivated to be a good healer. It's more challenging to play a Priest solo, but it's far from an impossible task. Priests have every tool they need to kill monsters on their own.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Healing Spells

Priests are in demand for groups because they have a variety of healing spells that work in different ways, but share the same function: keep allies alive. Power Word: Fortitude increases the overall health of allies; Lesser Heal and Heal restore health immediately; Renew restores health to a target over time. You even learn how to encase yourself or an ally in a bubble which absorbs incoming damage!

Shadowform

For the Priests who prefer to specialize in dealing damage rather than restoring health, there is Shadowform. Shadowform literally turns the Priest into a translucent shadow. In Shadowform, Priests deal increased Shadow damage and take a reduced amount of damage. If you enjoy playing a Priest and want to play solo, Shadowform is the way to go.

Specializations

At level 10, Priests must decide on one of the following specializations: Discipline, Holy, or Shadow.

Discipline Priests balance their healing and spellcasting. This isn't a damage-dealing line, but it provides a number of effects that mitigate damage, protect Priests and their allies, or aid in casting (whether for damage or healing).

Holy Priests are the healers' healers. Their goal is to heal well under almost any circumstance. They have almost no offensive strength, but that's the not goal for Holy Priests. Holy Priests are so dedicated to healing, they eventually learn how to continue healing after being killed!

Shadow Priests violently diverge from the other two Priest trees. Ideal for soloing, Shadow Priests get to have fun tormenting enemies before killing them. Many of the abilities of Shadow Priests funnel a fraction of the health removed from enemies to restore the health of their allies, and Vampiric Touch does the same for mana.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Rogue

OVERVIEW

Sneaky and sticky-fingered, Rogues are the dirtiest melee fighters around. Rogues use a variety of Stuns and Poisons and can even Blind enemies. Stealth and Distract help Rogues move through areas almost invisibly, and they can pick up some extra money from enemies by picking their pockets.

If high risk and high reward intrigue you, this is a class that's worth your time and attention. Rogues strike quickly while using weapons in both hands and can often kill anything before it knows what has happened. A Rogue caught flat footed often dies quickly, but with all the tricks at their disposal, even wounded Rogues are difficult to finish off before they vanish into thin air.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Stealth

Stealth is a defining feature of the Rogue class from the earliest period of your leveling. Stealth allows Rogues to move about the world without being seen as easily. Stay behind monsters that are slightly higher level to avoid detection.

Combo Points

Many Rogue abilities build combo points, allowing them to set up even nastier attacks. All abilities that consume combo points are more effective as the number of combo points increases. This makes Rogues especially good at finding single targets and slicing them to ribbons. It's harder, but not impossible, for Rogues to take on several enemies at once with equal finesse.

Specializations

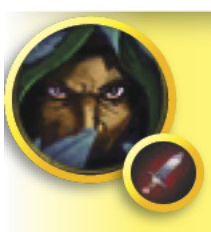

At level 10, Rogues must decide on one of the following specializations: Assassination, Combat, or Subtlety.

Assassination Rogues are the royalty of burst damage. They focus on smaller weaponry, poisons, and sudden attacks. For the biggest sudden numbers, look here! Assassination Rogues get combo points quickly, and they spend them on pure damage.

Combat Rogues are more direct. They often use heavier weapons and take the fight to enemies directly. They stand toe to toe with the target, wailing away with an emphasis on outdamaging the enemy. "You die first" is their way of thinking. If you want to have a direct combat character and don't mind light armor, Combat Rogues are a pile of fun.

Subtlety Rogues are, indeed, the most subtle of the bunch. They rely on more frequent use of special abilities, cooldown improvements, and damage over time abilities. It takes longer to master this talent line compared with the alternatives, but it's always been a rewarding choice for a thinking person's Rogue.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Shaman

SHAMAN

OVERVIEW

Shamans are masters of Nature and Elemental magic. They are a hybrid class that can fill multiple roles with vastly different playstyles. They can heal, deal damage with spells, or fight in close quarters.

Shamans draw their strength from the four natural elements (Air, Earth, Fire, Water). This is reflected in the totems they use to help battle enemies, and the different weapon imbues they use to enhance their weapons.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Totems

Totems summon the power of the elements (Earth, Fire, Water, and Air) for a variety of effects. Totems are temporary creations, and they can be targeted and destroyed by attacks. There are totems that blast nearby enemies with fire. Others are more defensive in nature, or restore your health and mana. Shaman can use one totem from each element simultaneously.

Shocks

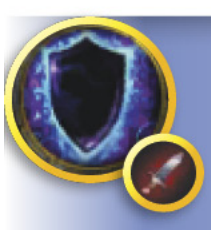

Shocks are a type of spell that a Shaman can use instantly. These spells typically damage your target, and also have a variety of effects including damage over time, or reducing a target's movement speed.

Specializations

At level 10, Shamans must decide on one of the following specializations: Elemental, Enhancement, or Restoration.

Elemental Shamans use shocks and other spells to take down enemies. They deal damage while standing at a safe distance from melee combat. Elemental Shamans have a few tricks to push away enemies who draw too close, while the Mail armor they wear allows them to stand up to punishment better than most other spell-casting damage dealers.

Enhancement Shamans thrive in the midst of battle, dealing damage to enemies with a weapon in each hand and a host of spells at their command. Where most classes focus on using either weapons or spells to deal damage, Enhancement Shamans use a balanced mix of spells and weapons in combat.

Restoration Shamans offer support to the groups they join with healing spells that keep allies alive and fighting. Restoration Shamans are not designed to inflict damage, but their totems can still boost the abilities of others, making the overall group a more effective fighting force.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Warlock

WARLOCK

OVERVIEW

Warlock is the class for anyone who wants to play something sinister. You get to curse people, summon demons, and generally have a malevolent look. Warlocks are ranged casters that employ a combative pet to supplement their already impressive damage total. Though Warlock pets aren't as powerful as Hunter pets, these demonic allies offer a bit more versatility.

Warlocks are masters of inflicting damage over time. When pushed, these casters are able to sacrifice their health to bring even more damage to an engagement. Warlocks scare their healers as much as they do their actual enemies. It's not uncommon to see a Warlock's health dwindle even when nothing is attacking them. You get used to it!

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Demonic Pets

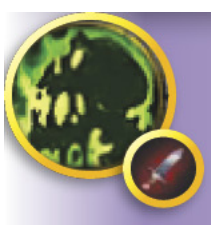

Each Warlock pet is quite different. Imps supplement ranged damage and make the caster harder to kill. Voidwalkers act as a tank. Succubi bring more damage to the table. Felhunters are keen anti-casters. The only downside to these pets is that you can only summon one at a time.

Dealing Damage Over Time

A Warlock's spell arsenal liberally uses damage over time (DoT) spells. These spells don't deal damage all at once. Instead, they place a debuff on an enemy target, slowly chipping away at their health. Don't be fooled by the relatively small numbers, however[md]DoT spells are among the most powerful damage dealing abilities in the game!

Specializations

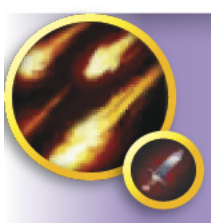

At level 10, Warlocks must decide on one of the following specializations: Affliction, Demonology, or Destruction.

Affliction Warlocks are the damage over time specialists. They lay down damage over time spells faster than other Warlock varieties, and they're good at moving from target to target to maximize their ability to keep damage flowing.

Demonology Warlocks are the toughest of the bunch. They're quite hard to kill, and sometimes they even end up tanking specific events. They gain improved pets, more survivability, and can occasionally transform themselves into a Demon (it's as awesome as it sounds).

Destruction Warlocks are the more traditional casters of the three. They improve Shadowbolts and fire spells from the Warlock's repertoire, hitting big-damage numbers and felling single targets quite well.

CHARACTER CLASS INTRODUCTION
Warrior

OVERVIEW

Warriors are the masters of melee combat as either versatile combatants or stalwart defenders who protect groups. As masters of arms, they can use nearly every weapon, and don the heaviest armor.

When you are playing a Warrior, you must be flexible and know which abilities are best suited to any situation. Carefully plan how best to spend your Rage (your primary resource), so that in the heat of battle you can fuel your abilities and devastate your foes with a staggering combination of strikes.

PROMINENT CLASS ABILITIES

Stances

Warriors learn two stances: Battle Stance, and Defensive Stance. All Warriors begin with Battle Stance generating high Rage from normal attacks. Defensive Stance reduces a Warrior's Rage generation when compared to the other stances, but it also reduces the amount of damage taken.

Shouts

Warrior can use various Shouts to inspire groups, or demoralize enemies. There are several shouts; some are available only as talents, and some available only to certain specializations, but every Warrior has a few to choose from. Commanding Shout and Battle Shout are used to provide benefits for your party or raid. The remaining shouts can cause an enemy to flee, reduce the damage enemies can inflict, do AoE damage, and snare or root enemies within the Warrior's shout radius.

Specializations

At level 10, Warriors must decide on one of the following specializations: Arms, Fury, or Protection.

Arms Warriors use a two-handed weapon to deal strong burst damage.

Fury Warriors equip weapons in both hands, including the option of using a two-handed in one hand! Few sights instill as much fear as a plate-clad Warrior brandishing two giant weapons.

Protection Warriors are tanks. They have options for stunning and provoking enemies, but most of all they excel at staying alive. They gain abilities that extend their lives during tricky battles and allow them to reduce the damage they take.

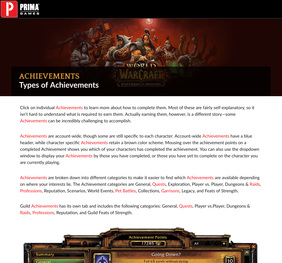

ACHIEVEMENTS
Introduction

Achievements are a different way to show what you've accomplished in World of Warcraft. To see a full list of Achievements, click on the icon in the interface bar to open the Achievements panel. The panel lists hundreds of in-game Achievements for doing just about anything you can imagine in the game.

While Achievements won't lead to improved weapons or armor, they do provide special titles, companion pets, and mounts. Sometimes you receive a reward for getting a certain Achievement, while others require you to unlock a set of Achievements that take an entire year to earn! Achievements are in the game purely for fun. You can't use your Achievement points as currency for anything in game—but you can show them off to your friends!

ACHIEVEMENTS
Types of Achievements

Click on individual Achievements to learn more about how to complete them. Most of these are fairly self-explanatory, so it isn't hard to understand what is required to earn them. Actually earning them, however, is a different story—some Achievements can be incredibly challenging to accomplish.

Achievements are account-wide, though some are still specific to each character. Account-wide Achievements have a blue header, while character specific Achievements retain a brown color scheme. Mousing over the achievement points on a completed Achievement shows you which of your characters has completed the achievement. You can also use the dropdown window to display your Achievements by those you have completed, or those you have yet to complete on the character you are currently playing.

Achievements are broken down into different categories to make it easier to find which Achievements are available depending on where your interests lie. The Achievement categories are General, Quests, Exploration, Player vs. Player, Dungeons & Raids, Professions, Reputation, Scenarios, World Events, Pet Battles, Collections, Garrisons, Legacy, and Feats of Strength.

Guild Achievements has its own tab and includes the following categories: General, Quests, Player vs.Player, Dungeons & Raids, Professions, Reputation, and Guild Feats of Strength.

GENERAL

Some Achievements don't fall easily into other categories, so General is a catch-all category. Most of these achievements directly involve things like item level, how many classes you've leveled, what kinds of food you've eaten, and how much gold you've looted. There's even a series of Achievements for hunting down critters and showing them how much you love them!

QUESTS

There are two Achievements that award extras in the Quest category. After completing enough quests, you earn the title "The Seeker." Once the Loremaster Achievement is earned, you get the title "Loremaster" and a bonus tabard. Many new quest Achievements have been added for Draenor. Some require you to simply complete quests in the new Draenor zones; others require you to complete all bonus objectives in a given zone; and still others require you to perform particular actions while you're out in the world doing quests.

EXPLORATION

Almost every Exploration Achievement is tied to uncovering hidden nooks and discovering the out-of-the-way places and hidden treasures found in every zone. The type of Exploration Achievement is tied to finding and killing rare enemies in Outland, Northrend, Pandaria, and Draenor. Exploring the known world provides you with the title "Explorer," while Brann Bronzebeard awards the characters who explore all of Northrend with a special tabard.

PLAYER VS. PLAYER

Player vs. Player Achievements are linked to battlegrounds and arenas. Many of these Achievements call for meeting incredibly specific conditions in a single battleground, or for long-term accomplishments such as being on the winning side in a battleground 100 times! Most of the rewards for Player vs. Player Achievements are titles. Draenor has added many new Achievements for Ashran, the new world PvP zone off the coast of Tanaan Jungle.

DUNGEONS & RAIDS

Many Dungeons & Raids Achievements are given for defeating the bosses which appear in the world dungeons and raids of World of Warcraft. When you start running heroic versions of dungeons, there are additional Achievements tied to completing specific tasks while facing the bosses in the dungeons. There are even more Achievements tied to defeating raid bosses on different levels of difficulty, or performing certain tasks while in a raid group. Typically, rewards are rewarded for completing all of these additional tasks for both heroic dungeons and raids as well. The rewards for Achievements in Dungeons & Raids include titles, mounts, and cosmetic armor.

PROFESSIONS

Profession Achievements are centered on secondary professions (Archaeology, Cooking, First Aid, and Fishing) since each character is limited to only two primary professions. The change to account-wide Achievements has opened the door to a few new Profession Achievements, but they're tied to reaching the maximum skill level in each profession. Some of those Achievements reward unique titles and items. In Warlords of Draenor, completing some of these Profession Achievements will unlock Level 3 Blueprints for your Garrison.

REPUTATION

Improving your Reputation with the many factions found in World of Warcraft has become an increasingly important facet of the game to every type of player, and for many reasons. Many factions are the source of improved equipment, mounts, and companion pets. The Achievements tied to these factions are mostly centered on reputation levels, but the Achievement for earning Exalted reputation with at least three Draenor reputations is the Level 3 Garrison Blueprint for the Trading Post.

SCENARIOS

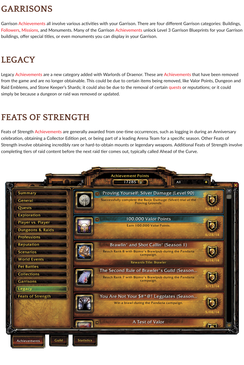

Scenario Achievements are similar to the ones found in Dungeons & Raids. Many of them are tied to simply completing each Scenario, but others call for meeting specific conditions while completing an encounter. The Scenarios tab also includes Achievements associated with the Proving Grounds.

WORLD EVENTS

World Events Achievements include Achievements earned during special days (typically marked on the in-game calendar) that include holidays and celebrations. There are Achievements tied to each date, and these Achievements take on many forms. While many are tied to completing quest lines, some holiday Achievements require trips to dungeons to face bosses that appear only during the holiday or visiting battlegrounds.

The other types of World Event Achievements are earned while completing tasks in certain areas of the world, like the Argent Tournament and the Brawler's Guild. While neither of these are typical World Events marked on a calendar, they include several Achievements for completing specific tasks and challenges.

There are many titles to earn from World Event Achievements, but if you complete the Achievement "What A Long, Strange Trip It's Been" you earn a Violet Proto-Drake mount.

PET BATTLES

Pet Battles Achievements are earned by collecting pets, using them in battles, and improving your pets to the maximum level. The rewards from this category of Achievement include titles and even more pets to add to your collection. Completing 1000 pet battles in Draenor unlocks the Level 3 Garrison Blueprint for the Pet Menagerie.

COLLECTIONS

The Collections tab is new with Warlords of Draenor, and it includes Achievements that involve collecting things like tabards, bags, rare items, mounts, and toys. Several mount collecting Achievements reward an additional mount.

GARRISONS

Garrison Achievements all involve various activities with your Garrison. There are four different Garrison categories: Buildings, Followers, Missions, and Monuments. Many of the Garrison Achievements unlock Level 3 Garrison Blueprints for your Garrison buildings, offer special titles, or even monuments you can display in your Garrison.

LEGACY

Legacy Achievements are a new category added with Warlords of Draenor. These are Achievements that have been removed from the game and are no longer obtainable. This could be due to certain items being removed, like Valor Points, Dungeon and Raid Emblems, and Stone Keeper's Shards. It could also be due to the removal of certain quests or reputations; or it could simply be because a dungeon or raid was removed or updated.

GUILD

Guild Achievements can be unlocked only while you are in a guild, and most of these Achievements require groups with a majority of characters from the same guild to work together in various ways. Many of these Achievements mirror those found in other categories (mainly Dungeons & Raids and Player vs. Player), so you should earn an individual Achievement at the same time as the Guild Achievement. Some Guild Achievements unlock special rewards that can be purchased from any Guild Vendor, like pets, mounts, recipes, and even cosmetic items like Guild shirts.

RARE CREATURES ABOUND
Introduction

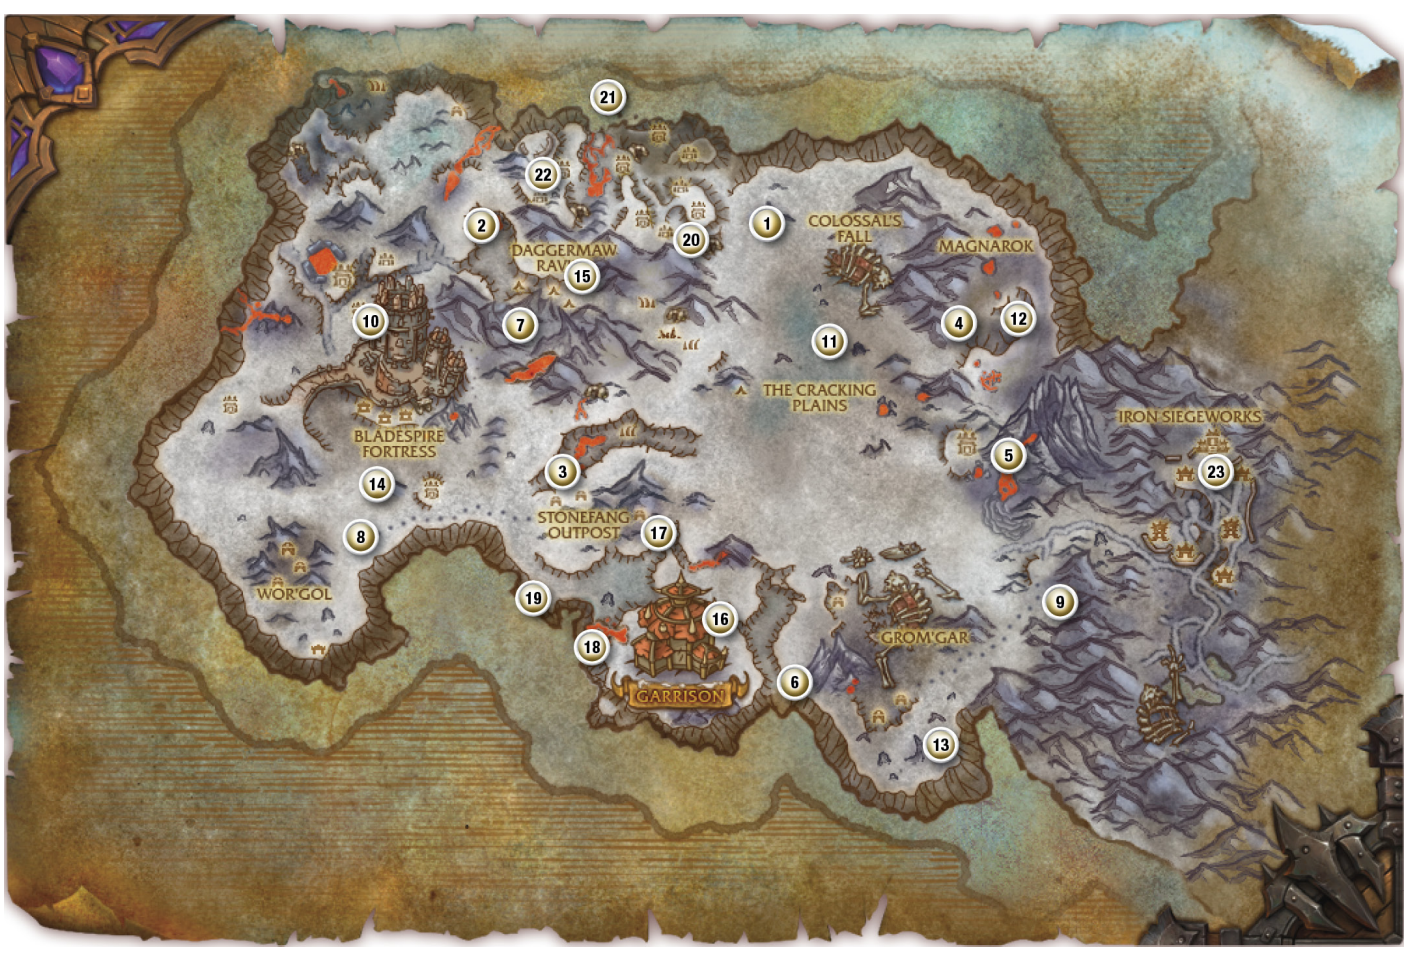

A variety of different creatures have made their home in the savage lands of Draenor. In every zone, rare creatures hold special weapons, armor, and fun items for your character. These creatures are typically indicated by the silver border around their character portrait. Rare creatures are usually much more difficult to defeat, and often have special attacks or abilities that you'll need to counter in order to successfully do so.

Some rare spawns are hidden away out of sight, or require some sort of action to be taken in order to spawn the creature. You can always tell where a rare spawn is located by the icon on your minimap—how to get to the creature, however, is up to you to discover.

These rare creatures have amazing loot for the taking, but you may only loot their special treasures once. After you have successfully defeated one of these rare enemies, their character portrait will no longer have a silver border—this way, you know which creatures you have already defeated, and which still pose a challenge worth taking on.
